THE AUTUMN EXHIBITIONS

INDIANAPOLIS.

The last week was a feast of flowers and fine weather, with the State Association giving its annual show at A. Wiegand & Son's conservatories and with the openings at the establishments of Bertermann Bros. Co. and H. W. Rieman. Flower lovers had the time of their lives, and all for nothing, and the weather was on its best behavior to help make all a success. During the two days of the State Florists' show over 6,000 people passed through the buildings, which were tastefully decorated and well illuminated. An orchestra was on hand and added to the enjoyment of the throngs. The exhibits were of high quality, and the awards were as follows:

Twenty-five blooms, any one variety, E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, first; P. O. Tauer, Lebanon, Ind., second; Baur & Smith, third.

Ten blooms, white, E. G. Hill Co., first.

Ten blooms, pink, W. A. Bitler, Kokomo, Ind., first; E. G. Hill Co., second.

Ten blooms, yellow, E. G. Hill Co., first; W. A. Bitler, second.

Ten blooms, any other color, E. G. Hill Co., first; Baur & Smith, second.

Twenty-five sprays pompons, E. G. Hill Co., first; Baur & Smith, second.

Twelve Bride roses, Heller Bros., New Castle, Ind., first; Weiland & Olinger, New Castle, second.

Twelve Bridesmaid, Heller Bros., first; Weiland & Olinger, second.

Twelve American Beauty, Weiland & Olinger, first.

Twelve any variety not named in list, Heller Bros., first; Weiland & Olinger, second.

Twenty-five white carnations, B., K. & B. Floral Co., Richmond, first; Baur & Smith, second.

Twenty-five light pink carnations, B., K. & B. Floral Co., first; Baur & Smith, second.

Twenty-five dark pink carnations, R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, first; Stuart & Haugh, Anderson, Ind., second.

Twenty-five scarlet carnations, B., K. & B. Floral Co., first; E. G. Hill Co., second.

Twenty-five any other color carnations, Stuart & Haugh, second.

One hundred double violets, Smith & Young Co., first; A. Wiegand & Son, second.

One hundred single violets, A. Wiegand & Son.

Three Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, first; A. Wiegand & Son, second.

Three cyclamens, A. Wiegand & Son.

A certificate of merit was awarded to the E. G. Hill Co. for its new rose, Rhea Reid.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., staged a fine lot of blooms, not for competition.

The new rose, Wm. R. Smith, exhibited by Heller Bros., attracted much attention. From all appearances it is a fine rose and will be in great demand. Another great attraction was a pink rose shown by the E. G. Hill Co. The color is a beautiful shade of bright pink. It should fill a long-felt want.

Among the out-of-town members attending the show the following were noted: Charles Knopf, George Gause and H. W. Sheppard, Richmond; Paul Tauer, Lebanon; W. A. Bitler, Kokomo; H. Heller, New Castle; George Moore, Rushville; A. B. Hyatt, Anderson, and A. I. Pett, Crawfordsville. The visitors from out of town were L. J. Reuter, Westerly, R. I.; W. F. Gude and A. Gude, Washington, D. C.; S. A. Baur, Los Angeles, Cal. S.

held November 13 and 14. Among the especially commendable features were the begonias shown by F. C. Smith. Hall & Robinson showed some splendid carnations and their basket of Richmond roses and valley was excellent. They also showed some fine orchids. The chrysanthemum cut blooms were not as good as in former years, but the single chrysanthemums attracted much favorable attention.

The principal exhibitors and prize-winners for plants were: A. Pinoteau, of the city parks; W. G. Pascoe, gardener for R. Reford; J. S. Eddy, gardener for A. H. Sims; J. Pidduck, gardener at Mount Royal park; F. C. Smith, gardener for Sir William Van Horn; C. A. Smith, gardener for T. A. Dawes, and Hall & Robinson and Wilshire Bros.

The cut chrysanthemums were largely from the same exhibitors, with the addition of Thomas Pewtress, gardener to H. A. Allenger, and E. J. Haywood, gardener to John Berkey. Hall & Robinson were the principal exhibitors of carnations and roses and divided the premiums on made-up floral work with Wilshire Bros. P. McKenna & Son had a trade exhibit of begonias.

The judges of cut flowers were Mr. Smith and J. Bennett, and Mr. Pewtress and Mr. Hayward for the plants.

DRACAENA MANDAIANA.

Dracæna Mandaiana, which had its first introduction to the trade at large at the Philadelphia convention of the Society of American Florists, was awarded the Shaw gold medal at St. Louis last week for the best new plant of American origin. It is a cross of Dracæna terminalis and D. Youngii and W. A. Manda, with whom it originated, at South Orange, N. J., says that he considers it the finest of all the red hybrid dracænas. The accompanying illustration gives a good idea of the plant, the larger picture being from a photograph of the house of this variety now to be seen at South Orange. The plants grow from two to four feet high and keep well their broad claret red foliage, which is of extra good substance, showing the veins plainly. The characteristic color is shown on plants all the way from the cutting stage to mature specimens, and the color is heightened in the third to the fifth middle leaves. The plant is of easy growth and even snails, the terror of dracænas, do not molest it. The flowers and rich scarlet fruits are also showy. Mr. Manda considers it an ideal Christmas plant and one that is sure to be grown in large quantities.

ST. LOUIS.

First Fall Flower Show.

The first fall flower show given by the St. Louis Horticultural Society was held November 12 to 14 in the new hall of the United Railways at Grand and Park avenues. The hall is 100x100 and proved a magnificent place in which to hold such a show. There was a grand display of plants, cut roses, carnations and chrysanthemums. In the special designs Fred H. Weber's automobile was a great attraction; also the grotto, made up of plants, birds and gold fish, with colored electric effects, by the St. Louis Seed Co., came in for admiration. Fred C. Weber's display in this class was a tastefully arranged one, with Golden Wedding chrysanthemums, violets and asparagus.

The attendance for the first day was not as good as expected, though select, but it increased during the remainder of the week, through liberal notices in the daily papers.

The judges were Philip J. Hauswirth, W. W. Coles and Andrew Meyer, Sr.

The awards were as follows:

Forty-eight chrysanthemum blooms, eight varieties, six blooms in each vase. First, E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., with T. Eaton, A. J. Balfour, Col. WASHINGTON.

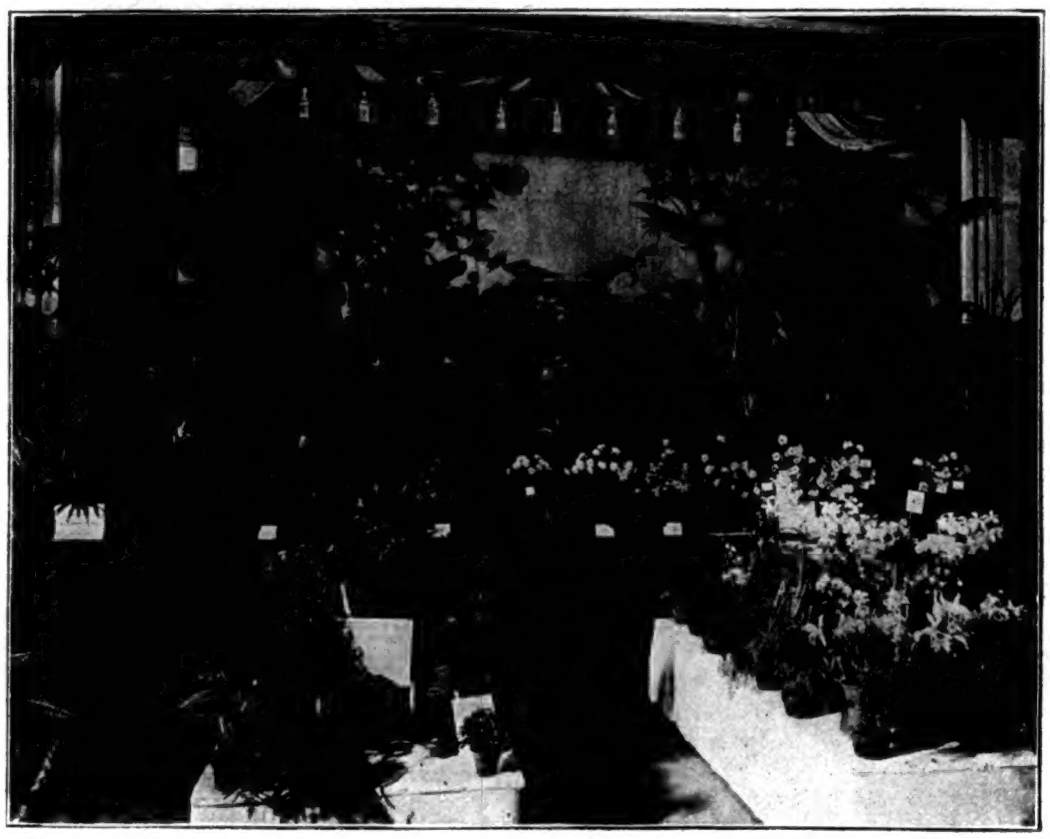
Annual Flower Show.



Last week's show was a surprise to the visiting florists. Every firm, with one or two exceptions, had some sort of an exhibit on the first floor. Z. D. Blackistone had a table done in pompon mums and a mantel with Farleyense and Richmond roses; a bridal bouquet of valley and bouvardia and shower of valley. G. C. Shaffer had a table of Killarney and valley, the mantel of orchids and valley. He exhibited a bride's bouquet of valley and orchids, with valley shower, and a bridesmaid's bouquet of Killarney roses. George Cooke exhibited a table with an umbrella, and base of Farleyense fern and yellow pompon mums. The umbrella was also made of pompon mums. He also had a mantel of yellow pompons, Farleyense and Bonnaffon mums. On this floor, S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia, showed a vase of fifty Beauties and a vase of pompon mums. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, exhibited some Farleyense ferns and Lorraine begonias. The Botanical Gardens exhibited a group and table on the second floor.

A Corner of the Washington Flower Show.

In the main hall Gude Bros. Co. had a Chinese pagoda twenty-one feet high. This was painted green and yellow and was decorated with smilax. The first and second floors were filled with the leading varieties of mums, grown at their Anacostia plant. It was truly Chinese, made from a picture of the pagoda in Pekin, not omitting the dragons, and it was illuminated by 250 electric lights in colors. It was the center of attraction.

The stage was decorated by Peter Bisset, gardener to Mrs. Gardiner Hubbard at Twin Oaks. Fine groups of decorative plants in the four corners of the hall were by George Cooke, J. R. Freeman, Z. D. Blackistone and George C. Shaffer. The best table of decorative plants was shown by Mrs. L. Z. Leiter, Samuel Simmons, gardener. J. H. Small & Sons exhibited two fine groups of fancy ferns. Tables by local firms, of roses, mums, violets and carnations, not for competition, were shown by J. R. Freeman, George Cooke, Gude Bros. Co. and F. H. Kramer. In a small room F. H. Kramer made a special display of his Queen Beatrice rose and a yellow rose he calls No. 16, which was much admired. The show was a

John Cook's new rose scored the most points as a commercial rose.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

The first annual flower show of the Arkansas Floral Society was held in the banquet room of the Hotel Marion November 14 to 16. The exhibits were sufficient to fill the space provided, and the quality of the stock was excellent. The manager of the show was P. M. Palze, of Vestal & Son, which was a guarantee of capable arrangement. As an artistic success the show left nothing to be desired, and financially it was satisfactory, the attendance being large throughout, and the interest taken by the best flower buyers of the town all that could be desired. The principal trade exhibitors from outside of Little Rock were the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., which staged a large number of new variety chrysanthemums and the new rose, Rhea Reid; Vaughan & Sperry, Chicago, who exhibited violets, all the way from the Hudson river; H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., who exhibited cut blooms of chrysanthemums, carnations and roses and pot plants of chrysanthemums; Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago, which exhibited chrysanthemums, carnations and roses; Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., cut chrysanthemums; Peter Reinberg, Chicago, who exhibited the new rose, Mrs. Marshall Field; Charles W. McKellar, Chicago, who exhibited orchids, and Zech & Mann, Chicago, who sent chrysanthemums.

J. W. Vestal & Son were the leading exhibitors among the local trade, and captured nearly all of the many premiums for plants, there being several local amateurs who also put up good displays.

Display of violets, David Bisset, Garrett Park, Md., first; T. Diedrich, second.

Best palm, Mrs. Hubbard, first.

Best decorative plant, other than above, Mrs. Hubbard, first.

Mrs. L. Z. Leiter received first prize for Gloire de Lorraine begonias, first prize for Rex begonias and first prize for best collection of ferns.

John Cook's new rose scored the most points as a commercial rose.

LITTLE ROCK, ARK.

The first annual flower show of the Arkansas Floral Society was held in the banquet room of the Hotel Marion November 14 to 16. The exhibits were sufficient to fill the space provided, and the quality of the stock was excellent. The manager of the show was P. M. Palze, of Vestal & Son, which was a guarantee of capable arrangement. As an artistic success the show left nothing to be desired, and financially it was satisfactory, the attendance being large throughout, and the interest taken by the best flower buyers of the town all that could be desired. The principal trade exhibitors from outside of Little Rock were the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., which staged a large number of new variety chrysanthemums and the new rose, Rhea Reid; Vaughan & Sperry, Chicago, who exhibited violets, all the way from the Hudson river; H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., who exhibited cut blooms of chrysanthemums, carnations and roses and pot plants of chrysanthemums; Poehlmann Bros. Co., of Chicago, which exhibited chrysanthemums, carnations and roses; Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., cut chrysanthemums; Peter Reinberg, Chicago, who exhibited the new rose, Mrs. Marshall Field; Charles W. McKellar, Chicago, who exhibited orchids, and Zech & Mann, Chicago, who sent chrysanthemums.

J. W. Vestal & Son were the leading exhibitors among the local trade, and captured nearly all of the many premiums for plants, there being several local amateurs who also put up good displays.

A. L. Vaughan, of Chicago, was the judge.

The awards in the classes in which the outside exhibitors entered were as follows:

Hotel Marion cup, for best collection of roses, Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago. H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., and J. W. Vestal & Son, Little Rock, were given a special prize for second and third.

Seventy-five chrysanthemums, three varieties, white, pink and yellow, H. W. Buckbee, first, with Enguehard, Appleton and Alice Byron; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Golden Wedding, Maud Dean and Eaton.

Cup for best collection of carnations, Poehlmann Bros. Co.

Fifty blooms, two varieties, chrysanthemums, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Eaton and Appleton; H. W. Buckbee, second, with white and yellow Chadwick.

Nathan Smith & Son, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Ten single chrysanthemums, Nathan Smith & Son, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Twenty-five chrysanthemums, not less than six varieties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. W. Buckbee, second.

Thirty-six American Beauties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. W. Buckbee, second.

One hundred roses, in four varieties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Killarney, Richmond, Uncle John, Mme. Chatenay; H. W. Buckbee, second, with Chatenay, Golden Gate, Richmond and Bridesmaid.

Fifty Bride roses, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. W. Buckbee, second.

Fifty best Bridesmaid roses, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. W. Buckbee, second.

The Twenty-fives at Boston.

Fifteen white mums, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Eaton; J. W. Vestal & Son, second, with M. Simon Jossier.

Fifteen pink mums, H. W. Buckbee, first, with A. J. Balfour; J. W. Vestal & Son, second, with Enguehard.

Fifteen yellow chrysanthemums, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Yellow Eaton; H. W. Buckbee, second, with Gold Mine.

Single bloom, J. W. Vestal & Son, first, with S. Simon Jossier; H. W. Buckbee, second, with W. Wells.

Ten blooms, staged singly, H. W. Buckbee, first; J. W. Vestal & Son, second.

Thirty white mums, E. G. Hill Co., first, with Eaton; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Eaton.

Thirty pink mums, H. W. Buckbee, first, with Balfour; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Enguehard.

Thirty yellow mums, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; Hill Co., second.

Thirty mums in variety, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. W. Buckbee, second.

E. H. Hunt prize for fifty or more chrysanthemums grown outside of Arkansas, Tennessee, Louisiana, Texas and Indian Territory, H. W. Buckbee, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Seventy-five chrysanthemums in three varieties, H. W. Buckbee, first; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second.

Twenty-five white chrysanthemums, two varieties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first; H. W. Buckbee, second.

Fifteen pink mums, two varieties, H. W. Buckbee, first; Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., second.

Fifteen yellow mums, in two varieties,

Fifty yellow roses, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Perle.

Three hundred carnations, in five varieties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Beacon, Winsor and White Perfection; H. W. Buckbee, second, with Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, White Perfection, Beacon and Winsor.

One hundred pink carnations, H. W. Buckbee, first, with Rose-pink Enchantress; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Rose-pink Enchantress.

One hundred carnations, three varieties, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first.

One hundred white carnations, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with White Perfection; H. W. Buckbee, second, with White Perfection.

One hundred red carnations, Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, with Robert Craig; Poehlmann Bros. Co., second, with Beacon.

Special prizes were awarded for the following:

Peter Reinberg, Chicago, new rose Mrs. Marshall Field.

E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., new rose Rhea Reid.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, new rose Cardinal.

Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, new rose Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Charles McKellar, Chicago, collection of orchids.

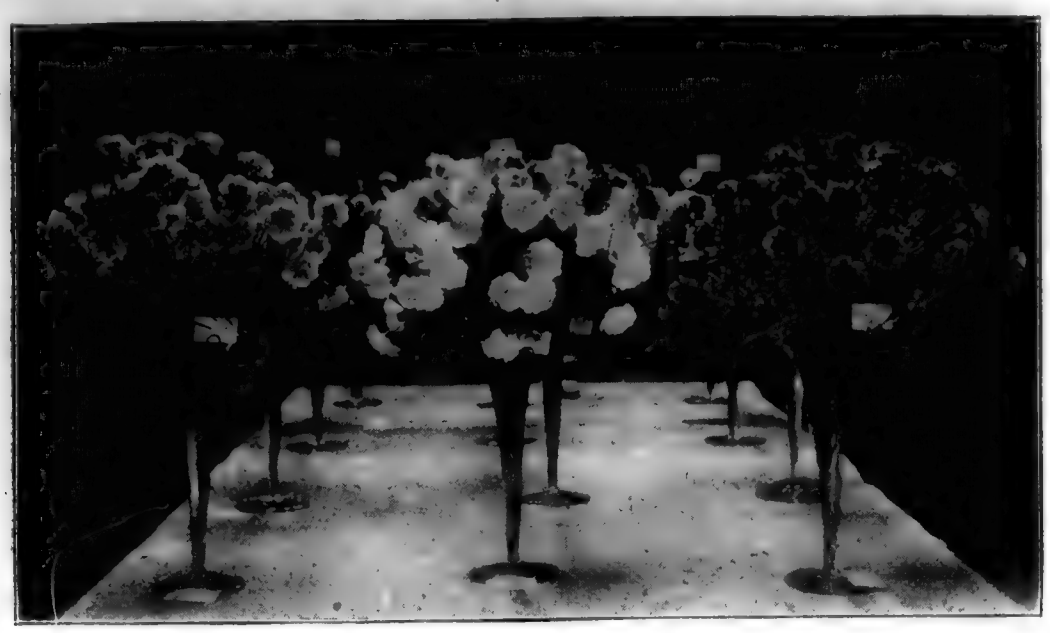
Steven Burns, Rhinebeck, N. Y., violets.

Ed Marquardt, Rhinebeck, N. Y., violets.

Zech & Mann, Chicago, collection of chrysanthemums.

Trade visitors included August Poehlmann, Chicago; H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., and many nearby florists.

PHILADELPHIA.



"Place all the 6-inch chrysanthemums on the stairway," was Secretary Rust's directions to Mr. McGregor on the morning of the second day of the annual fall show in Horticultural hall. This was done, with telling effect, the 6-inch pots, with their perfect specimen flowers and clean foliage, adorning the magnificent stairway in a manner wholly different from the usual groups of long-stemmed cut flowers in vases. The whole interior of the hall, as well as of the foyer, was also rearranged, the effect being vastly heightened thereby.

The second day brought out the cut roses, carnations and violets, and a large number of growers, who came especially to see the novelties. They were well worth seeing. The rose novelties included Mrs. Jardine and a coppery-colored, tulip-shaped bud with yellow on the inner petals, both from Robert Scott & Son, Sharon Hill, Pa. These have previously been described in this column. A rose of a lovely shade of pink came from John Cook, Baltimore, pretty in bud form as well as when half open. A fine pair of novelties brought by E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., were Rhea Reid, a bright red rose of great size and substance, which was much admired, and Princess, an exquisite soft pink with long, pointed bud, rather single.

Among the carnations the exhibits attracting the most attention were a vase of Imperial, with immense stems and large flowers. These were from William Kleinheinz. Dailledouze Bros. sent Afterglow, which will be sent out this spring by a quartet of distributors. Expert judges consider Afterglow as an even better carnation than Aristocrat, which created such a sensation last season. Among the other carnations were fine exhibits from Samuel Batchelor, Edward A. Stroud and F. R. Pierson Co. The best varieties in these collections were Lieut. Peary, Lady Bountiful, White Perfection, White Lawson, Winsor, Enchantress, Helen Goddard, Mrs. Lawson, Beacon and Harlowarden.

The violets were a small but most creditable display. Mrs. Sarah I. Smith sent Princess of Wales and La France; John MacIntyre, California and Princess of Wales; Louis I. Couche, Gov. Herrick and Princess of Wales.

Other features of the show were the ferns from Thomas Long; the center arrangement of oak leaves, Boston ferns and pompons, from William Graham Co., christened the Rendezvous by one of the bright lady visitors; and the display of vegetables in the lower hall. The attendance was large, most enthusiastic and gratifying, when it is considered that it is the first exhibition that the society has held under the new retrenchment plan. This plan consists in the absolute curtailment of all expense for premiums, the prizes being entirely donated by the members of the society and by business houses that have an interest in the exhibitions.

A summary of the awards shows that the principal exhibitors and winners were:

Joseph Hurley, gardener to J. W. Paul, Jr.; Gordon Smirl, gardener to Mrs. J. F. Sinnott; John McCleary, gardener to Mrs. R. J. C. Walker; William Kleinheinz, gardener to P. A. B. Widener; J. F. Whittaker, gardener to Robert Le Boutillier; Samuel Batchelor, gardener to C. B. Newbold; William Robertson, gardener to J. W. Pepper; Thomas Gaynor, gardener to Mrs. J. B. Stetson; George Bastard, gardener to Curwen Stoddart; Edward Smith, gardener to E. N. Benson; Joseph Crowther, gardener to S. B. Brown; Thomas Long, gardener to G. W. C. Drexel; John Hobson, gardener to E. A. Schmidt; John Hedlund, gardener to Mrs. W. L. Elkins; J. H. Dodds, gardener to John Wanamaker; John Little, gardener to J. L. Welsh; Samuel Hammond, gardener to Rudolph Ellis; Isaac Kulp, gardener to S. Friedberger; R. J. Morrow, gardener to G. I. Bodine; J. F. Sisson, gardener to Mrs. Thomas McKean.

Robert Craig Co. was first for Lorraine begonias and for display of crotons.

Dailledouze Bros. won the silver cup for new carnation, with Afterglow.

A silver medal was awarded Robert Scott & Son, for Rose Mrs. Jardine.

A silver medal was awarded E. G. Hill Co., for Rose Princess.

A certificate was given P. A. B. Widener, for Chrysanthemum Lynnwood Hall.

Special mention was given Mrs. S. I. Smith and L. A. Couche, for violets.

Show Notes.

"William Kleinheinz has sold Lynnwood Hall to E. G. Hill." This was the startling announcement made by Secretary Rust on the third day of the exhibition. Those present were amazed. They did not understand how Mr. Kleinheinz could have sold P. A. B. Widener's mansion over his head. Smart as Mr. Kleinheinz is, they did not believe him capable of this, even had his loyalty not rendered it impossible. But gradually comprehension dawned that Mr. Kleinheinz had disposed of his new white seedling mum, named after his employer's home at Ogontz. This was the finest novelty in the show.

Gordon Smirl exhibited two superb seedlings, a white and a purplish pink, of grand form and great size.

Among the orchids exhibited by Lager & Hurrell were the white form of Cattleya labiata and the yellow, Cattleya Dowiana.

H. F. Michell Co. had a fine display of bulbs, seeds and implements.

Henry A. Dreer made an interesting display of all the best forms of nephrolepis.

Robert Craig Co. made a fine showing of Ficus pandurata and crotons.

George E. Campbell made an excellent floor manager.

Among the visitors were E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind.; Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich.; William R. Smith, Washington, D. C.; John A. Cook, of Baltimore; Henry and Paul Dailledouze, of Flatbush, L. I.; Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J.; John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., and J. D. Cockcroft, of Long Island. PHIL.

TORONTO.

The fourth annual Canadian fruit, flower and honey show was opened in Massey hall, Tuesday, November 12, under the most favorable auspices. The show may be said to surpass all previous shows in many respects, and in few entries was there any lack of interest or exhibits. The fruit, without exception, was the finest that was ever put up at a Canadian exhibition, and perhaps would be hard to duplicate in any fruit-growing center of the world. In the flower section the exhibits were well filled, and, according to the judgment of John H. Dunlop, who had just returned from Chicago, the blooms quite equaled anything he saw there. Perhaps the most notable was the orchid exhibit, and it was certainly a revelation to Canadian flower lovers to see such masses of orchids as those exhibited by T. Manton, who captured first, and the Dale estate, which got second. Some fine vases of mums were exhibited by the Dale estate. Perhaps the most noticeable was the vase of Mrs. Thirkel, a large yellow; in fact, these were the largest mums that have yet been exhibited in Toronto. The challenge cup, which has been won for the third year by T. McHugh, of Dorval, now goes to him for keeps, and Mr. McHugh is to be congratulated on his persistency in following it up.

W. Wilshire, of Wilshire Bros., Montreal, judged the plants and chrysanthemums. S. A. Anderson, of Buffalo, was to judge the roses, carnations and made-up work, but unfortunately he received a telegram Wednesday night which called him hurriedly home, after having judged the carnations. C. Tidy, of our city, was asked to finish Mr. Anderson's work, which he did in a manner most creditable to himself and satisfactory to the exhibitors.

Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., put up a fine exhibit of mums.

The attendance was good throughout the week, as entertaining concerts were furnished by local bands and the best local talent. A summary of the awards follows:

In chrysanthemums, plants and miscellaneous, the Allan Gardens won six firsts, five seconds and one third; Exhibition park, two firsts, four seconds and one third; H. H. Fudger, three firsts, one second and three thirds; Reservoir Grounds, one first, two seconds and one third; W. Jay, two firsts and one fourth; T. Manton, Eglinton, two seconds; Dale estate, Brampton, one first; Steele-Briggs Seed Co., one first; Sir H. M. Pellatt, two firsts and one second; Col. Sweny, one first and one second.

In groups, the Allan Gardens won one first, one second and one fourth; Sir H. M. Pellatt, one second; Exhibition park, two thirds; T. Manton, two firsts and one third; Dale estate, one second; J. H. Dunlop, one first and one third; A. Jennings, one second; George D. Manton, one fourth; W. Wilshire, Montreal, one first.

In cut chrysanthemums, the Dale estate won six firsts, three seconds and one third; C. Sandiford, Buffalo, one second and one third; Sir H. M. Pellatt, two thirds and three fourths; R. Cameron, Niagara Falls, one second, one third and three fourths; Thomas McHugh, Dorval, two firsts; R. Jennings, Brampton, one first, two seconds and two thirds; J. H. Dunlop, one first, two seconds and one third; Steele-Briggs Seed Co., one second, one third and one fourth.

In cut carnations, R. Jennings won three firsts, four seconds and one third; Dale estate, five firsts and three seconds; W. Houston, Central Prison, three thirds; Toronto Floral Co., Davisville, one second and three thirds; J. H. Dunlop, one first and one second.

In cut roses, the Dale estate won five firsts and two seconds; Bedford Park Floral Co., two firsts, three seconds and one third; Toronto Floral Co., one second and four thirds; Carlton & Marx, Lambton, one third.

In cut violets, the Dale estate won one first and one second; Carlton & Marx, one first; R. Jennings, one third.

In floral designs, T. Manton won one first, one second and one third; J. H. Dunlop, four firsts and one second; S. A. Frost, three seconds and two thirds; A. Neal, one fourth; G. D. Manton, one third.

The Steele-Briggs Seed Co. was awarded a certificate of merit for a new pink seedling chrysanthemum, which scored ninety-one points.

A few of the visitors from out of town were:

Anderson, S. A., Buffalo.
Bradt, L., St. Catherines.
Cole, A. E., Grimsby.
Dale, E., Brampton.
Denton, D., and wife, Cobourg.
Dickerson, J., Woodstock.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Basket of Roses.

The French basket shown in the illustration was especially arranged for an effective photograph, the flowers being a little more loosely arranged than would ordinarily have been the case. The exquisite coloring of Mme. Abel Chatenay rose gives a peculiar charm to this arrangement. It is the work of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia.

INTERESTING IF TRUE.

Walter Tapper, with Joseph R. Goldman, Middletown, O., supplies the following story and suggests its publication under this head:

"The other day one of the well-known clerks of the war department at Washington died. He had been a telegraph operator before he was appointed to his clerkship and had worked in the telegraph division in the war department for some years. When his fellow operators learned of his death they determined to send a floral tribute, and a collection was taken up and order given to the florist to make a large pillow of flowers and mark in the center the figures 73, which in telegraph language means the signal between operators, 'My compliments and remembrance.' On the day of the funeral the operators went to pay their last respects to their clerk, and were greatly shocked when they saw their floral tribute on the casket, for instead of the figures 73, there, in red immortelles, on a white field of roses, were the figures 23. It was too late to do anything, and as the casket was borne to the grave the pillow sent with 'Compliments and remembrances' was marked with the message '23.' The next day an indignant committee of telegraphers waited on the florist for an explanation. All he could say was that he had never heard of 73, but he knew 23 and thought that was what they wanted.''

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

The American Rose Society has issued certificates of life membership which are very handsome documents, worthy of being framed and preserved, and certificates for new roses exhibited as novelties not receiving the society's gold medal but worthy of special notice. To make these certificates more interesting, a new seal has been prepared, which in design is distinct and original.

The society has now begun its efforts to make ready for the exhibition to be held in Chicago. The show of Ramblers from the west is expected to outshine in quantity anything which has been given to the public. New roses from two or three growers in the east are expected to be of interest to all who are working along this interesting line.

The list of life memberships is increasing as one and another drops into line. The society is not very rich, but it is likely to become the head and front of the special associations of flower growers in America.

BROWN SCALE ON ADIANTUM.

I enclose a few fronds of adiantum, which are ''inhabited.'' Will you kindly name the insect and the remedy?

MAC.

The adiantum fronds are badly infested with the common brown scale, an insect that is frequently found upon greenhouse plants. When a fern is in such a condition as that indicated by the specimens, it would be best to throw it away and procure a fresh stock, as an insecticide strong enough to kill these pests would be sure to injure the tender foliage of the fern. Solution of tobacco extract will destroy this scale, but would also affect the adiantum foliage.

W. H. TAPLIN.

Chrysanthemum W. M. Moir.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE NOVELTIES.

O. H. Broomhead.

O. H. Broomhead is a dwarf-growing, stout-stemmed pink, and will become popular, when generally grown, as an exhibition flower. The color is a deep rose-pink with silvery tips, which, however, show but little, as the flower when finished is a true Jap. O. H. Broomhead is easy to grow, and early crowns, late crowns and even terminal buds produce full flowers. It can be cut by October 20, but keeps for three weeks on the plant in almost perfect condition. I think we will find in Broomhead a pink that will give satisfaction in the country generally, and not be confined to a limited area, as is the case with some pinks we now have.

W. M. Moir.

W. M. Moir can be grown by every one with confidence, for it produced enormous flowers this year from late struck plants and has hardly gotten acclimatized yet. I think that when the exhibitors get hold of it and can start with good stock early in the season, Moir will give some phenomenal flowers, as I have noticed that if the showing the first year is good it will be very much better the next year, varieties like Beatrice May, Mrs. W. Duckham and Mrs. John E. Dunne being cases in point. Moir is the only variety scoring over ninety before the committees this year, and for this reason I claim it is the premier variety of the year. The color is an absolutely pure white, and foliage and stem are perfect. The foliage might come a little higher up the stem with advantage, but that is the only criticism one can make of this phenomenal variety.

Mary Donnellan.

Mary Donnellan is a yellow that will make its own way. It is a deeper shade than Appleton and a much more perfect flower—two pretty broad statements to make. As a keeper it outlasts any variety I know of. The specimen shown in the illustration appeared in my winning class, twenty-four kinds, at Madison, October 31, and a week later I showed it in the winning class of thirty varieties at New York, where I had the photograph taken on November 8. Considering the conditions prevailing in exhibition rooms generally, I call this remarkable. All my Donnellan were developed fully by October 15; yet they kept all right for the show on November 6. Donnellan is a tall grower and a little necky, but is well worthy of a trial by every one.

Mary Mason.

Mary Mason possesses to perfection what we have come to regard as the Wells Pockett habit; that is, a very dwarf, robust growth, with the foliage right up to the flower. The style of the flower condemns it from the commercial growers' point of view, and yet these are the varieties that people rave over in the exhibition room. To my mind, whatever a lady likes she will buy if she only gets a chance, and the grower who slavishly follows the other fellow's lead, with his Appletons and Bonnaffons, is only standing in his own light. Mary Mason is rosy red in color, and the flower is extra large. It will be very prominent in the any other classes next year.

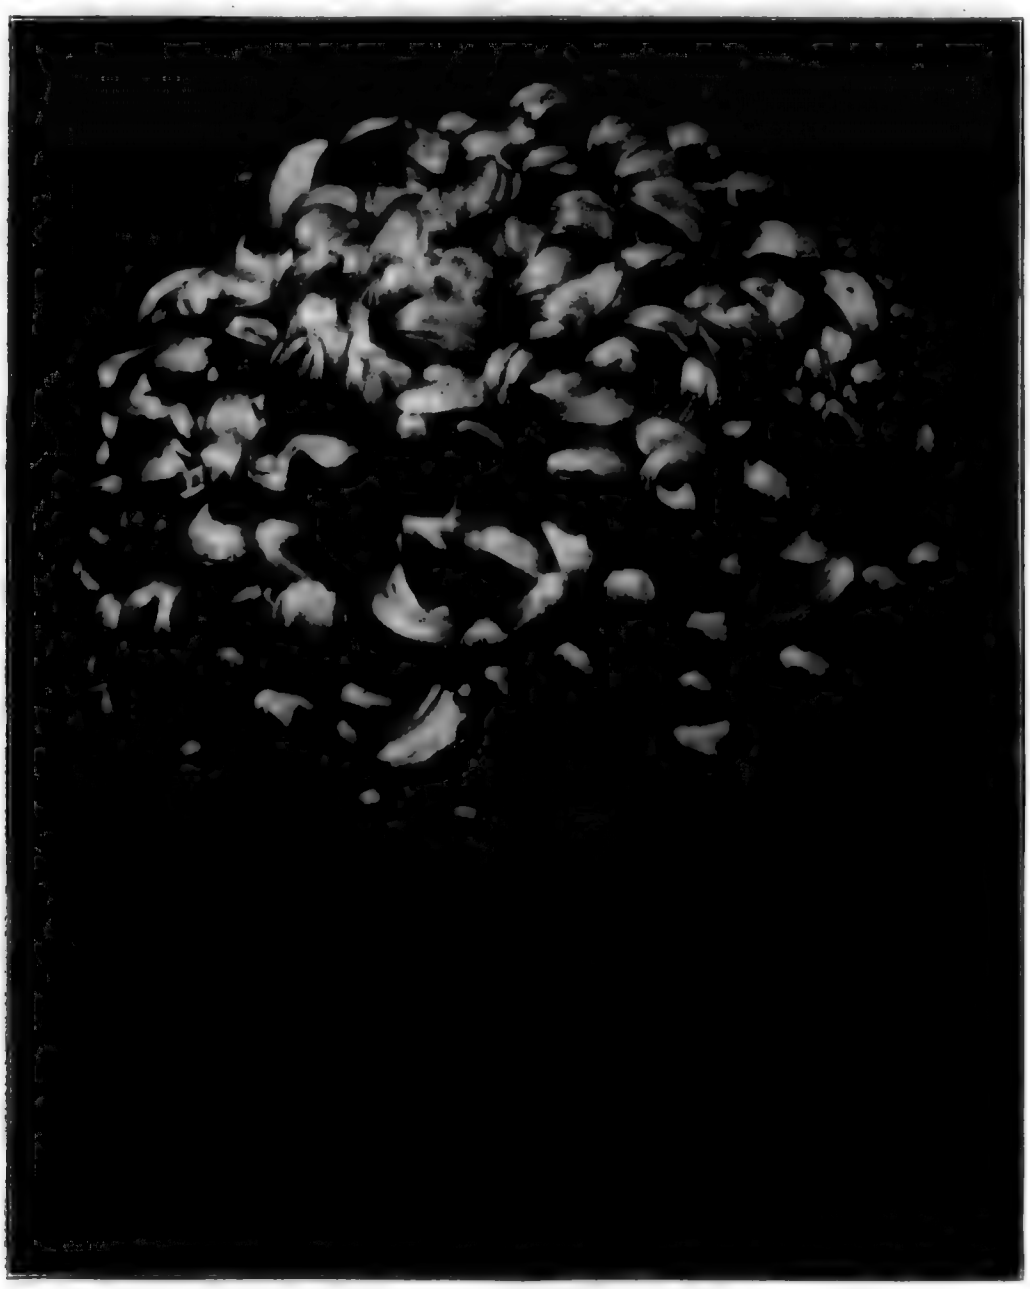
Dorothy Goldsmith.

Dorothy Goldsmith was not finished in time for me to exhibit this year. Had it been a week earlier, it would have been talked about. One admirer called it a bronze F. S. Vallis, and I think this description fits it very well. The petals are just as long and the flower should come as large. I have had petals on it this year eleven inches long and hanging straight down. It is necky and most suitable for short-vase classes, but if it lives up to the promise of its youth we may look for a big fellow next year. It is one of the English seedlings, and what we have to look for first with them is fullness. This Goldsmith has to perfection, and so I do not fear but that it will come out all right.

Kitty Lawrence.



Kitty Lawrence is a delicate fawn color, and I think will become a great favorite with exhibitors because of its kind, free habit and perfectly shaped flower. Stock was limited and I did not have enough to stage before the committee, but every exhibitor who saw it was very pleased, and I am sure that Kitty will make her mark in her particular color.

Lynnwood Hall.

Lynnwood Hall is highly thought of in the neighborhood of Philadelphia, where it originated, and it has scored to a certificate on the commercial scale. It is a Japanese incurved white and reminds me of Convention Hall in its contour and habits. I am unable to say anything as to its growth, only that it has a stiff stem and carries the foliage up to the flower.

Mrs. Norman Davis

One of the best of the novelties of the year that I failed to get a picture of is Mrs. Norman Davis. The plate, unfortunately, went wrong and the picture was spoiled. This variety is a splendid white, entirely different from Moir in its make-up. It is a true Jap, and the flower meets the foliage even when early crown buds are taken. Mrs. Norman Davis will be very welcome, because our list of exhibition whites is none too long at present. Charles H. Totty.

Chrysanthemum Mary Donnellan.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lily of the Valley.

The imported pips of lily of the valley are now coming to hand. It is not advisable to force any of these before the new year. Our experience has been that they start erratically and do not pay for the labor expended upon them. Soak the bunches of pips well after they are unpacked and place in a cool frame until needed. Let them have some frost; it will not hurt them and they will force all the better for it. It is best to rely on cold storage pips until Christmas, after which time the new crop can be used. Lily of the valley, to be forced successfully, should have a brisk bottom heat of from 75 to 90 degrees, which can be steadily maintained, and a top heat 25 to 30 degrees lower. It should be kept in the dark until the spikes are well drawn up, then more light should be given.

The small grower, who only needs a few hundred pips a week at most, should select a place over the steam or hot water pipes. Box it in, making a case not less than a foot deep over the pipes; eighteen inches will be better. Place a layer of moss over the bottom boards; cover with six or eight inches of sand and plant your pips as wanted. Glass sashes may cover the frame. These can be darkened by cloths. Keep the sand moist, but avoid much overhead dampening after the spikes are well advanced. Soil is not needed for lily of the valley. The pips make no roots while being forced. As you will need batches coming on at regular intervals, it will be advisable to divide your case by partitions. One may need light and air while others will need a close, dark atmosphere.

Lilacs.

The largest portion of forcing lilacs which are pot grown are imported from Europe. Now is a good time to secure a stock if you have not already obtained them. No variety beats the ever popular white Marie Legraye for forcing, but Charles X, Souvenir de Ludwig Spaeth, Mme. Lemoine and several other sorts are grown to a lesser extent. Plants dug up and potted now will not force satisfactorily. They should have been pot-grown since last spring or early summer, at latest. In starting lilacs, 55 to 60 degrees at night is ample. This may be increased in a few days to 75 to 80 degrees, gradually lowering the temperature as the flowers open. If desired, the plants may be kept in the dark until the flowers are about to open, when they should be gradually inured to light. Forced in this way, the colored sorts come practically white. Frequent spraying overhead is very beneficial until the flowers commence to open, when it should be discontinued. Towards spring, of course, much less forcing is needed.

Azalea Mollis.

While less grown than the omnipresent Indian azaleas, the mollis section is well worthy of being more grown by florists. Well-flowered plants are usually quite a feature in the first three months of the year at all the better-class flower stores. It is not necessary for these to be potgrown. The plants always lift with substantial balls, and should be potted firmly. Their treatment need not differ greatly from that advised for lilacs, only the plants should never be grown in the dark. There are some beautiful shades of color in these azaleas, such as are unknown in the Azalea Indica group, and all are popular with flower buyers who know how to appreciate good things. Pot up any plants you may have bought or grown yourself. Keep cool and subjected to a little frost until you want to force them.

Indian Azaleas.

If azaleas wanted for Christmas are not already started, lose no time in getting them in a warm, moist house. It will only be possible to get in such early sorts as Hexe and Deutsche Perle at this late date, as Christmas is only a trifle over a month ahead. Keep any plants you are forcing well syringed in bright weather, and let the atmosphere in which they are growing be congenial and moist. As flowers get fairly well expanded, remove to a cooler house, not to one just clear of freezing, but rather where it is kept at 50 to 55 degrees at night.

Lilies.

If you are figuring on a good batch of lilies for Christmas they will need close attention during the next few weeks, and you will undoubtedly have to do considerable moving around to time them to a nicety. The sun power now decreases daily in marked contrast to what it is in March or April, when we are hurrying on our stock for Easter, and growth is now much slower than in the spring months. Do not allow aphis to secure any lodgment. Spray the plants freely and remove the most advanced ones to slightly cooler quarters. Those you are forcing should have 70 degrees at night to send them along, and do not forget a dose of manure water once a week.

Lilies for Easter, which comes much later next year, should be kept moderately cool, and do not overwater them. Better keep a little on the dry side to be safe.

Brief Reminders.

Protect hybrid perpetual roses by drawing earth up to the stems. This is better than putting leaves and manure among them.

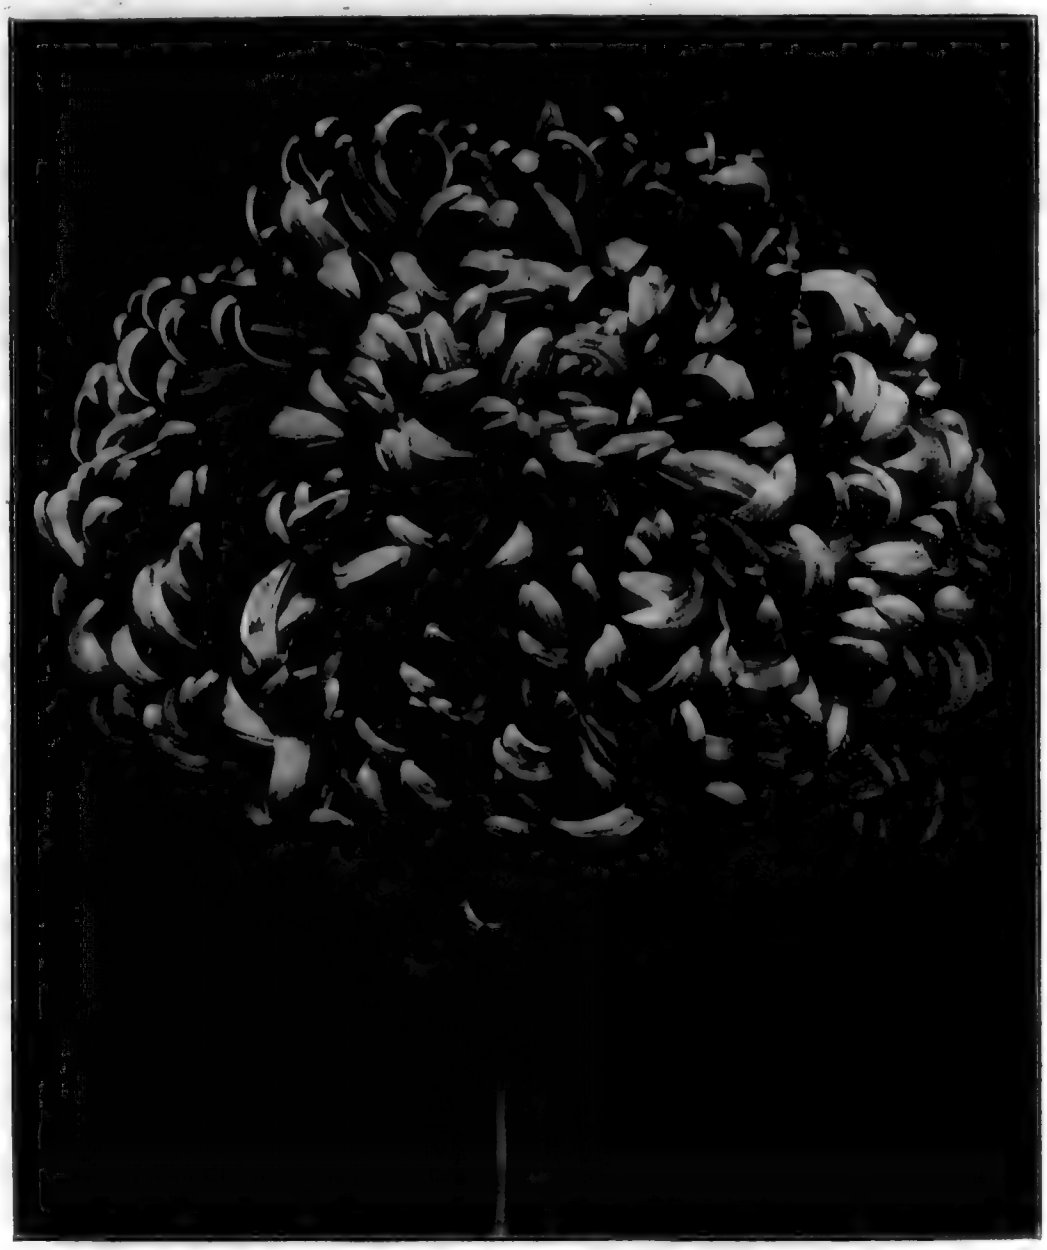
Hybrid tea roses will winter with earth protection in favored latitudes. In more rigorous sections it is better and safer to lift and bury them, or to heel deeply and quite thickly in a coldframe.

Get antirrhinums planted as the mums are cleared away. Sweet peas also make a good successional crop.

Keep stevia cool. The flowers are specially valuable at Christmas and during January.

Start a batch of French Trumpet Major narcissi, and if La Reine tulips are well started, bring in a batch. Keep them dark to draw up the stems for a time.

Keep the early sweet peas carefully tied up. The night temperature for them is better kept below 50 degrees at night.



Do not forget to save plenty of chrysanthemum stock for yourself. Give the plants a light bench in a cold house.

Give more room to Lorraine begonias, which are now growing fast. A temperature of 55 degrees is high enough as the flowers open.

Lift any roots of doubtfully hardy perennials, and place winter protection over those requiring it.

Keep berried solanums in a cold house if you want them in good condition for Christmas.

Put Gladiolus Colvillei, The Bride and any of the nanus section in flats as soon as you receive them. Keep in a cool pit, but do not cover with ashes or other material, as they start to grow very early.

The Market.

Something of a pall continues to overhang the flower market, and a good deal of pessimistic talk is heard as to the trade during the coming winter. Conditions, if anything, show a trifling improvement, but continue the reverse of satisfactory. While chrysanthemums are still arriving in goodly numbers, they are dominating the market less than they did. There is no change to be recorded in prices for these, although some advance is anticipated for Thanksgiving. Some nice flowers of Chadwick, Pennsylvania, Enguehard, Nagoya, Eaton and its yellow sport are seen. Bonnaffon and its white sport are still much in evidence.

Roses are doing a little better, but prices are not what they should be. Beauties are fine and special grades are selling a little higher. The same is true of the best quality blooms of Killarney, Wellesley, Chatenay and Richmond.

Carnations are in heavy supply, with a slightly hardening tendency in prices due to the approach of Thanksgiving. Violets remain about the same. Paper White narcissus comes from several growers, but is not yet in much demand. Lily of the valley is not abundant, but sufficient for the light calls. Lilies and callas are more plentiful. Other flowers arriving include bouvardia, mignonette, snapdragon and gardenias. There is a fair call for smilax, adiantum and asparagus.

Thanksgiving prospects at this time do not look specially roseate, and prices are likely to be moderate. While the financial upheaval will affect trade, a fair business is looked for. Plant trade continues only moderately good, not at all what it ought to be. Some good Lorraine begonias are now arriving, and a few azaleas have also put in an appearance. Palms and other decorative plants are not selling as well as could be wished.

Club Meeting.

Election night, as usual, drew out a big crowd to the Gardeners' and Florists' Club meeting November 19, nearly 175 being in attendance. There was no regular lecture, as the balloting occupied considerable time. The nominating committee, consisting of Wilfred Wheeler, W. C. Rust and Charles Holbrow, presented the list of nominees and President Westwood appointed as tellers Messrs. Holbrow, Wheeler, Kennedy and Cameron. The balloting resulted as follows:

For president, Thomas Westwood, 53; F. E. Palmer, 36; vice-president, F. P. Davis, 67; T. J. Gray, 52; secretary, W. N. Craig, 113; treasurer, Edward Hatch, 112; executive committee, Peter Miller, 90; John Farquhar, 79; Robert Cameron, 95; Paul Johansson, 48.

A motion was introduced changing the date of election to December in future.

It was voted to hold a field day at Framingham, December 14, to visit S. J. Goddard, Wm. Nicholson and T. Butterworth.

The landscape classes begin December 3. F. E. Palmer gave a report on boiler legislation.

Wm. Sim was given an award of merit for Boston violet. M. A. Patten had a fine lot of seedling carnations, and James Cartwright showed Oncidium ornithorhynchum.

The market was improved November 20. Receipts were lighter and prices better. The Thanksgiving outlook brightens.

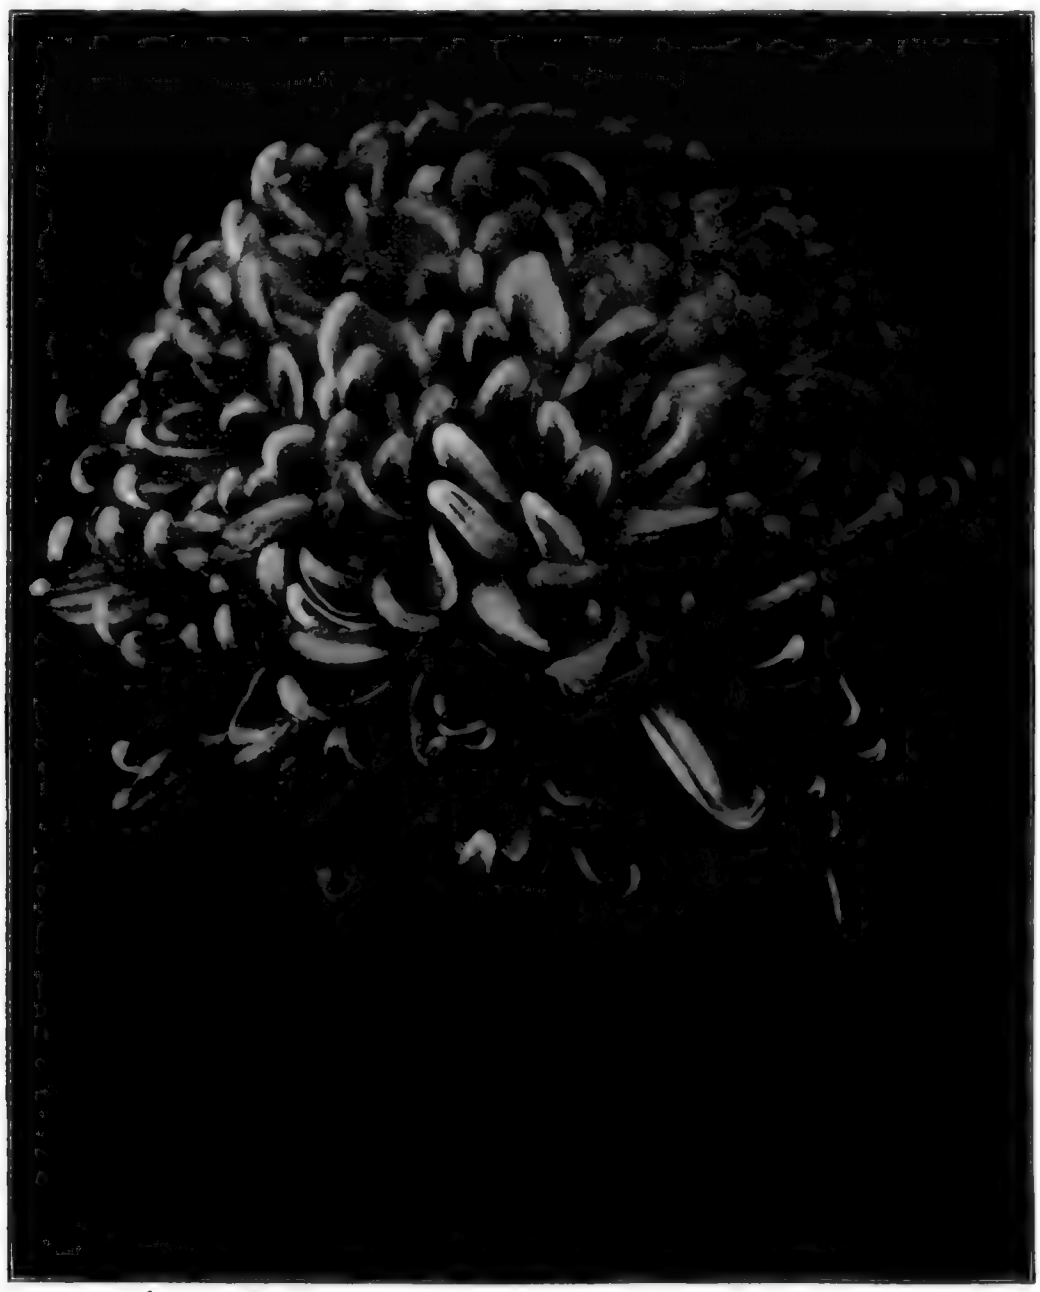
Various Notes.

The annual election of omcers for the Massachusetts Horticultural Society took place November 16. There being no contests, the number of votes cast was unusually small. The following were duly electeu: President, Stephen M. Weld; vice-president, Walter Hunnewell; trustees for three years, W. C. Baylies, C. W. Parker, J. A. Pettigrew and William Whitman; nominating committee, W. H. Bowker, J. W. Duncan, J. H. Fletcher, D. F. Roy and Wilfred Wheeler.

The Yale-Princeton football game November 16 caused a good call for violets. Welch Bros. forwarded nearly 100,000 alone, singles having the preference.

Malcolm Orr and L. E. Small are handling some fine double violets at the Music Hall market. Messrs. Orr and Cummings have splendid singles with 12-inch stems.

The two flower markets expect to offer some $500 in prizes at the exhibition, to be held probably in February. As the Massachusetts Horticultural Society holds its midwinter exhibition about that time, an amalgamation would insure a fine exhibition.



The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the estate of H. H. Rogers, at Fairhaven, November 18. James Garthley, the head gardener, had two houses of pot chrysanthemums which were finely grown. The party were entertained to dinner and spent a pleasant afternoon.

John McFarland has finished a fine new forcing house. In addition to lily of the valley, he will force a quantity of Lilac Marie Legraye. He has a nice house of poinsettias coming on for Christmas.

David Lumsden has been appointed superintendent of the greenhouses of New Hampshire College at Durham, N. H.

November has given us some low temperatures, 12 to 14 degrees above zero being recorded November 15, 16 and 17. It has been an excellent fall, however, for finishing up outside work.

Chrysanthemum Lynnwood Hall.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The week opens with a cold rain and cheerless skies, hardly in keeping with the better tone that begins to materialize. This is the week of the horse show, always a good week for the retailer, and with the grandest blooms of chrysanthemums in abundance flooding the market, of the finest quality that has ever reached the New York wholesalers, there is no reason why this week should be an exception to the rule. Prices are no higher this week than last, and may not be before Thanksgiving, but the demand is growing and the ice-boxes are emptied every day at some price.

Saturday's football game at New Haven absorbed enormous quantities of yellow mums and violets. The aggregate must have totaled hundreds of thousands, and yet the New York local call was heard and answered satisfactorily; in other words, notwithstanding any extraordinary demand at any time, there is always left enough and to spare. One of the leading violet wholesalers declared he had not shipped a violet to Yale, the city demand absorbing his entire shipment.

Mums of superb quality and size, last year bringing $4 to $5 a dozen, are gladly sold this year at $2. While these abnormal receipts of chrysanthemums continue there will be little satisfactory improvement in prices. Roses have not advanced except in quality. They could hardly be more perfect. No signs of mildew are yet in evidence. Beauties are in demand at the present prevailing reasonable prices, and no wonder, when retailers can buy 40-cent goods at 20 cents, and all other roses in proportion. The finest Maids last week were to be had for $4 a hundred. The beginning of this week finds prices at the same low ebb.

Carnations sold at 2 cents for the top at times, and there was no lack of supply. Valley does not advance, though the November weddings are numerous.

Orchids are abundant and growing in favor constantly. Shipments are heavy to out-of-town florists.

We look for a slightly better market before the end of the week. Thanksgiving will stir things up, and, while prices will remain reasonable, the volume of business promises to be large.

Various Notes.

Creditors of Hicks & Crawbuck, Brooklyn, filed a petition in bankruptcy against them last week, and E. F. O'Connor, Jr., was appointed receiver. He is continuing the business, and it is hoped that early resumption of the firm can be arranged, for it is stated that assets, including book accounts, more than equal the liabilities. Frank S. Hicks withdrew from the firm last June and, although his name is retained, is now of Frank S. Hicks & Co., New York.

Cleary's Horticultural Co. has just received sixty-two cases of azaleas, rhododendrons and other nursery stock. They are having good sales, with large attendance.

The Plant Growers' Association will locate its headquarters in Twenty-eighth street if a suitable building can be secured. This society includes all the expert growers in and near New York.

Joseph Fenrich is receiving a grade of Bride from Robert Schultz, of Madison, that is hard to beat, and Totty's novelties in mums are seen here daily.

A. J. Guttman calls attention to grand stock of Dr. Enguehard, Eaton, Maud Dean and Golden and White Chadwick, from Jacob Hauk, of Bloomfield, N. J.

John Young reports the Cottage Gardens now cutting a large crop of fancy carnations.

Henry Hessian's cut, as seen at Ford Bros.', shows that if quality were the test this would be the height of the season.

John King Duer, who has been quite ill, is now recovering. J. J. Coan, manager of this establishment, says since society returned to town business has been satisfactory. The general effect produced in this handsome store makes it quite distinct and unique among New York flower shops.

William H. Kuebler, of Brooklyn, says his business is again beyond the capacity of his store, and more room is a necessity, as last year. He says he will have chrysanthemums for Christmas.

J. K. Allen must be a Princeton sympathizer, judging by the number of yellow mums he shipped to the football enthusiasts at New Haven on Saturday.

Walter Sheridan is on deck again, fully recovered and optimistic as to the future of the cut flower market, with the rise and fall of which he has been conversant for just a quarter of a century.

Tons of flowers were used at the funeral of Charles T. Barney, late president of the Knickerbocker Trust Co. Nearly every prominent florist had a share of the work.

Lucien M. Underwood, botanist and professor at Columbia College, committed suicide November 17.

Karl Kammann and Miss Elizabeth Wade were married November 10 at the Church of the Ascension. Miss Wade is a sister of Thomas J. Wade, manager of Bloomingdale's cut flower department. Mr. Kammann is with Joseph Leikens, and a two weeks' vacation and $100 from his employer was one of the wedding gifts.

Perkins & Nelson are receiving fine stock of cypripediums from the same grower who has shipped orchids to the veteran since 1882.

C. C. Trepel, of Brooklyn, opens a branch store next week on Lexington street, opposite Losier's, which he will call the Blossom. It has a 50-foot show window. Mr. Trepel handles the entire mum stock of Mr. Meesum, of Elmhurst, over 40,000 blooms to date this year. He sells as high as 5,000 fern-dishes, filled, weekly, and his Saturday sales have reached as high as 8,000 each of roses and carnations and 10,000 chrysanthemums.

Chrysanthemum Mary Mason.

G. Myer has thoroughly refitted his handsome store at Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, and with his big expanse of glass makes some effective window decorations. Many unique features attest his versatility. He has built a reputation for house and church decorations, and numbers many of the society leaders among his patrons. He has branched out also into landscaping, and the grounds of Brokaw at Great Neck and of Dr. Dennis at Norfolk, Conn., demonstrate his skill. Mr. Myer was in the employ of Alex McConnell for twenty years before venturing on the business sea on his own account.

Hanft Bros., Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, will move to the corner of Sixty-second street and Madison avenue March 1. Their new store will have a frontage of 100 feet on Madison avenue, and plate glass windows will make possible one of the largest decorative displays in the city. The locality is one of the best in New York, and close to the fine stores of Warendorff, John King Duer, Myer, Stumpp and Bloomingdale. For the first time in a generation, Mr. Hanft informed me, there will be no Arion ball this season. They have decorated for this great yearly feature for a quarter of a century.

At Bloomingdale's, Manager Burnham has in the great roof conservatories two century plants that have drawn great crowds of interested flower lovers for weeks and will continue to do so until nearly Christmas. The plants were at one time owned by Louis Menand, of Albany, and were purchased from him by W. A. Manda, from whom Mr. Burnham secured them. The greenhouses here are stocked with the best of ferns, palms and plants of every kind. Especially good are the branched ficus of Fritz Dressel and the Scottii and Whitmani ferns. Mr. Burnham declares that no decrease in trade has been noted this fall. He maintains prices that average as high as those of the leading retail stores.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.—The Lake Geneva Gardeners' Association closed its third annual exhibition November 16. The quality and number of exhibits were the best in the three years. The principal exhibitors were J. J. Mitchell, N. W. Harris, R. T. Crane, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbanks, C. L. Hutchinson, George Sturgis, Mrs. R. N. Isham and M. A. Ryerson, although there were many others.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

It is reported that the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., has bought the stock of the new chrysanthemum, Lynnwood Hall.

Those who select the best paper and then confine their advertising to it, can afford enough space to make their advertisements effective.

One of the best growers for one of the biggest cut flower markets still ventilates his houses by means of notched sticks—but he watches the notches.

Edward Amerpohl, of Janesville, Wis., with whom Nephrolepis Amerpohlii originated, says he has begun working up stock of an improved form.

At the exhibition of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, England, October 29, the American carnations, Beacon, Winsor and Rose-pink Enchantress, were given awards of merit.

In England it is noted that the interest in chrysanthemum shows is declining, and one of the reasons offered is the later-day practice of requiring blooms to be staged in vases instead of on boards, as formerly was the universal custom.

The red carnation, Britannia, which made a great stir in England last season, is giving some fine blooms wherever it is being tried in the United States, but is late in blooming and does not give the stems required. With home propagated stock growers may have better success next season.

It will interest many in the trade that conditions are such that South Water street commission houses, in Chicago, that have handled large quantities of bouquet green in recent years, this season find conditions such that they are taking little or no hand in the green trade.

It is reported that well-berried holly will be an exceedingly scarce item this season.

There is reported to be plenty of bouquet green for those who care to pay $7 per crate at Chicago.

RECEIVER FOR TEMPLIN CO.

The Templin Co., with a large nursery and seed business at Calla, O., and a florist establishment in Youngstown, has been placed in the hands of a receiver. C. Edwin Oyster, president of the General Audit Co., of Youngstown, has been named as receiver and will in the future have charge of the business.

The assets of the company are approximately $90,000. The liabilities, not including the capital stock, are placed at about the same figure. The capitalization of the company is only $35,000, a small figure compared to the volume of business transacted.

The receivership was not established for the purpose of winding up the business, but operation will continue as heretofore. The Templin Co. has been entangled for some time, and a committee representing the Youngstown Credit Men's Association has been in charge. The committee consisted of C. Edwin Oyster, W. D. McCloskey, cashier of the East Palestine bank, and Harry Schmick, cashier of the defunct First National bank of Leetonia. The latter institution was the Templin Co.'s heaviest creditor. The subject of a receivership has been under discussion for some time and culminated in a petition in the United States Court at Cleveland.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market has been decidedly dull since last report. The crop of Bride and Bridesmaid is heavy with every grower of roses and the daily receipts since the middle of last week have been greater than the demand. It always happens that when the crop is at the full in Chicago it also is heavy with those who buy part of their supplies in this market, but grow another part under their own glass. When a man has a house or two of chrysanthemums ready to cut and a big crop of Bride and Bridesmaid it hardly is to be expected that he will do otherwise than push the sale of this stock and order as little as possible from Chicago.

The result has been a noticeable reduction in the shipping demand, while the local buyers do not get beyond the first house visited in their daily rounds of the market. These are conditions which are met with periodically and which in this instance are largely due to the fine weather we have been having. It has greatly increased production and curtailed demand, for flowers are most sought when skies are wintry.

Also, the greatly increased supply of low grade chrysanthemums has been a large factor in weakening the market. The vegetable growers did so well with mums last year that nearly all of them have contributed to the glut this fall, practically every man doubling his planting. The mums promise to be pretty well out of the way by Thanksgiving and the heavy crop of roses will last only a few days, so a change in the weather is likely to bring a radical change in the market.

There is enough and to spare of every thing except Beauties and carnations of shipping quality. The supply of Beauties is so light that prices have advanced to Thanksgiving quotations. The supply of carnations is equal to requirements if made known early in the day, but late orders that called for good stock were cut by at least one house in the face of Monday's rose glut.

Paper White narcissi are now ready.

Bronze galax has arrived and relieved the shortage. All other green stock has been plentiful right along.

Thanksgiving.

With the present glut in the market a decided change in the weather will be necessary if advanced prices are to be realized at Thanksgiving. Growers are cautioned that there is no possibility of profit by holding back their stock. Send it along each day. As buyers realize they can get good, fresh material with no advance in prices they will push for business and make a fair outlet. Anything like accumulating stock for November 27 will result in disaster that day.

Poehlmann at Little Rock.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. sent eighteen large boxes to the flower show at Little Rock, Ark., and only got them through after a deal of trouble. To begin with, the St. Paul train due to bring the stock to Chicago was late and connections were missed. Investigation showed that shipping by way of Memphis would permit a transfer to put the stuff into Little Rock in time, so it was dispatched by this roundabout way, only to get into a wreck on the Illinois Central and suffer another missed connection, but when finally staged the stock was the most admired feature of the show. Among other winnings were two silver cups.

August Poehlmann and A. L. Vaughan were the only Chicagoans at Little Rock. Mr. Poehlmann says he never has seen a show that was so well attended in proportion to the size of the town, nor has he seen one where the best people of the city took so much interest. He was well pleased that he exhibited.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. also exhibited largely at St. Louis, with their customary success.

Club Meeting.

About a dozen members turned out to the meeting of the Florists' Club November 14. Walter Scott, of La Grange, and Frank Mitsch, of Rogers Park, were elected to membership. There were three proposals, to be voted on next month. E. F. Winterson was elected treasurer.

It was voted to make December 12 rose night, and all those who have new roses are invited to exhibit. Local growers will show what they can do in the way of high grade stock.

Various Notes.

C. L. Washburn says he lays the present state of the market entirely to the heavy crop of fine Bride and Bridesmaid roses and that he expects a change in a very few days. Bassett & Washburn are cutting a fine lot of giganteum lilies.

A. L. Randall Co. is rushing the season, for they have poinsettias now ready. Stevia is another of their additions to the list.

E. C. Amling says he considers the weak violet market to be due to the fine weather and says he looks for a stiffening in demand and values as soon as we get typical November days. Violets certainly never were finer with any of the wholesale houses.

Anton Then says he took first prize on White Lawson carnation at the flower show, instead of second as was reported last week.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is still receiving cosmos, but it is indoor grown.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, who was judge of the flower show at Little Rock, Ark., last week, went to his old home at Collinston, Ala., for a Sunday visit.

It is reported that the Eatons' ship came in last week.

F. F. Benthey, who became a convert to Killarney last season, says that it still sells much better than Maid and that it always is possible to sell out on Killarney, while Maid carried over every night during the present glut.

Peter Reinberg and the Evert brothers returned Sunday morning from Duquoin, Ill., with so many quail that Leonard Kill had to meet them at the train with the automobile.

C. W. McKellar is receiving daily consignments of gardenias which are of good quality and which he says sell excellently.

Frank Beu has named the bronze pompon chrysanthemum which he has been growing for several years, calling it Mrs. Beu.

E. H. Hunt calls attention to the fact that there is no more talk of a shortage of chrysanthemums for Thanksgiving.

Leonard Kill is well pleased with the reception given the Mrs. Marshall Field rose at the St. Louis flower show, where it was an attraction second only to the interest with which it was viewed by the visitors to the Chicago show. It took first in the "any other variety" class.

John Tait, foreman for Weiland & Risch, was run down by an automobile while crossing Ridge avenue in Evanston Sunday evening. He was thrown ten feet and appeared badly injured, but the automobile did not stop. He will be around again in a few days.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says he has been figuring on how the growers are coming out this month and finds that they are producing about fifteen per cent greater quantity than at this date last year, and receiving at present nearly twenty per cent less money; but he looks for a radical change in the market when winter days strike in.

George Reinberg is cutting lightly during the glut and Joseph Forester congratulates himself that they likely will get their heaviest crop when the market is least well supplied.

J. A. Budlong's people report that it is the first time this season when business has not been running well ahead of last year.

John J. Kruchten says he has no fault to find with market conditions. While prices are low, he steadily is increasing his business. He did not cater to the shipping trade last winter.

Wietor Bros. say that not only will they have chrysanthemums in plenty for Thanksgiving, but that some of the late sorts will be holding on until well towards Christmas. They are this year again buying all the new sorts in sight.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, says they have been particularly favored this week, in that the shipping demand has kept them well cleaned out each night.

W. W. Barnard Co. says there is enough bouquet green so that no florist need lose any sales because of inability to get the goods.

Julius A. Peterson, Jr., of Cincinnati, son of the well-known plantsman, is taking a course in cut-flower growing at Morton Grove with the Poehlmann Bros. Co. Later he intends to see how growing is done in the east and then join his father and brother in the business at Cincinnati.

A. Lange has taken up the burdens of the Wilson avenue passengers of the Northwestern elevated, who think the Ravenswood people are favored, and will see what he can do to reform the service. He was left to cool his heels on the platform the other evening, and got hotter and hotter as the Ravenswood trains went by.

Among the week's visitors were Thomas Joy, of Joy & Son, Nashville, Tenn.; W. T. League, of Hannibal, Mo.; A. B. Silliman, of Boone, Ia., the mistletoe man; Edward Fulle, of Fulle Bros., Richmond, Ind., who reports they have bought the old Gift place and are moving the houses to add to their own range.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business showed no improvement last week. Though quite a little funeral work was done, there was entirely too much stock in all lines. Prices of roses have gone down to almost nothing. Carnations and fancy mums are holding their own. Quite a few extra good mums are coming in. Carnations are not in oversupply; whites are plentiful, but colored stock is a little scarce. Rose-pink Enchantress has the call for fancy.

Paper Whites are coming in, Connon, of Webster Groves, being the first with them. These sell well. Valley is dragging. In green the market is, as usual, well supplied.

Club Meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Florists' Club was held November 14. President Young made great efforts to have all the visiting florists present. In this he succeeded well. Including the visitors, the attendance was over fifty.

Henry Jennemann, of Webster Groves, was elected to membership. Two applications for membership were filed, those of Charlie Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., and A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, Ill.

Dispensing with the regular order of business, the chairman called upon several of the visitors for a few remarks. Among them were: S. S. Skidelsky, who spoke on the coming national flower show; J. J. Karins, Herbert Heller, Dr. A. S. Halstead, A. F. Longren and Walter Retzer. The question box led to quite a discussion on how to advertise and run a flower show to make it a financial success. This will again be taken up at the next regular meeting of the club.

At adjournment the visitors and members were requested to go in a body to the cafe below, where forty sat down to a turkey lunch with other refreshments and cigars. The speakers were W. W. Coles, P. J. Hauswirth, George Asmus, S. S. Skidelsky, J. F. Ammann and J. J. Karins.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis Horticultural Society tendered the visiting florists a banquet November 13, in one of the large rooms in the hall where the show was held. The executive committee, composed of ten members, was present, and all visiting florists. F. W. Brockman acted as toastmaster. Speeches were assigned to James Wilson, P. J. Hauswirth, E. H. Mann, S. S. Skidelsky, W. W. Coles, Andrew Meyer, Sr., Leonard Kill, August Poehlmann, O. G. Koenig and Fred H. Meinhardt. The affair was most enjoyable. The same night the local ladies gave a theater party to the visiting ladies, Mrs. Leonard Kill, of Chicago; Mrs. J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati; Mrs. M. S. Vesey, of Fort Wayne; Mrs. J. S. Wilson, of Webster Springs. The hostesses were Mrs. H. G. Berning, Mrs. Fred C. Weber, Mrs. Theo. Miller, Mrs. John Steidle, Mrs. Rotenhoefer, Mrs. J. J. Beneke and the Misses Meinhardt, five in number. All the ladies carried large blooms of chrysanthemums. Eddie Foy, the comedian, in the play commented on the florists' ladies being present.

November 13 Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Kill, of Chicago, entertained a party of friends at supper at the Jefferson hotel. Their guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Berning, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Beneke.

The Foster Floral Co. had the floral decorations for the opening of the new department store of Scruggs-Vandevort and the Barney Dry Goods Co., at Tenth and Olive streets. A number of other florists had floral designs to send.

A. G. Greiner had a fine display of cacti at the flower show. Mr. Greiner says he will prepare a great display at the national flower show at Chicago next November.

Kelley & Petschonek have bought out the Eggeling Floral Co. branch at Delmar and Kingshighway. Mr. Kelley was formerly with Ostertag Bros., and Mr. Petschonek was the bookkeeper for the Eggeling Co. These two young men should do well, as they have one of the best stands in the west end.

Julius Koenig has left the employ of the park department and is now with Ostertag Bros.

J. W. Dunford has bought the controlling interest in the Gallagher Floral Co., on Page avenue, which will be run as a retail store.

The local rose growers had quite a discussion during the week as to which was the best new rose exhibited this year. Among those mentioned were Reinberg's Mrs. Marshall Field, Hill's Rhea Reid and Princess, Poehlmann's Mrs. Potter Palmer, Scott's Mrs. Jardine, Heller's William R. Smith, and the Cardinal. This subject will be taken up at the next club meeting. J. J. B.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Conditions remain about the same as last week. Mums are still a glut and are selling cheap. Roses are more plentiful and everything seems to move slowly. Quite a number of the downtown florists are complaining about there being little doing.

Southern holly has arrived. This week one of the Walnut street stores had a large window elaborately decorated with it, making the appearance of Christmas.

Various Notes.

A visit to the greenhouses of the William Rock Flower Co. found everything, as usual, neat and clean. They are cutting quite a fine lot of roses. Their carnations are looking well, but the main crop will probably not be on by Christmas. They also have a fine bench of new seedling carnations of their own. As they were not all in bloom, we could not say much about the colors, but the growth looked strong and healthy. They have no success with the Lawson carnation, but grow Nelson Fisher in fine shape. They have four houses 27x240 in carnations, and all are in solid beds, and to see them will convince anyone that this way of growing is as good as on raised benches. They are forcing about 500 valley each week. They have fourteen men working on the place and all seem to keep busy.

To see Samuel Murray's greenhouses is a treat to anyone. It is a special treat to see his fine Gloire de Lorraine begonias. He has about 500, and all in bloom and in excellent shape. Almost any pan or pot would answer for a show plant. Mr. Sharp, the grower, is proud of his begonias, and truly he has a right to be. They also have a house of very fine Whitmani ferns.

R. S. Brown, now over 70 years of age, is as busy as any young man working among his plants. Their mums are fine and large, but they are almost sold out, selling them mostly wholesale, supplying the downtown stores. They have some fine specimens of Pandanus Veitchii, being the largest in the city.

We found Nelson Jarrett quite busy planting pansies. He says that he will plant about 40,000. His new coldframes on the south side of his new greenhouse make an ideal place for pansies. His propagating bench is full of cuttings of all kinds of plants. He now has plenty of room for plants in the two new large houses, and it will take him all winter to fill them. The heating apparatus is working splendidly. Mr. Jarrett did the building of the greenhouses and also put in his own boilers and piping. He has surely done well this summer.

Charles Humfeld, of Clay Center, Kan., visited the florists of this city last week. He also visited George M. Kellogg's place at Pleasant Hill, Mo. He was accompanied by his grower, Rudolph von der Ruhr, and Ed Humfeld, of this city. They report a good time and a fine day.

They say that Mr. Kellogg's place is in excellent condition. The verbena king says that business is quiet in Clay Center, but he is looking forward to a good trade for spring. He is making large preparations to meet all demands.

We are sorry to have to report the death of Miss Julia Dalley, who with her sister, Miss Maria Dalley, formerly conducted a flower store on Eleventh street near Walnut. They have not been in business since last spring. The building their store was in has been torn down and is being replaced by a larger one. Miss Dalley's funeral was held at the Trinity Episcopal church, Friday, November 15. Miss Dalley leaves a large circle of friends. The high esteem in which she was held was shown by the profusion of beautiful floral offerings.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Mrs. Robt. B. Stiles, of Petersburg, Va., has recently completed a fine range of glass upon her new property. Business is good, with prospects of an active season. Judging from present appearances, it will not be long ere all stock will be grown right at home.

Henry Steinmetz, of Raleigh, N. C., has added new houses and rebuilt several old ones. A leader with him is Magnolia grandiflora, of which he raises a big stock in all sizes.

J. L. O'Quinn & Co., of Raleigh, report an excellent season, with increasing demand for high-class stock.

The Dillworth Park Gardens, of Charlotte, N. C., cater to the best trade and make an attractive display, which catches and pays.

Chas. A. Moss, of Spartanburg, S. C., is considering the purchase of a fine location, with the intention of either removing his old plant or building a new one. He reports a splendid business and says some of his success is due to the up-to-date ideas conveyed through the columns of the Review. He gave a mum show recently and had specimen blooms that would have taken premiums at the big shows.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Last week was one of disappointments, as business was just about as bad as it could be. The business of the stores was practically at a standstill and, with a large quantity of stock coming into the wholesale houses every day, prices started toward the bottom. It was not until Saturday that there were any signs of a relief. Then a fairly good demand made itself felt, and large quantities of flowers were moved off at good prices, especially when compared with those of a few days previous. There was no demand for funeral flowers or any other kind, and though we expect a let-up in business at this time of the year, still we were not quite ready for what happened. The demand is not much so far this week, but it seems that the glut of mums is over and that those left will be very good stock.

Roses of all varieties, with the exception of Beauties, are coming in heavily, and many go by the job lot. Carnations are still holding their own, with the exception of whites, which are moving slowly. Carnations are beginning to come more strongly, and it looks as if we will be well supplied with them for Thanksgiving. Violets are increasing in supply and selling fairly well. Other flowers are about as last reported. Boxwood will soon be in the market, and, judging from the advance orders, it will be much in demand this season.

Various Notes.

Henry Smith, of Grand Rapids, is sending some good mums to this market.

C. P. Dieterich & Bro., Maysville, Ky., are in with single violets that are good and sell well.

Ed Ellison, who for many years has been conducting a small range of glass on Biddle street, Clifton, one of the suburbs of this city, has settled up his affairs and left for England. He is a native of that country and for many years has been planning to go there to spend the rest of his life. He was quite a character among the florists of this city and was well known by all of them. He made roses a specialty and grew La France as his main crop, which he did especially well. He never changed the stock, but grew the same plants year after year. For years he has lived in the potting shed, with no other companions than his cats, of which he had a great many. He made a good deal of money at the business, but spent it all trying to perfect some sort of a boat, which proved to be a failure.

J. T. Conger, of Hartwell, O., was elected to the council in that city at the last election.

Weiland & Olinger have made a fine record at the fall shows, in several beating

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions have slightly improved when compared with those of a week ago. There are not so many chrysanthemums coming into the market, and the demand, particularly from out of town points, is better. Business is still far from brisk, however. The prices realized are low and uneven, some good stock being unsold. Not so much is wasted, the fakers being more in evidence.

The midseason varieties of chrysanthemums have pretty much disappeared. The late sorts are now taking their place, Bonnaffon, Eaton, Chadwick and Mrs. Jerome Jones being the principal yellows and white, while Maud Dean and Adelia, pinks, are to be seen in limited quantities. The pompons are now at their height, Lulu, Klondike, Briolus and Quinolia being almost as familiar in the market as the Major and Timothy. Singles, too, are having their inning, a fine white, resembling a daisy, being prominent.

Not a great deal can be said about the general list of flowers. Sales are disappointing, and there is little to enthuse over in the market conditions of today. Good judges confidently predict an improvement by November 25, when the season will open in earnest. The fine growing weather of the last fortnight has greatly improved the quality of much of the stock coming in. White violets have made their appearance.

Fancy flowers are selling; ordinary flowers not.

Bulb Planting Season.

The bulb planting season has been rather late this year. It is now fully under way. The seed houses are receiving many orders for tulips, hyacinths and daffodils, to be planted in the beds that have been filled with geraniums and other soft-wooded plants during the summer. At Fairmount park, the extensive planting of bulbs has just been completed. The parterre, or sunken garden, is filled this year with 80,000 tulips, planted six or seven inches apart, to assure a good effect. The varieties used are Artus, Chrysolora, La Reine, Rose Grisdelin, Cottage Maid, Keizerskroon, Proserpine, L'Immaculee, Wouwerman and Duke of York. They are planted chiefly in solid beds, laid out on the turf. The festoons on the side of the parterre are, I think, in red and white, Artus and L'Immaculee. At the east end a new arrangement has just been completed. These beds are planted in fancy tulips, chiefly.

The Latest Move.

The event of the week in wholesale circles is the removal of W. E. McKissick from 1221 Filbert street to 1619 and 1621 Ranstead street. The move was effected at night, business being conducted in the old place one day and opened in the new place the next morning. The move was made to secure better facilities. The new establishment has a floor space of 30x51 feet, with a gallery running around it. This will be utilized for the stock of florists' supplies. A cold storage room 16x16 feet is built and regulated on the modern lines.

W. E. McKissick started work with Samuel S. Pennock in 1893. Seven and one-half years later he resigned his position and soon after accepted one with Leo Niessen, becoming vice-president of the Leo Niessen Co. when the business was incorporated a few years later. Mr. McKissick resigned June 30, 1905, and on September 4 of the same year started in business for himself in the building he has just vacated. Mr. McKissick is a hard worker, enterprising and resourceful. His business has grown rapidly, now requiring fifteen employees to handle the stock of his growers.

est. A schedule was laid out embracing visits to Glenside and Hatboro in the same afternoon, but other demands on the correspondent's time limited the first efforts to Glenside alone.

Victor Groshens, as is well known, was foreman for many years in charge of the Hugh Graham place at Logan. His management was recognized as most able in all the cultural details, and when Mr. Groshens started out for himself last spring, with a silent partner, great interest was manifested in his plant. Twenty acres of ground were purchased adjoining the places of A. Farenwald and Edward Towill. Here two splendid houses 28x500, open between, were erected on plans and with material furnished by the King Construction Co., North Tonawanda, N. Y. Mr. Groshens worked early and late to such good purpose that on the day before the glorious Fourth these houses, embracing something over 30,000 square feet of glass, were planted with 16,000 Bride, Bridesmaid and Richmond roses in solid beds, the number of plants being evenly divided between the three varieties. The roses have made excellent growth and promise well for the coming season, the Richmond being especially fine. Mr. Groshens modestly says that the soil of the locality is well adapted to red roses.

A fine boiler-shed, 50x50, with coalbin and springhouse adjoining, is nearly completed. Two eighty horse-power return tubular boilers are harnessed together, supplying steam through a main running across the centers of the two long houses, sloping from the center to each end, thus securing the best circulation. A 75-foot brick stack gives ample draft.

Mr. Groshens has large ideas, feeling that the day has passed when it is possible to secure results with a small start and that in order to do justice to his building he must have enough glass to become a factor in the Rising Eastern Market.

Various Notes.

There were a number of visitors in this city last week who went down to Robert Scott & Son's, at Sharon Hill, to call on Mrs. Jardine. Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa., made his second call. Robert Craig escorted William R. Smith, of the Botanic Gardens, Washington, D. C., who also paid his respects. Another caller was L. J. Reuter, of Westerly, R. I., seen once more in the City of Brotherly Love. A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., far famed as a grower of roses, and almost everything else, was there, too.

Herman Zimmer, West Collingswood, N. J., exhibited two fine chrysanthemums before the Florists' Club at the November meeting. One was Mrs. Perrin, the other Zimmer's Yellow. Credit should have been given before.

The floral photographs of Charles Henry Fox, now appearing in the REVIEW, have attracted much attention. Last week's debutante's bunch, which adorned the cover of the Thanksgiving number, was especially noteworthy.

William J. Moore, of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., is on the jury this week.

B. Eschner, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from a business trip. Mr. Eschner reports business conditions as improving in all the principal cities, the florists of Pittsburg being especially busy when he was there a few days ago. Mr. Eschner spoke with much pleasure of his visit to the wonderful Chicago show in the Coliseum, the finest thing of its kind ever held in this or any other country. The attendance was gratifyingly large.

John Crawford, well known in floral circles in this city, has joined the forces of Berger Bros.

Pennock Bros. had a beautiful window decoration this week, composed entirely of single chrysanthemums, yellow, white and an ideal shade of burnt orange. They were grown by Henry I. Faust, of Merion.

A letter received in this city from William P. Craig, who is in Chicago, states that Mrs. Jardine is making a hit in that part of the country. Mr. Craig will be home the end of the week.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have received heavy imports of moss wreaths, magnolia leaves, etc., by S. S. Armenia.

The William Graham Co., of 104 South Thirteenth street, and the Hugh Graham Co., of Logan, went into the hands of a receiver on Saturday, November 16. Both companies claim to be solvent. David Rust has been appointed receiver. The Hugh Graham Co. does a growing business in cut flowers and plants. This company is leased by the William Graham Co., which does a decorating and general retail business.

The F. R. Pierson Co., of Tarrytown, exhibited a beautiful specimen of the new Nephrolepis Superbissima, which attracted much attention at last week's show. PHIL.

ASHES IN CONCRETE.

For concrete foundations, sides of greenhouses and solid benches, is soft coal ashes and cinders just as good as crushed stone and sand? S. S. P.

A mixture of clean gravel and cement in the proportions of seven of gravel to one of cement is as good for foundations as there is any need for. For walls, sides of benches, etc., where there is an exposure above ground, there is nothing better than hard-coal ashes for a mixture. The proportion should be five of ashes to one of cement. This concrete is tough and firm and possesses the property of resisting the ravages of frost better than any other mixture that I know of. Soft coal ashes do not answer the purpose so well, as the mixture never seems to set to the proper condition of hardness. RIBES.

State of Trade.

Trade still holds up well, but the bulk of the business is done on mums. Most of the growers report that they are caught up nicely on their mums and all they have now can be held nicely for Thanksgiving, while some few growers report they are about cleaned up on mums. The outlook here for good mums, roses and carnations for Thanksgiving is satisfactory. Maids and Killarney have been badly off color for the last two weeks, but the growers say the next crop will be on soon.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met November 12, but the business part of the meeting was dispensed with, as the mum show was on and competition was very keen.

The committee appointed the following judges: Fred Windmiller, of Lancaster; Albert Hills and Fred Hohenstine, of this city. The following awards were made, to the entire satisfaction of all competitors:

Six cut blooms, three varieties, exhibition, C. P. Torrey, first on Appleton, May Seddon and Merza; Munk Floral Co., second on Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick and Golden Wedding; Fifth Avenue Floral Co., third on Chadwick, Morel and Appleton.

Three cut blooms, three varieties, exhibition, C. P. Torrey, first on May Seddon, Merza and Beatrice May.

Six blooms, six varieties, commercial, S. T. Stephens, first on Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Dean, Eaton, Niveus and Enguehard; J. H. Williams, second on Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick, Bonnaffon, Eaton, Appleton and Byron; Munk Floral Co., third on Wedding, Byron, Dean, Chadwick, Bassett and Bonnaffon.

Three cut blooms, three varieties, commercial, Munk Floral Co., first on Maud Dean, Golden Wedding and Alice Byron; S. T. Stephens, second on Enguehard, Byron and Yellow Eaton.

Nine cut blooms, three varieties, commercial, Munk Floral Co., first on Chadwick, Yellow Chadwick and Golden Wedding; E. Metzmaier, second on Chadwick, Yellow Eaton and Maud Dean.

Three cut blooms, one variety, commercial, Fifth Avenue Floral Co., first on Chadwick; Munk Floral Co., second on Byron.

Six cut blooms in vase, commercial, special prize by C. P. Torrey, won by Munk Floral Co.

Twelve cut blooms in vase, commercial, special prize by the Fifth Avenue Floral Co., won by Munk Floral Co.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. sent up two large vases, for exhibition only, that were fine.

Various Notes.

The Munk Floral Co. has been cutting some extra fine mums, especially Appleton, and have been sending most of the cut to Cincinnati.

Underwood Bros. report business very brisk. They have had a big run on mums, but still have a fine lot of late ones.

Wm. Graff has been spending a few days in Chicago. He has been making a run on violets at 25 cents per bunch.

Trade has been rather quiet, although there is some fine stock to be had. Splendid chrysanthemums are offered and roses are of fine quality. Carnations are not plentiful.

Jacob Schulz recently had a public chrysanthemum exhibition at his store, which was a big success. The store was beautifully decorated and there was a great variety of chrysanthemums, carnations and roses artistically arranged. One of the special features was a pair of boxwood plants, trimmed and trained in the shape of geese. Ficus pandurata was a notable feature to the visitors.

John V. Bohrman is cutting some fine Richmond, Golden Gate and Perle roses and his place is in fine shape.

Henry Fuchs has opened a store in the Hopkins theater. The fixtures are light oak, with the refrigerator to match, and it makes a handsome store.

Fred Schulz, who has started in the wholesale business, reports business picking up.

C. B. Thompson is attracting attention with some elaborate show window decorations. H. L.

UNION CITY, PA.—The Union City Greenhouses, owned by W. J. Olds, were recently destroyed by fire. The loss amounted to $2,500, only a small part of which was covered by insurance.

MIDDLETOWN, O.—The greenhouses of Henry Behrens have been equipped with electricity. This is an improvement that is highly appreciated by customers who wish to select their purchases in the evening, as the houses are brilliantly lighted.

FORT COLLINS, COLO.—Espelin & Warren are building four greenhouses 20x85, on a tract of land leased from the city for a term of years. This firm had the decorations for the opening of the new store of the State Mercantile Co., November 14. Southern smilax, palms, ferns and chrysanthemums were used.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

VISITED NEW YORK: Charles H. Vick, Rochester.

ALL the Spencer type of sweet peas are shy seeders.

HAVE you secured the postoffice O. K. on your 1908 prize offers?

GERMAN grass seeds are now reaching this country in large quantities.

THESE are the days when the canner goes to the seedsman, not the seedsman to the canner.

HENRY NUNGESSER & Co., New York, issued their wholesale price list of grass seeds November 14.

EDWIN OYSTER has been appointed receiver for the Templin Co., Calla, O. The assets and liabilities each are said to be about $90,000.

How much space are you giving in your 1908 catalogue to cuts of "your not-for-sale face, your hardly-for-sale buildings," or your much coveted office and sales force?

THERE is genuine alarm as to the situation in sugar corns, but while late sorts are undeniably scarce, it is to be remembered that it always is darkest just before dawn.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture has figured out that the yield of corn this year is twenty-six bushels per acre, as against 30.3 last year, and a ten-year average of 25.4.

SEEDSMEN not only have this season to contend with short crops and high prices, but short supplies of money and high interest rates for carrying them to the time of turning the seeds into cash.

THE U. S. Department of Agriculture shows that in 1906 the United States imported 872,566 bushels of onions, 338,752 bushels of which came from England or its possessions, 205,121 bushels from Bermuda and 202,637 bushels from Spain.

CHARLES P. GUELF, of Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is visiting Chicago. He makes his headquarters at present at Columbus, O., and says that from his point of view it looks as though there will be pyrotechnics a little later in onion and sweet corn.

C. S. CLARK, Wakeman, O., makes a dismal report. "I very much regret to inform you," he writes, "that the late varieties for seed refuse to dry. Stowell's Evergreen and all late sorts are no drier than they were a month ago, due to cold, wet weather and an unmatured cob."

THE United States Department of Agriculture has issued a bulletin on "Roselle: Its Culture and Uses." The plant is an annual and the bulletin recommends it as a commercial crop for jam or jellies, and as a substitute for cranberry sauce. Only the fleshy calyxes surrounding the seedpod are used for this purpose. Botanically the plant is Hibiscus sabdariffe. Southern seedsmen will be interested.

so general throughout the entire list of garden peas and beans, small seeds of all kinds, and even flower seeds, as they are this year; but, on the other hand, there seem to be few absolutely total failures. It is a year of shortages sufficiently acute to warrant the steadily advancing prices which are being asked for every line of good seed stock.''

LIVINGSTON'S NEW TOMATO.

The Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., is enthusiastic over its new tomato, Livingston's Coreless, and feels sure it will take the place of many varieties now used for canning and catsup making, not even excepting their good old Stone. It is of large size, globe-shaped, full at the stem end, bright red, a strong grower and a big cropper. It always is free from the green core and is therefore an excellent table variety, although slightly more acid than Livingston's Globe. The flesh is firm, so that it is a good shipper.

The Livingston Seed Co. is widely known for its work with the tomato, to this house probably more than any other being due the present perfection of this fruit. In 1905 they sent out Livingston's Globe, which is an excellent thing, and in 1907 Livingston's Hummer, which has proved a winner. The 1908 introduction is in the same line of advance and these three are the result of the continuation of the careful work of hybridization and selection which gave to the trade and the country such standard sorts as Stone.

ENGLISH NOVELTIES.

One of the principal sources from which the American seed trade draws its flower seed novelties is the firm of Watkins & Simpson, London, and this year's novelty list from this house of world-wide connections shows the usual number of new varieties. The leading features are Eschscholtzia Dainty Queen and Godetia Crimson Glow, which have been previously mentioned in these columns. In addition there is Model, a new and distinct variety of ostrich plume aster which it is thought is a great acquisition as a border aster. The habit is compact and the plants are not more than six inches high. Mauve Queen is a new florists' cut flower aster, the color being described as a rich, pearl gray, nearly approaching the color of the Countess of Radnor sweet pea. The flowers are large, double and carried on long stems. It is in the Comet class and said to be perfectly fixed. Elegance is a new single aster in two colors, deep rose and pale rose, excellent for cut flower or garden use. Chrysanthemum coronarium Primrose Gem is a companion to Golden Gem, sent out by Watkins & Simpson last year. It is dwarf and compact, carrying well formed, double flowers of rich primrose. It is an excellent border plant and equally good for pot culture. Scarlet Beauty is a variegated-leaved tall nasturtium, the flowers a rich rose scarlet. It is said to be quite fixed in character. Crimson Beauty is similar to the above, except that the flowers are crimson scarlet. Several other variegated-leaved nasturtiums are offered and several new selections of Nemesia hybrida. Starlight is a new annual single sunflower, with petals twisted like the single cactus dahlia, thought to have much merit.

In vegetables Watkins & Simpson offer this season a re-selection of The Pilot pea and a new pea named Mars for main-crop work. They also call special attention to Green Sprouting broccoli, which the firm thinks has not received the recognition which its quality deserves.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $45,857.

WHOLESALE SEEDSMEN'S LEAGUE.

In the Review for November 14 occurred the following paragraph:

The last meeting of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League has helped out somewhat on the price question, but the unfortunate circumstance that only a sectional view of the situation is taken at the league meetings is thought by some to lessen the general value of its price lists.

To the concluding remarks, that the league takes a sectional view of the seed crop conditions, I beg to demur and to reply that, while most of the western seed merchants have withdrawn from the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, the eastern and middle state members of the board do anything but take a sectional view of crop conditions; quite to the contrary, they take a world's view, for, wherever located, they obtain portions of their contracted supplies from every section of the globe from whence garden seeds are shipped, and are in such intimate correspondence with American and foreign growers that no other men know more, and many not as much.

The men who compose the board of directors of the league are not influenced by isolated reports of crop conditions, good or bad, any more from Connecticut than from Kansas, any more from California than from Ohio, or any more from England than from Germany, for they are of far broader vision.

The suggested values of October 24 were very conservative, as who now would be willing to sell many seeds at the prices then proposed? In their wide experiences the directors of the league have heard the cry of wolf too often to be stampeded by bulls in the market, growers of onion seed, sugar corn, peas, beans and some other things.

The values of the league lists are marked by the very general desire of seedsmen not members of the league to get possession of copies.

Burnet Landreth, Sec'y.

JOHNSON'S NOVELTIES.

The firm of W. W. Johnson & Son, Boston, England, is prolific in novelties and this year sends out its customary list. American seedsmen feature many of Johnson's new things in their catalogues and will be interested in this year's offerings, first of which is the Perfect pea, a selection from Daisy but growing taller, with deep green pods produced in pairs. It is said to be a large cropper. The new Cos lettuce Emperor, Johnsons place in the front rank of Cos lettuces. It is of large size, hearts well and is of fine flavor; especially good for exhibition work. Mars is a new marrowfat pea offered for maincrop work. It is of robust growth, bearing large, dark green pods in pairs, each pod containing eight to ten large, dark green peas. It rather resembles Glory of Devon. This is an introduction of Barr & Sons, which Johnsons endorse. First Crop is a new cabbage, the earliest of all the pointed varieties, which Johnsons say they are convinced is distinct from any other on the market at the present time. It produces solid hearts sooner than any other sort known to them. The Perfect Longpod bean contains nine beans in many pods. Their stock is said to be limited. Perfection cauliflower is of the class with Veitch's Giant, but the plant is only about half the size. It is quite a month earlier than Eclipse. The pure white heads are well protected.

ASTER SHOW IN ERFURT.

A very nice and interesting little autumn aster show was arranged October 13 in that well-known German horticultural town of Erfurt, by the local union of horticulturists. Not only a number of Erfurt firms sent their exhibits, but some of our best known and leading German growers of herbaceous plants, as well, took part in it. I mention some of them: H. Junge, Hameln; G. Arends, Ronsdorf; Goos & Koenemann, Niederwalluf. All of these have made the growing and improving of autumn asters, besides other herbaceous plants, a special line of their business.

The flowers of autumn asters of all varieties were arranged in a great number of vases on a long row of tables and presented a very fine sight by their freshness, difference in color and form. H. Junge, of Hameln, sent some very good new varieties, of which Abendröte,

AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Veitchii.

The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn.

In size the leaves are small, beautifully dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump.

This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

with its lovely pink-red color, was most admired. Other good novelties of the same exhibitor were Rosalinde, Christobeles and Gartendirektor Trip. Several local firms, such as J. C. Schmidt, F. Sturm and Weigelt & Co., showed by some beautiful designs, wreaths and hampers, entirely composed of autumn asters, what these flowers are worth in the hands of a clever florist.

The number of varieties sent was very large; all were properly labeled and so gave every friend of these beautiful autumn blooms an opportunity for a close study of, and acquaintance with, the best old and new sorts.

I do not doubt that in a very few years autumn asters will be used in parks and gardens on a much greater scale than is the case at present. A very good and faithful friend of them died only recently, F. Trip, the superintendent of public parks in Hanover. He was a great admirer of all autumn asters and used them with great skill quite largely in the decoration of the places under his care. Many a landscape man was able to benefit by a visit to the public parks of Hanover in the months of September and October, when all the autumn asters were in full flower. W. H.

GRASS SEED CROPS.

The following is a portion of the grass seed report of the house of L. C. Nungesser, Darmstadt, Germany, which has been in the business since 1775, issued October 25:

Of Agrostis stolonifera and capillaris-vulgaris the area under cultivation is considerably smaller than last year, and, as the bad weather has sadly affected this species, the crop is small. The market has already opened with high prices, with certainty of an advance, as last year's stock is exhausted.

Alopecurus pratensis yields a poor crop of satisfactory quality. The cleansing of the original seed as delivered by the growers is exceedingly tiresome and wastes much time, in consequence of the maiden seed containing much Aira caespitosa, which can only be separated by specially constructed machines, and occasions a loss in weight of fifteen per cent to twenty per cent. The first-class qualities therefore command high prices. The power of germination is fair.

Avena elatior produces a small medium crop of satisfactory quality. Avena flavescens only cropped in a few favored places and will not meet the demand.

Bromus inermis yields only a short crop, prices being higher than last season's.

Cynosurus cristatus has hardly yielded a medium crop. Cutting was late and the seed could only be housed under difficulties.

Dactylis glomerata in New Zealand is forty to fifty per cent less than in former years. The quality is choice, but the prices asked are exceptionally high compared with previous years. America reports an average crop and demands equally high prices for choice parcels. France promises a medium crop, whereas Austria and Germany cannot supply more than small quantities.

Festuca duriuscula and ovina show for a medium crop, the quality of which is most variable, as considerable portions were got in during wet weather. The germinating power has also suffered.

Festuca ovina angustifolia has turned out badly everywhere, so that only small quantities will be offered, for which collectors will demand high prices. In Festuca pratensis, according to official reports from America, the area of cultivation has been still further reduced, so that the total crop will turn out much lower than formerly. The prices, which opened reasonably, have already experienced a noticeable rise, which may be expected to advance yet. Festuca elatior has a poor crop and is estimated to produce about two-thirds of last year's yield. Festuca heterophylla is almost a failure, and has only been harvested in quite insignificant quantities.

Lolium perenne also shows poorly against former yields. The unfavorable weather prevented a normal development, so that the grounds were behindhand and poor, the consequence being that the weight is very low, and the average will certainly not exceed twenty-three to twenty-four pounds per bushel.

Lolium Italicum also suffered in the United Kingdom from unfavorable weather, whereas France has a much better crop of good quality.

Poa pratensis is a moderate yield, and yearling stocks are said to be available. The market opened exceedingly high, and the prices are fixed and controlled by a syndicate. This seed was entirely sold out in Europe last season. Poa nemoralis is scarce, and high rates have to be paid to collectors. Poa trivialis is one-third less than last year, and prices consequently dearer.

Medicago sativa was last season cleared to the last seed, but prices opened comparatively cheap on the prospect of an average crop. A lively demand for the first lots thrashed forced the prices up to such a degree that today's quotations are 10 shillings per hundredweight higher than at the commencement of the season. Furthermore, the later arrivals suffered so much in color from wet weather during the harvest that fine, high colored qualities are rare, and it is impossible to foresee what price fluctuations this article will yet experience.

ASPARAGUS.

I would like to know if it is safe to set asparagus roots in Iowa late in the fall. I have always set them in the spring, but would like to replace the missing ones in an acre patch this fall, if it is safe to do so. J. F. C.

I have had but one experience in planting asparagus in the field in the fall. Having many vacancies in my old bed, I decided to transplant some nice two-year-old plants and fill all the broken ranks, but although they were carefully handled, and a nice rain came next day, I lost nearly all of them and had to fill in again in the spring. Some growers report fair success in planting in the fall, but I have never seen this method practiced in this latitude. The better way by far would be to this fall mark the places of the missing plants, either by putting up small stakes or making a hole with a spade, and put in the plants next spring, when you are reasonably sure of getting them started. If the places are not marked this fall it will be difficult to find the right spots in the spring. Two-year-old plants will be found best for filling in. H. G.

NORTH MILWAUKEE, WIS.

A Visit to the Carnation Houses.

While North Milwaukee is not booked as a beautiful suburb for dwelling purposes, still it is on the map as a manufacturing town and is noted for the high grade stock of carnations that is grown in its neighborhood. A visit to the different establishments certainly was a treat.

The carnation stock of the new firm, the Mueller, Schrader Co., Inc., is in a fine, healthy condition and the good blooms show that Gust Mueller, the manager, pays the closest attention to all details that tend to success. The firm also has one raised bench of sweet peas, which look fine now, but no doubt will suffer for lack of head room later.

The place formerly owned by Mr. Johannsen, but now the property of the Wisconsin National Loan & Building Association of Milwaukee, was left to care for itself for a long period, but can now be compared to a street urchin who has been put in shape to attend Sunday school, for the place has been cleaned throughout and been planted with carnations and mignonette. With the exception of the Lawsons, the stock shows that it receives careful attention at the hands of Wm. Muel, the grower now in charge. The Lawsons, too, will come along by and by.

At the Manke Bros.' place nobody was at home, for everyone had gone to help William Manke, the junior partner of this concern, get started on the new road of life. It was on November 6 that he was joined in wedlock with Miss Ida Koepke, of Milwaukee. Our best wishes are with him. Their stock of Enchantress, Lawson, Bountiful and Cardinal is in fine shape, with a bench of Aristocrat looking especially thrifty. Here, also, is a raised bench of sweet peas which will soon butt up against the glass and not increase the returns as expected.

The long established firm of Wm. Edlefsen, with retail quarters in the city, will from now on be known as the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., having been incorporated with a capital of $15,000 and with the following members: Wm. Edlefsen, Rud. Leidiger and Arthur Leidiger. Mr. Edlefsen will retain the supervision of the growing end, while Arthur Leidiger will take charge of the retail department.

The up-to-date place of Nic Zweifel, which is never known to be off crop, is in its usual prime condition. The older varieties, such as Enchantress, Lawson, Bountiful, etc., are clean and thrifty, with plenty of buds of all stages to produce a steady output for the season. The newer varieties are well represented, such as Winsor, Aristocrat, Imperial, Pink Imperial and Beacon. The last named seems to hold its own and, as reported also by other growers, it is what it was cracked up to be. Winsor came rather short-stemmed at first, but, like Lawson, it takes time to get the really good stems. Aristocrat did not establish as quickly as it might, but is coming along nicely now. Another variety which is doing especially well is White Perfection. Of special interest on this place is the bench of seedlings, which contains very promising varieties in the Scott pink, red, cerise and white colors. There is also a violet sport of Nelson Fisher, which is a novelty and worthy of mention. Victory also has become a favorite red on this place, as it shows up better this season than last. Estelle is still an old standby. The little house of Ivory mums, which certainly did finely, will help some toward buying that automobile.

Leon S. Hines, a capable carnation grower, formerly with Nic Zweifel, is now located at Hinsdale, Ill., and Adolph Fuchs, lately with Mr. Bentzen at St. Louis, has taken his place.

Gene.

UTICA, N. Y.

In the election November 5 Frank J. Baker was elected president of the common council by a vote of 2,199 against 183 for his opponent, who sought reelection. The local papers print cartoons of the florist placing flowers upon the political grave of the local machine representatives. Mr. Baker is of the firm of C. F. Baker & Son.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—Joe Tosini says business is and has been good. The demand has been heavier than usual all summer and fall.

Nebraska City, Neb.—H. H. Cotton contributes a column article to the Tribune, of this city, entitled "The Message of the Rose," and pointing out the many uses of flowers as messengers of sentiment or sympathy.

PACIFIC COAST.

Horticulture on the Pacific coast is only beginning to awaken to its possibilities.

A. H. Burt, landscape gardener, of Spokane, Wash., is making a trip of 15,000 miles to visit eastern nurseries to get new ideas of landscape work and acquire information as to where stock may be had as wanted. He says Spokane has plenty of money and will pay the price of the best stock the country affords.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business continues quiet and the chances seem to be in favor of its remaining so for some time. A few bank failures around this region have not helped to liven matters at all, but the florists do not seem to be any harder pressed than other lines of trade.

Flowers are plentiful and the quality throughout is good. Mums are at the height of their season, and the outdoor stock, owing to the continued favorable weather, is first-class in every respect. The big football game last week cleaned up all the yellow varieties, but the demand for colors since then has been poor.

Indoor roses appear to be about the only exception to the general rule. There is a great scarcity of good pink and red stock, although Bride and Kaiserin are more in evidence. The prices of all such stock remain at about the same as those quoted during the last few weeks.

Carnations are good but cheap. They are probably twenty per cent cheaper than they were one year ago. Valley moves slowly. A few Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are seen, but the demand for them is light.

Smilax and green stuff of all kinds are plentiful and bring good prices. Red berries are more in evidence than ever and sell well. The street hucksters devote a goodly portion of their attention to them, together with Princess violets, which, by the way, are in good demand.

Various Notes.

E. W. McLellan & Co., of Burlingame, have leased the plant of Meyer & Co., also of that town, and will run the two establishments under one system. J. P. Gilmore has charge of the concern.

Fred W. Gautner is on a month's visit to Portland.

J. P. Breen is at present located in San Mateo. He will shortly leave on an extended tour of southern California.

E. E. Grotting, well known in landscape gardening circles, has removed to Berkeley.

C. C. Morse & Co. have completed two new plant houses on their grounds at Glen Echo.

The Hazzard Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, has planted heavily of Bride gladiolus for next season's trade.

Charles Beebe, late of Trumbull & Beebe, is in Goldfield, Nev.

The Wickstrom Floral Co. is located in an attractive store in Eddy street, near the corner of Van Ness avenue.

Charles Stropmire, a florist from Darby, Pa., on a visit to California, was badly mangled by a train at Sixteenth street station, Oakland, November 11. With his skull crushed in, his right arm crushed and all the fingers of his left hand cut off, he picked himself up and in a half-dazed condition made his way to the depot and asked for assistance. He was hurried to the receiving hospital and at last accounts was still alive. G.

RED BERRIES.

The trade in red berries bids fair to be larger than ever this season. Already Frisco retailers are being pestered by the farmers and green-goods hucksters to place orders for the season's supply. The red-berry industry results in the handling of hundreds of tons of the Heteromeles arbutifolia yearly and with a great many farmers is one of their chief sources of income. Up to the present time the weather has been favorable for the ripening of the berries and large, bright, plump bunches are the result. If the conditions remain good until the bunches are matured there will be little difficulty in harvesting any quantity of good stock. Should we get a few weeks of foggy weather, coupled with frost, the chances will not be so good for bright clusters. The foggy weather turns them black, but as fog only reaches to certain localities, the places far inland can always be depended on to produce good material. But this makes the handling and shipping more expensive and adds greatly to the cost.

The frost, unless it is very severe, does not spoil full-grown clusters, and if it does not show until late in the season, after plenty of growing weather, there is little to fear from it. The present season, however, has been backward in the fact that there has been little warm weather anywhere on the coast, and as a result the berries are not so far advanced as they usually are at this time. However, up to the present writing the prospects are good.

Many worthless berries are sent to Frisco every year. This is not so much because they are poor when picked but because no judgment is shown in the packing. They should be packed dry. This is imperative, because if there is the least inclination toward heating the berries invariably fall off the stems and this renders them worthless.

Another good point is to have the berries so packed that they will not touch the sides of the box. This is the only way to keep them from bruising. Never put them in sacks or open crates. Always pack dry, in closed boxes. Do not cut them on too long stems, unless for some special purpose. The tendency to dry out is too great. If long stems are wanted, the boxes should be lined with burlap or paper.

Berries for shipment should not be picked too ripe or too green, as the color

WESTERLY, R. I.—John E. Howard has built a greenhouse and gone into the florists' business. He has also purchased the market gardening business which was formerly conducted by his father.

ATLANTA, GA.—The state entomologist is making trouble for local florists and shippers of greenhouse stock from outside the state because some of the provisions of the state's inspection law, drawn by men without knowledge of the trade, have not been observed.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE court proceedings in the effort to break the will of the late George Ellwanger are occupying a great deal of space in the Rochester papers.

THE Saturday half-holiday is becoming quite general in English nursery establishments, where it is found to in no way lessen the amount of the week's work.

STANLEY WALKER has bought the nursery of the Grand Junction Seed and Nursery Co., Grand Junction, Colo., and is building a greenhouse this fall, with the intention of building more in the spring.

THE Division of Foreign Markets, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., will in a few days issue a bulletin entitled "Ocean Freight Rates and the Conditions Affecting Them," which will be of interest to importers.

JUST as soon as the young wood on privet is ripe enough, cuttings should be taken and, immediately after they are cut, tied up in bundles and then buried in soil or sand in a cellar or some other cool place. It will do to bury the cuttings in soil outdoors, but it may be more convenient to haul them somewhere under cover.

IN moving and planting trees of any kind, it should be seen to that when the roots are broken or mutilated, those so mutilated or broken are cut with a saw or sharp knife (preferably a knife), to where they are unharmed. By doing this, conditions are made right for new and serviceable roots emitting from those operated upon. On the other hand, if the damaged roots were left unattended to they would most likely decay and handicap the tree in its effort to accommodate itself to changed conditions.

WEIR'S CUT-LEAVED MAPLE.

Weir's cut-leaved maple is in many respects a most desirable tree. When wanted for use as single specimens it requires little pruning beyond keeping to the desired shape, but when they are planted as street trees they will require to be kept cut back from the start. It stands cutting well. The foliage of this tree is ornamental and pleasing, while the branches, which are of a weeping character, are decidedly graceful. Weir's cut-leaved maple is nearly as rapid a grower as any of the maples.

The Norway maple is now, as it has been for a number of years, in greater demand than any other deciduous tree. It is doubtful if on the whole there is any tree so well adapted for planting in so many locations, varying in climate and other conditions. M.

FIRES NURSERY TRUCK.

Pedestrians in Ninth street witnessed an odd accident November 8, says a correspondent from Richmond, Va., when a heavily laden truck, drawn by a span of mules, rumbled down the hill from Grace to Main street with one huge hind wheel wreathed in flames and smoke.

The truck was loaded with half a dozen heavy cases of shrubs, trees and plants from the W. T. Hood Nurseries. The cases were consigned to several stations on the line of the Norfolk & Western. On account of the weight of the load the negro driver chained the rear wheels of the truck before descending the hill, fearing that the heavy burden would gather momentum on the steep incline and sweep the mules before it.

The friction of the steel rims against the granite spalls ignited the woodwork of one wheel before the truck had gone

FOREST POLICY IN FRANCE.

France has under way a far-sighted forest policy which will require two centuries before the work reaches its greatest efficiency. The plan covers the reforestation of vast tracts of denuded land and the work is in the hands of 4,000 trained foresters in the pay of the republic and a large number of men employed by the communal governments.

Consul-General R. P. Skinner tells how this work is being done by a great nation keenly alive to the necessity of doing it, and determined that it shall be done well, though years and centuries are consumed in the doing. Colbert, in the reign of Louis XIV., exclaimed, "France will perish for lack of wood," and his prophecy was coming true a century and a half later, when the French people waked to the peril which threatened them, and called a halt.

Their forests were vanishing as are those in the United States today, but the depletion had gone even farther than it has yet gone in America. France commenced protecting and restoring its wooded areas nearly a century ago, and has stuck to the task ever since, but so

FORCING RAMBLERS & HYBRID ROSES

FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well ripened. Roses potted up in the fall or winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard and force at your leisure. We recommend American-grown Ramblers. Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are a failure.

We offer exceptionally strong two-year-old dormant, low-budded stock (on Manetti), in the following varieties, true to name:

Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson, shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh-color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

Prices on Hardy Hybrid Perpetual Roses. 75c for bundle 5. $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. 25 at 100 rate, 250 at 1000 rate.

AMERICAN GROWN CRIMSON RAMBLERS

The Only Stock for Forcing.

Large plants, 2 to 3 feet, $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.
Large, heavy plants, two years old, 3 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10; $15.00 per 100.
Extra heavy plants, 4 to 6 feet, $2.00 for 10; $18.00 per 100.

THE BABY RAMBLER

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur. Strong field-grown plants, $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

THE NEW BABY RAMBLER ROSE

Catherine Zeimet. A very important novelty. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. An important fact is that it has the true rose perfume in a high degree. One of the best polyantha types to date. Fine forcer. 50c each; $5 per dozen; $40.00 per 100. Extra heavy, 75c each; $7.50 per dozen; $60.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grows as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free blooming qualities, etc. 35c each; $3.50 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

DEUTZIA

Gracilis. Pot-grown for forcing, $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.
Lemoinei. Pot-grown for forcing, $2.50 per dozen; $18.00 per 100.

much yet remains to do that Mr. Skinner says in his report:

"The work is slow. It will require probably 200 years to bring it up to its maximum effectiveness. But the time is foreseen when existing damaged forests will be reconstituted, and when all the waste spaces will be replanted to the point of proper proportion to insure the conservation of the water supply, and to furnish the timber and wood required by the population. The effect upon private landowners of this public work has been most salutary. Where absolutely bald mountains have been replanted, very surprising local results are now visible to all observers. This is especially true in the Hautes-Alpes, which had the unenviable reputation of being the poorest department in France, and is, in fact, one of the few from which the United States has received several thousand French immigrants. There are now many artificially planted forests in this department of twenty-five years' standing, and in the bottom-land below, conditions have so improved that a state of general prosperity prevails."

The plan of the French foresters is comprehensive. It embraces the care of forest land, planting of trees, fixation of dunes near the coasts to prevent the drifting of sand upon agricultural land, correction of mountain streams, regulation of pasture land, utilization of water in pastoral and forest regions, and the surveillance of river fishing and fish culture. This comprehensive service extends to every part of the republic.

The area of the national forests of the United States exceeds twenty-fold the national and communal forests of France, but the problems are the same. France has been longer at the work and when it began its forests were in a worse condition than ours are now, but not worse than our privately owned forests will be if present methods continue.

Consul-General Skinner concludes his report with this suggestion to those in America who have shown sufficient interest in the matter to write him on the subject:

"If correspondents could penetrate, as the writer has done, the almost inaccessible mountain villages of this country, and there discover the enthusiastic French forester at work, applying scientific methods which cannot come to complete fruition before two or three hundred years, they would retire full of admiration and surprise and carry the lesson back to the United States."

The Market.

Trade conditions are about the same as last reported. The market trade is dull, and the only hope is to get rid of the large quantity of chrysanthemums that are still on the market. Some of the growers realize that the thing to do next season is to only grow a small quantity of the choice varieties, such as the trade calls for, as pure white, pink and yellow. We find this year that the choice mums were quickly bought up, and at fair prices, while the next grades went dragging and at times were not sold at all. Some of the growers have certainly been up against it this season, and many mums are left in the houses to go to waste.

Roses are coming in heavily and selling low. Thousands of choice blooms are seen on Lexington street nearly every day offered at from 1 cent to 5 cents each. Carnations are still arriving in fair quantities and are moving nicely. Violets are getting to be plentiful, bringing their usual prices. Decorative house plants are selling fairly well, but are a little scarce. Our exchange is well stocked with nearly all kinds of flowers, and in a short time the retailer can secure his supply.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

There has been a decided falling off in the movement of all kinds of stock in the last week. Mums were coming in heavily and some good stock sold far below value. Carnations continue scarce, but, with plenty of other stock, the shortage is not noticeable. There is every indication of a scarcity of both roses and carnations when the mums are all cut, as carnations are especially backward with most growers.

Various Notes.

A visit to Lars Anderson's found everything in a promising condition. His carnations, of which there are five houses, are particularly fine. A house of poinsettia for Christmas looks very well. Quantities of Romans, Paper Whites and stevias are coming along for the holidays, and there is no question but that the high quality of stock from this place will be maintained.

Smith & Fetters are having an opening this week and are showing fine stock in quantity.

W. H. Kramer has two houses of carnations that will be just in full crop for the holidays. His Enchantress and Lawson are very good. A fine house of lettuce will be cut at the same time.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is sending in quantities of fine roses from its large range of glass. The Brides and Maids are second to none.

Visitors: Martin Reukauf, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co.; Henry Heepe, of Akron, O.; J. Vonder Linden, of Rhinebeck, N. Y. B.

INDIANAPOLIS.

With three free shows in progress at retail florists' establishments at one time it might be taken that they would hurt each other, but the experience last week proved it has the opposite effect, each show acting as a booster for the others. Of these exhibitions, those of Bertermann and Rieman were private undertakings, but the one at Wiegand's was assisted by the State Florists' Society.

E. A. Nelson has installed a Morehead steam trap. He says it works like a charm and that he sleeps more soundly and is putting on flesh; he does not see how he ever managed without it.

The Tomlinson flower market is a show in itself every Saturday at this season and trade there holds up remarkably well, considering all things, but prices are not now as good as a year ago. S.

ERIE, PA.—The Baur Floral Co. had its annual flower show last week in the Majestic building and attracted throngs of visitors.

DETROIT.

The Market.

There is little of special interest to tell concerning business last week. Of course some have been rather busy decorating, but the business in general has been dull. Many of the florists are complaining of trouble in making collections.

The football game at Ann Arbor created a big demand for yellow mums the latter part of the week, as pale blue and gold are the colors of the U. of M. The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange alone shipped about 500 to Ann Arbor.

While the good chrysanthemums remain well cleaned up in all colors, the poorer stock is piling up; in fact, there seems to be a scarcity of good stock this year. The stock of roses is about equal to the demand. Some fine Brides and Maids are arriving from Pontiac and Mount Clemens. With carnations it is about the same as with the mums; the good stuff sells at sight, while the poor remains for the fakers. Some fine ferns, this year's galax and fine leucothoe are on the market and meet with a ready demand.

Various Notes.

Schroeter's beautiful display of orchids in the window attracted so much attention that it was rearranged for another week.

The Breitmeyers had their annual chrysanthemum show November 14 to 16. Their intention was to hold the show this week, but having several large decorations on hand which would take all their time, the date was changed on short notice. For this reason the display of mums was not as elaborate from a florist's point of view as in former years, but still they had a fine display of the best stock to be had, and it attracted much attention. Some very neat engagement books were distributed to the visitors.

G. H. Taepke had his hands full with funeral work for the funeral of Mrs. Katherine Waltz. Mrs. Waltz died at the age of 74 years. She was the widow of Frederick Waltz, one of Detroit's first florists, and the mother of Mrs. Taepke and Mrs. M. Flammer.

Henry Ferguson, aged 12 years, died suddenly at the home of his father, Andrew Ferguson, November 12. The funeral took place the following Thursday. Among the floral offerings was a large piece from the Detroit Florists' Club.

The large conservatory at Belle Isle is attracting much attention with a beautiful display of chrysanthemums. There is hardly an hour in the day but what some customer remarks about this annual exhibition of flowers, and this goes to show that the flower lovers take an interest in such exhibits. H. S.

A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band

and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), in their original packing before we plant them in pots, at only 40c, 3 tiers, beautiful stock. You can sell them at once.

Last Spring's Importation

Grand New Double Daisy

A sport from that great money-making single variety, QUEEN ALEXANDRA, that everybody grows to a good profit. You can do better with this. The flowers are large, averaging three inches in diameter, and none of the flowers comes single at any time of the year. It blooms freely, either under glass or outdoors. Young stock, out of 2½-inch pots, ready for delivery January 1, $25.00 per 100.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There was no scarcity of stock along any line last week, and business in a general way has been fair, but with no excitement anywhere except at the street stands. They seem to be after one another. They make a new agreement every morning to keep all signs of low prices off their stands, but break it within an hour. During last week the signs read: Carnations 25 cents per dozen, roses 25 cents per dozen, and fine, big mums $1 per dozen. This looks strange at the present wholesale price of stock.

Various Notes.

David Aten, of Toronto, O., who has been very ill for some time, having had a large carbuncle on the back of his neck, is now able to be about again.

A traveling man remarked that H. Glenn Fleming, of Fairmont, W. Va., is the only florist he knows who could ride to work in his own touring car. Mr. Fleming is an auto enthusiast.

The Lake Newell Floral Co. is about to open a new store in East Liverpool, O.

E. M. Hall, Fairmont, W. Va., will take possession of a larger building, opposite his old stand, about December 1.

Thomas Fitzgerald, of Beaver, is putting up another large house.

C. W. Espy, of Brookville, has completed several new houses this fall.

J. H. Myers has opened a store, with a conservatory attached, at Tyrone, Pa.

A. A. Whitbred has opened a new store in Altoona, Pa.

Will and Arthur Hall, of A. W. Smith & Co., have the sympathy of their many friends in the loss of their mother.

B. A. Mick, of Wellsville, O., has moved down into the business part of the city. Hoo-Hoo.

We think the Review is beyond comparison with any other.—G. H. Hankele, Bell Mawr, N. J.

Marion, O.—F. E. Blake & Son held their fall opening November 8 and 9. The display of chrysanthemums was one of the finest ever seen in this city.

Girard, Kan.—Sourdry Bros. last week received a carload of glass from Chanute for their new extension to the greenhouse. The carload contained 375 boxes of glass costing $3.70 per box. The addition will give them 17,000 square feet of room and more than double the present plant. A new boiler will be added for heating and everything put in first-class shape for forcing the growth of green things to eat.

INDURATED FIBER.

Indurated fiber, which is simply wood pulp hardened by chemical process, is used for a multitude of things, but in no line has this material been more successful than in its application to the making of plant tubs, vases and various other florists' supplies. As a material for pots and tubs for growing plants, it is unexcelled. It has just the qualities required for this service: hardness, toughness, cleanliness and neatness. It is, besides, very light, and is of strikingly rich and handsome appearance. Add to this that indurated fiber tubs are inexpensive, being cheaper than wood tubs, even in first cost, and practically indestructible, and the superiority of this material over wood and earthenware at once becomes apparent.

Indurated fiber makes the most serviceable vases for exhibiting cut flowers on the counter, and is also made up into a variety of things useful to the florist, such as saucers, handy dishes, etc.

Cordley & Hayes, New York, who originated the application of indurated fiber to florists' furniture, registered the trade mark Fibrotta, under which name indurated fiber ware is catalogued by many supply houses. The rolling stand of this ware should be under every large specimen in every flower store. It consist of two steel crosspieces mounted on casters and carrying an indurated fiber saucer. The tub is placed in this, and the whole thing can then be rolled around safely and easily, without injury to floor or carpets.

ORNAMENTAL PLANTS.

[Conclusion of a paper by W. H. Taplin, begun in the Review of November 14.]

Among the ferns that are grown into larger-sized plants for house and store decoration we find a variety, there being some of the maidenhairs or adiantums, a number of nephrolepis, some pterises and an occasional representative of the tree ferns, among the most notable and satisfactory of the latter being Cibotium Schiedei.

Culture of Ferns.

These ferns are all grown in moderately rich earth, but are given just as much fresh air and light as they will stand, this resulting in a sturdy growth of fronds that will endure much more abuse than those that are grown in closely shaded houses and potted in light soil.

The methods of propagation vary with the species, some being gotten from divisions of the crowns, others from runners, and those used in the small sizes for table ferneries being produced from spores almost exclusively.

As a business proposition, the fern department offers some inducements to the expert grower, but stock of this character must be of first-class quality to ensure a prompt and profitable sale.

The main crop of small ferns for ferneries is sown during the preceding autumn, the time required from the sowing of the spores until the seedlings are large enough for potting varying between six and nine months, the practice being to sow the spores while fresh, as some species lose their vitality by long keeping.

The supply of spores is usually a home product and requires the exercise of judgment in gathering and preservation. Palm igin, the howeas being brought from seeds are almost entirely of foreign or- Lord Howe's Island, arecas from Brazil and Cocos Weddelliana from the same country. Livistona Chinensis is sometimes home-grown, and is also sent from Cuba and South America, phœnix are rather widely spread, and Livistona rotundifolia is grown in Hawaii, though a native of countries farther south.

Other Ornamental Plants.

Ficus elastica and F. pandurata are both grown extensively in the florists' trade, and both are admirably decorative for the dwelling, besides being most enduring in foliage.

Dracænas in several species and varieties are also grown in quantity, the brightly colored varieties being especially in favor at Christmas time.

Crotons in many varieties find a ready sale during the holidays, those with highly colored leaves in which red, orange and yellow predominate being quite largely used in window decorations and plant baskets at that season.

Pandanus Veitchii is still grown extensively, and is more used than any other member of its family.

The dracænas, crotons and pandanus are all heat-loving plants, and with a rich soil and plenty of sun and moisture make rapid growth and develop rich coloring.

Brightly berried plants are in demand at Christmas, and for this purpose those most in favor are Ardisia crenulata, some of which are home-grown and some imported from Japan, and one or two species of solanums.

Insecticides.

Insects, and the means with which to fight them, are problems of interest to the commercial plant grower, and while progress has been made in this line, yet the perfect insecticide is still in the future.

Probably the most satisfactory remedies thus far are some of the nicotine preparations, the results from these having been better than from the various soluble oil preparations. The latter are more likely to injure tender foliage than the nicotine is when carefully used, but the disadvantage of the nicotine preparations is found in their high cost.

Fertilizers.

In the matter of fertilizers the progressive plant grower is also frequently experimenting, for soils vary so greatly that it takes time to find out the needs of each.

In palm growing, the best commercial fertilizer is one that contains a good proportion of phosphoric acid, but manures strong in nitrogen are also used to some extent, though an excessive use of the latter produces brittle stems and foliage.

Among the other plants briefly noted in this paper various manures are used, beginning with stable manure and running through bone dust, dried blood, spent hops, soot, nitrate of soda and others.

The future of the plant trade in this country looks encouraging, for the garden is a youthful institution in our land as yet, and its pleasures and possibilities are only beginning to be realized, and while the proportion of profit to investment is probably less than in cut flower growing, yet there is abundant room for all the well-grown plants that are likely to be offered for some time to come.

THE READERS' CORNER.

To Exterminate White Fly.

Will you allow me a few lines in regard to the white fly? Are plants salable covered with white flies and their eggs? I think not. I recently bought some Primula obconica which were badly infested with the white flies. Now, it seems to me that after so much has been said in the Review in regard to them and how to kill them, no man need have them in his greenhouses.

Let us rid our greenhouses of this troublesome pest. I have used hydrocyanic acid gas for four years and find it cheaper than other insecticides, for this reason, that on almost every lot of plants you get more or less of the white fly. But it seems that people are afraid to use it. Now, I will go to any greenhouse in the New England states and show any man how to use hydrocyanic acid gas for what the trip would actually cost me.

I have all kinds of plants in my greenhouses and have yet failed to see any plant injured by the use of hydrocyanic acid gas when properly used.

H. J. Blanchard.

Ashburnham, Mass.

Seeds of Lilium.

I would suggest to G. G., the Puget Sound correspondent whose inquiry appeared on page 13 of the Review of November 7, that he cover his beds of lily seed with a good mulch of excelsior, keeping it down with long pieces of scantling or light poles. This will keep the soil moist and keep down weeds.

BRONX PARK, NEW YORK.

The immense range of houses at the Bronx Park Botanic Gardens is worth inspection by anyone visiting New York. The houses are finely built, and from an architectural point of view leave little to be desired. The collection of plants was in better condition than I had expected to find them, and credit for it is due to A. Miller, the foreman in charge. The houses are much too large for their occupants in many cases, and are in almost every case insufficiently heated, although 6,000 tons of coal are consumed annually. The palm and New Holland houses contained some fine specimens, most of which have been donated from private estates, although a good many have been collected. The nomenclature leaves much to be desired. Oncidium ornithorhynchum is labeled epidendrum, cattleyas are labeled maxillaria, and vice versa, while a small and insignificant botanical orchid was labeled Odontoglossum Alexandræ. I was informed that the labeling was recently done by a botanist from the museum. I wondered while looking at this ridiculous nomenclature what the gentleman who recently donated his almost entire collection to the gardens would think could he but now view them and see how they are cared for. I interrogated several of the greenhouse men and found that the majority of them knew little about plants. The practical end of the business would seem to be discouraged here in many ways. The staff of men is entirely inadequate, their pay wretchedly small and their plant knowledge, with some exceptions, woefully deficient. The Bronx Botanic Gardens are intended to rival if not surpass Kew, but radically different methods must be obtained if they are ever to hold a candle to that institution.

An immense additional range of glass is soon to be built here. Money seems to be obtainable for every possible addition needed. It would be better, however, if more of it were given to the men who are to grow the plants, and not subordinate everything to botanical research. The system of placing plants in houses from each country should be changed. Plants growing at an elevation of 10,000 feet on the mountain slopes need radically different treatment from those growing in the hot valleys. The grounds at Bronx are extensive, beautifully wooded and very romantic. It is an ideal spot for a big botanic garden which should be to America what Kew is to the British Empire. It is fervently to be hoped that needed changes, which are apparent to any practical plantsman, will not be much longer ignored.

RICHMOND, VA.

Great strides have been made in this city during the last few years, the extent of glass being more than doubled within a decade. One of the most advanced firms along this line is Mann & Brown, who have a splendid location and have recently purchased the handsome store in which they have been located for some time.

Radcliffe & Tanner have just completed an up-to-date Lord & Burnham range within easy reach of their downtown store. They report excellent prospects.

W. A. Hammond is strong on orchids and violets, in addition to a grand lot of mums.

The Episcopal convention recently held in this city created an extraordinary demand for cut flowers. The Lord Bishop of old London was heard to remark that he had not seen during his whole travels finer Beauties, mums and orchids than were supplied by the local craft and grown right at home.

Wood & Sons report a good season, with prospects of an early seed sowing. Much of the cotton crop has not yet been harvested, owing to the open weather. The corn and peanut crops were very good. They think highly of the new cosmos, Lady Lenox, which should succeed splendidly in this locality. W.

MONTREAL.

We have been having various kinds of weather; rain, snow and sunshine, and at times very cold. Business continues brisk, luncheons, dinners and receptions filling up the time. Mums reign supreme, but carnations are good and roses and Beauties much improved. Valley and violets are abundant and of fine quality.

Miss Cairns reports business to be good. She always has a fine display of choice flowers in her window.

Mr. Hall, of Hall & Robinson, is the father of a baby boy, now about three weeks old.

E. Gurnsey is doing a fine business.

Mr. Robinson and Mr. McKenna recently paid a visit to J. Bennett, at Lachine, where they found everything in shape for the winter.

W. G. Pewtress has left Bennett's to take up another profession.

The Montreal Gardeners' and Florists' Club held its sixteenth annual mum show in the Victoria Rifles' armory November 13 and 14, an account of which appears elsewhere in this issue. Tommy.

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN PENNSYLVANIA.

How many 2-inch flows and how many 1-inch returns will be required to heat with steam a greenhouse 30x100, four feet to the gutters and fifteen feet to the ridge, with the ends all glass and twenty-four inches of glass in the sides? I want a temperature of 50 to 60 degrees. The outside temperature sometimes goes to 30 degrees below zero.

R. E. H.

To provide radiation for the house 30x100 with 2-inch flows and 1-inch returns, it will require three flows and twenty-seven returns, nine to each flow.

L. C. C.

CITY WATER PRESSURE.

I have two houses piped for hot water, with the downward system. I also have the city water under the middle bench of my north house. Could I attach this to the boiler and get more rapid circulation? The water has a pressure of sixty pounds. Would this be safe, with an old boiler and second-hand pipe?

G. A. T.

If you install a reducing valve, so as to place a pressure of not more than eight or ten pounds upon your plant, the boiler and pipe will probably stand it, but I doubt if it will be safe to use the full sixty pounds of pressure. The increased pressure will not increase the rate of circulation, but it will allow you to heat the water in the boiler to a higher temperature and thus make the plant more efficient. L. C. C.

PIPING IN COLORADO.

We desire to have a night temperature of 50 degrees in a house 20x85, with side walls four feet high; no glass in the side walls; glass in one end. We shall use hot water. How many 2-inch pipes will be necessary to keep up this temperature? The outside temperature occasionally goes down to 20 degrees below. How many more pipes would be required to have a night temperature of 60 degrees? E. & W.

To carry a temperature of 50 degrees, a 2½-inch riser under the ridge, with ten 2-inch returns, will be required. For 60 degrees, install a 3-inch riser and twelve 2-inch returns. L. C. C.

HOT WATER FOR SMALL HOUSE.

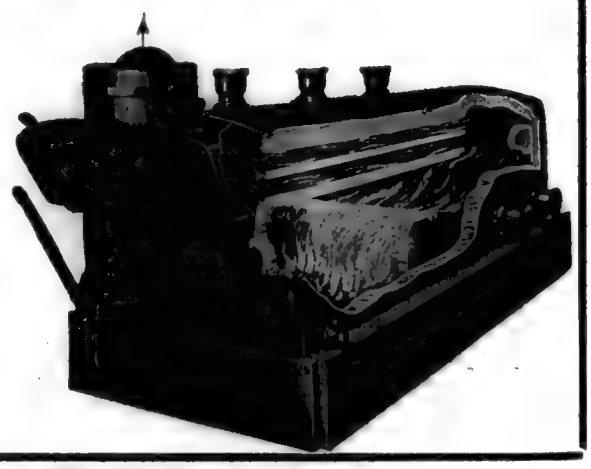
How shall I pipe for hot water, and how small a heater could be used, to heat a small greenhouse 14x21 and 9 feet to the ridge, in this Maine climate? The sides are four feet high and have no glass; there is one glass end. The house is exposed on all sides, and I would like to maintain a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather.

H. A. R.

To heat the greenhouse 14x21, in your climate, you will require a hot water heater rated to carry about 300 feet of radiation. The heating surface for the house can be provided by installing fifteen 1½-inch heating pipes under the benches. If you have two benches, these can be arranged in two coils, one containing eight and one seven pipes. One pipe in each coil would connect with the heater and go direct to the far end of the house and enter a manifold carrying seven pipes in one case and six in the other, these pipes to act as returns and to be gathered into manifolds at the end of the house nearest the boiler, to which the manifolds should be connected by pipes of the same size as the flow in each case. Connect a good-sized expansion tank with the main return close to the point where it enters the boiler, and give the tank as much elevation as can be obtained. L. C. C.

WATER PIPE USED FOR STEAM.

A simple experiment made at the Bell Mawr Greenhouses, at Mount Ephraim, N. J., by using a water pipe which runs through the center of the greenhouse for a steam pipe on cold nights, was a success. The length of this pipe is 200 feet, the full length of the hothouse. A valve is first placed on the water pipe where it enters the greenhouse, so as to keep water out when ready to use the steam. A pipe is then installed to furnish connection between the water pipe and the steam pipes, with also a valve in the center so as to keep the steam back when used for water. This end of the pipe is now completed and ready for steam, but it must be borne in mind that it must be a few inches higher than the other end, so as to drain all water out.



The other end may be adjusted in two ways, either by attaching a pet cock, always to be left open when used for steam, or by connecting with the return steam pipes, with a valve to keep steam out when used for water.

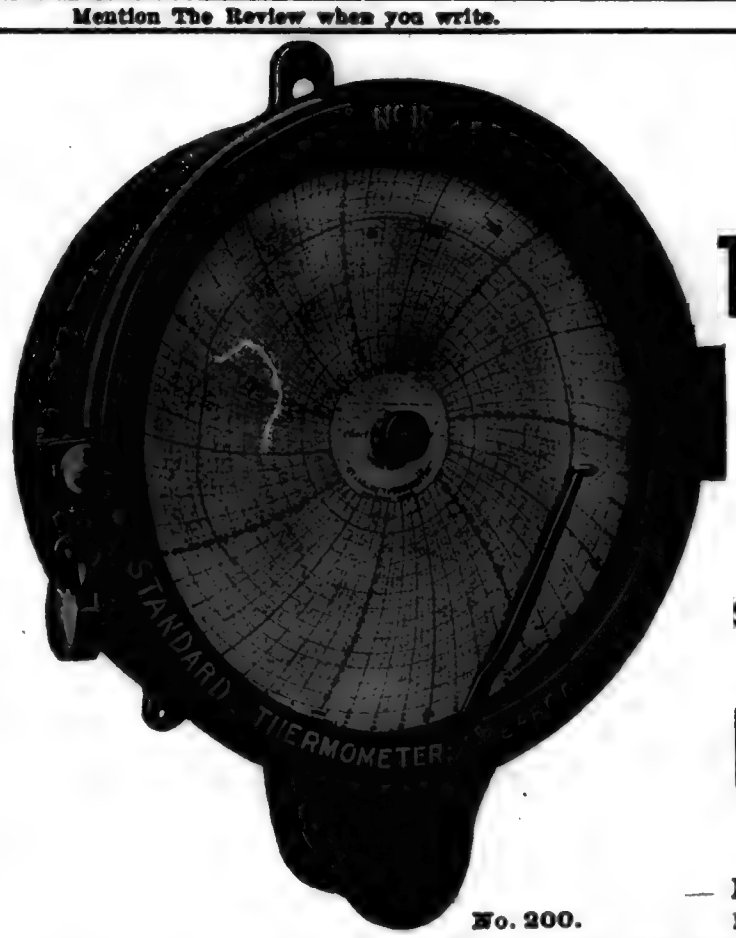
dent George H. Mellen as chairman was announced as follows: John M. Good, Leman Bradford, Charles W. Schmidt and Jessie M. Good.



As chairman of the program committee, John M. Good announced that the December meeting of the club would be a social session, and introduced Probate Judge Frank W. Geiger, who delivered an excellent address on "Civic Improvement."

At the conclusion of the paper by Judge Geiger the club and guests adjourned to the spacious mailing-rooms on the upper floor, which had been converted into a well-appointed banquet hall, with tables tastefully spread, and an appetizing supper was served by the ladies at the heads of departments in the office force of the Good & Reese Co.

Acting as toastmaster, President Mellen briefly outlined the object of the gathering and introduced W. H. Stackhouse, president of the Commercial Club, who spoke of the great importance and magnitude of the local plant industry and urged coöperation of all bodies toward the end in view. Paul Martin mentioned progress already made in adorning the schoolyards and the possibilities of accomplishing much through the school children, and P. M. Cartmell, ex-postmaster, related some ancient local history relating to the selection by the city fathers of Greenmount cemetery, now in the residential portion of the city and about to be abandoned, in preference to the logical and natural site now adorned by Ferncliff.

The four speakers were elected honorary members of the club, and as an outcome of this meeting with its addresses and discussion, the appointment of a special committee, and in view of the fact that John M. Good was recently elected a member of the city council from the Third ward, it is anticipated that there will be a concerted movement toward taking advantage of the exceptional natural advantages of our city. The motto of the commercial bodies has been "Make Springfield Flourish"; the platform of both political parties in the recent election was "Enforce the Laws," but the warcry of this club and its coöperating friends will be, "Make Springfield Beautiful."

The Washington Florists' Club was so well pleased with its first attempt at a fall flower show, made last week, that at a special meeting a guarantee fund was started for a much larger show next year.

James Hardy, who was formerly with Z. D. Blackistone and who recently started a wholesale commission house, expresses himself as well satisfied with his start.

the name of Fred Dormay. The new acquisition has been named for him. The exact color was difficult to ascertain under the artificial light, but it was found all around to be a good novelty.

C. W. Eichling had fine longiflorum and lilies of the valley.

Justin St. Mard exhibited J. B. Crane. This is not only a fine, large chrysanthemum, but Mr. St. Mard said it can be recommended as a good kind to be planted out in the gardens without disbudding, making a grand show during the fall months.

B. M. Wichers had some flowers of Frank Hardy, which were declared extra fine.

M. M. de Lapouyade had a bunch of Dr. Enguehard. The flowers measured sixteen inches in circumference. The foliage and stems were in proportion. Although coming a little late, this chrysanthemum could be, with good attention, a good sort for November 1.

The Metairie Ridge Nursery Co. had the most varieties, such as Dr. Enguehard, White Robinson, the old reliable, as H. Papworth said; Mrs. William Duckham, Mrs. T. W. Pockett, Convention Hall, Jerome Jones, White Bonnaffon, George W. Childs. The same company exhibited some fine American Beauty roses and a fine bunch of sprays of the vine Mina lobata, which have certainly an attractive appearance.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

The recently formed firm of Spaulding & Hodgson will, in addition to the running of a retail flower store in New York, next spring restock and run the greenhouses of the late firm of J. M. Hodgson. Mr. Spaulding is a son-in-law of the late J. M. Hodgson, and Charles Hodgson, the junior member of the new firm, is a son of the founder of the late firm.

Oscar Schultz was just putting the finishing touches on the second of his two new houses when he was appointed an appraiser of the Hodgson stock. This appointment gave him an opportunity to focus his eye on what he would be able to utilize in the filling of his houses. The result was that in a couple of days after the sale Mr. Schultz's houses were packed with palms.

There is quite a brisk demand here now for large plants of nephrolepis for shipment to New York for use in hotels. J. J. Leikens is a heavy buyer of these for such purposes.

Mr. Beard, of the late firm of Temple & Beard, nurserymen, is understood to have secured the contract of reconstructing and planting the Pembroke Jones estate on Bellevue avenue. This work will be a very large and important undertaking, requiring much manual labor and large quantities of material.

Wadley & Smythe, who have in the last year or two made great strides in their progress as landscape gardeners, have important work in Newport for attention in the spring. M.

Buffalo, N. Y.—Tony Wean, on West Delavan avenue, has been rushing the building of another new house.

Fremont, Neb.—At the flower show recently held in Masonic hall by the Fremont Flower Girls' Mission, the flowers were supplied and arranged by C. H. Green, proprietor of Green's Greenhouses. Chrysanthemums formed the chief part of the display and produced an artistic effect. The show was a success, financially as well as otherwise.

ROSE CARDINAL.

Cardinal is one of the varieties introduced by John Cook, and originated in his greenhouses at Baltimore. It took first prize at the Chicago flower show this year, entered in the class for forty blooms of any variety outside the old forcing sorts. The entry was made by Poehlmann Bros. Co., who supplied the flowers shown in the illustration. The photograph was made at the store of the E. Wienhoeber Co., Chicago, on the day of its recent opening. Mr. Wienhoeber called the attention of every visitor to this flower, because he thinks the variety an excellent addition to the list. The fragrance is one of its strong points. Mr. Cook recommended it as either a forcing or garden variety. It is a strong grower, with large crimson flowers, very full, and therefore possessed of excellent keeping qualities. The flowers photographed had been on display for two days at the time the picture was made. It is a hybrid tea. The Poehlmann Bros. Co. has found it quite free flowering. They began with only fifty plants, but have now worked up stock so that three benches are devoted to the variety. The luxuriance of the foliage is one of the most noteworthy points.

VENTILATION OF ROSE HOUSE.

Should rose house ventilators be kept closed on dark or misty days when the temperature runs as high as 70 degrees to 90 degrees? M.

The proper temperature for roses during dark weather is 60 to 65 degrees, with ventilation on whenever possible, so that there will be a circulation of air among the leaves, preventing a close, damp atmospnere, which is very detrimental to the health of the plants. Such an atmosphere causes them to become soft and thin in the texture of the leaves and makes them very susceptible to fungoid troubles.

Roses will not do well in a temperature above 75 degrees, and when conditions can be controlled, which is easily done during the period of firing, the mercury should not be allowed to rise above that mark. RIBES.

HYBRID ROSES.

We have not such a quantity of forced hybrid perpetual roses on the market as was the case a generation ago. Still there is always a demand for good flowers of this popular class of roses in the early spring, while nicely bloomed pots sell well, especially at Easter. To time the flowering period to a nicety requires considerable skill, but those who have mastered the science have invariably found that it paid them well. It is yet too early to speak of the forcing of these roses for Easter, but the present is an opportune time to pot up a good batch, the wood on hybrid perpetuals being now well hardened and ripened. Pots six and seven inches in diameter will hold strong, field-grown plants. Keep the roots from drying out before you pot them. Use a heavy, turfy loam for compost if you have it by you. Press the soil firmly in the pots, water well and leave outdoors a few days, protecting the pots with straw if severe cold threatens.

As a rule, no forcing is started before the new year, and the plants should be laid on their sides in a coldframe, if at disposal; failing this, lay them on a sloping piece of land, close together and protected well with leaves or strawy manure, to prevent the pots becoming broken. Lay a few pine or spruce boughs over the covering to prevent the wind blowing it away. No pruning will be needed until the plants are taken indoors.

If cut flowers only are desired, several plants may be placed in boxes six to eight inches deep and of any convenient length and width, and treated otherwise in the same way as the pots. For the best results plants grown all summer in the boxes are to be recommended.

A few reliable hybrid roses for pot culture are: Frau Karl Druschki, a magnificent pure white; Ulrich Brunner, still one of the best; Baroness Rothschild, General Jacqueminot, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Magna Charta, Marchioness of Londonderry and Mrs. John Laing. C. W.

PLANTED TOO LATE.

I have about 500 rose plants, consisting of Bride, Maid and Uncle John, that were planted last August, and I have not cut a bloom from them yet. They were planted in soil plowed last fall and hauled last spring. The soil was a loamy sod, with a trace of sand in it. The plants have been kept in a temperature of 58 degrees at night. There has always been a crack of air on at night and also one coil of steam pipe on. The plants look healthy and clean, but are small; they ought to be twice as large. They are growing, but very slowly. The soil at present seems to be full of roots between the plants. When I water I give them a thorough soaking, but it takes them a long time to dry out again. They are in a large, three-quarter-span house, and have received the best of attention. They get plenty of sunshine when we have it. I have been nipping the buds off because the plants are too small to bear. Can you tell me the trouble? Would cow manure water help any?

C. U.

Roses planted during August have lost the best part of the growing season, and if it was late in the month and the plants small they can hardly be expected to do much before spring.

If the plants are in a healthy condition they will be benefited by giving them liquid feeding in a rather weak form, but it will be a mistake to soak such small stock at this season, as evaporation is slow and the plants are not vigorous enough to use large quantities of water. A sprinkling of bone meal, applied to the surface and then stirred in about an inch deep, will do them a lot of good. This ought to be repeated once a month.

If these roses are on solid benches they have little chance to produce a crop before the spring growth commences.

Ribes.

SCOTT'S NEW ROSE.

The new rose, Mrs. Jardine, to which frequent reference has been made in the Review and of which a large illustration appeared on page 9 of the issue of October 31, is seedling No. 778, raised by Alexander Dickson & Sons, at Newtownards, near Belfast, Ireland, in 1902. It is a seedling from a seedling with only the best parentage, being a descendant of Liberty on one side. This seedling was selected by Alexander B. Scott on a visit to Newtownards in the following year and later brought over to this country, where it has been tried in the greenhouses of Robert Scott & Son, the American agents of Dickson & Sons, at Sharon Hill, Pa. Since its arrival in this country this new hybrid tea rose has behaved so splendidly under our adverse winter conditions that Mr. Scott has decided to send it out next spring, believing it to be a fitting companion for Liberty and Killarney, the only other introductions that the Messrs. Dickson have sent out for forcing purposes. It produced more and better flowers than Bridesmaid, on better stems, in Sharon Hill greenhouses during last season, and it held its color, a soft pink, during the dark weather of January and February when Bridesmaid and Killarney, under the same conditions, paled.

A little party of three met in the greenhouses of Robert Scott & Son one recent bright afternoon, to inspect Mrs. Jardine. They were Alexander B. Scott, who will grow Mrs. Jardine; William P. Craig, who will distribute Mrs. Jardine, and Phil, who will describe Mrs. Jardine. Mr. Scott, who has never sent out a poor variety on behalf of the Dicksons, confidentially asserted his willingness to stake his and their reputation on Mrs. Jardine's ability to do well under varying conditions and he further stated that he believes this variety will displace Bridesmaid in popular favor. William P. Craig has always associated himself with winners, Nephrolepis Amerpohlii being a striking example. Phil always believed that a plant to be described well must have merit or it will not arouse the writer's enthusiasm. Judge then.

A small house planted with Mrs. Jardine last August was first visited. The plants were barely rooted cuttings when benched and therefore were set close together. These plants had by November 1 made a top growth of about six or eight inches and were breaking freely from the base; on one plant four strong bottom shoots were counted. In another house a ground bed of Mrs. Jardine, planted in the end of July, was full of vigor, some of the ground shoots as well as some of the top shoots being sufficiently good to rank as specials, as Bridesmaid is said to do in the Philadelphia market. One house, 38x166, was filled entirely with plants of Mrs. Jardine of various ages, some grafted, some on their own roots. This house was a splendid sight; the flowers, whether on the special or on the lower grades, stand erect on stout stems. There was not a trace of spot or mildew to be seen. The color is a soft pink, on large, full flowers of an orange shade, beautiful under artificial light. It has been much admired by several of Philadelphia's most fastidious critics among the retailers.

Propagation had already begun. Quite a large batch of cuttings, which were in nice condition, were in the sand, while another batch had just been potted. The flowering wood will be propagated at the rate of about 5,000 or 6,000 cuttings a week until New Year's, when Mr. Scott will decide whether to continue propagating or to offer some of the flowers during the winter months in order to make his new rose better known.

Phil.

New Rose Mrs. Jardine.

AMERICAN DISCERNMENT.

It is curious how American rose growers have from time to time discovered special merit in European introductions before homesters, says a writer in an English exchange. The famous American Beauty is, I believe, a French variety named Mme. Ferdinand Jamin, and for winter work there is no rose that fetches such enormous prices. Liberty attracted little or no notice when first sent out by Dicksons, but the American glasshouse men proved it to be the best of its class, and their new Richmond is, I fancy, a seedling from Liberty. Dicksons' new Mrs. Jardine also promises to be an important variety in America, although I have heard little or nothing of it on this side. The New York Florists' Club has awarded it a preliminary certificate. Mrs. Jardine is a remarkably fragrant rose, it is said.

REPOTTING PHOENIX PALMS.

I have two Phœnix reclinata which require two strong men to handle them and they must be repotted. Would it be safe to remove part of the outer roots, in order to make the same size of tubs answer?

R. M.

The phœnix may have some of their roots cut away in order to keep down the size of the tubs, but after having such treatment they ought to be kept warm, moist and well shaded until the root action is brisk and growth is renewed. This operation, however, should not be performed until next spring, say about April, for most of the palms are now going to rest and will not renew active growth until the sun grows stronger.

ROTTING OF LILY BUDS.

We notice on a great many of our Harrisii lilies, which we are forcing for early December and Christmas use, some of the buds appear to rot when they are about three-quarters to one and one-half inches in length. The plants themselves are healthy; in fact, it seems to happen on the plants that look to be in the best condition. We have been forcing Harrisii lilies for several years and have never experienced anything like this. They are being forced in a temperature of 65 to 70 degrees and we would like you to tell us, to the best of your ability, the cause of this rotting of the buds.

T. N. Y.

This trouble is not uncommon and may be caused in several ways. Removing the plants when buds are small, and when plants have been subjected to strong heat, to a cold house will often cause a heavy loss in buds. Heavy feeding with chemicals before the flower buds show at all will also have a tendency to destroy them. If the bulbs have been properly ripened before being received, and the plants have had careful attention in regard to ventilation and watering, much of the trouble should disappear. The disease, if disease it is, is serious, but may be due more to indiscriminate watering and feeding than anything else. C. W.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Preparations for Propagation.

It is highly important that preparations for propagation be made before the weather prevents the work being carried out in all its details. Make sure to secure a generous quantity of soil for the express purpose of potting cuttings as they come from the cutting bench, and do not make the mistake of thinking any old soil you may have at hand will do.

Cuttings when first potted should receive the simplest diet possible, the object being to encourage a slow, sturdy growth. The ideal soil for this purpose is composed of well-rotted sod from good pasture or grass land, free from any animal or chemical fertilizer whatever. The addition, however, of a small quantity of air-slaked lime is beneficial.

Storing the Soil.

Choose a location outside where the pile can be easily reached with the hose in case the soil needs wetting. An unheated soil shed is a most convenient place in which to store soil, but if not fortunate enough to have one, cover with coarse hay, straw or cornstalks as soon as the frost penetrates the surface about an inch, forming a crust thereon. This is to prevent further freezing. Later add more covering, finishing with old boards, tar paper or other material, to exclude rain or melting snow.

With a supply thus at hand, one can arrange to bring into the potting shed the quantity needed for any particular occasion, and in season to become warmed to the temperature inside, as should invariably be done.

The Bench and the Sand.

A fresh lot of sand for use in the propagating bench should be procured and screened to remove all objectionable matter, but do not put it in the bench at this time, as both sand and bench will be better apart until nearer the propagating season. Left outside, exposed to frost, the sand offers no encouragement to fungous diseases. Thoroughly cleaned, coated with whitewash containing sulphur and allowed to dry out, the bench is equal to new in point of freshness.

Any repairs or changes needed in the propagating house or bench should be attended to at once, and perhaps it may be allowable for me at this time to make my annual recommendation of the brick-bottomed bench for propagating.

Make note of individual plants which show vigor, the continuous blooming trait, habit of growth or other quality in any degree superior to the general run of stock, and be particular to take cuttings from these if at propagating time they maintain their good behavior.

EGGS IN BUDS.

I am sending you some carnation flowers and buds, rotten in the center, and on examination you will find a white, round substance resembling eggs. Can you tell me what it is, the cause and remedy? F. R. H.

I have often seen these eggs deposited inside the calyxes of carnation blooms, and while I am not certain, yet I have always thought they must be the eggs of thrips. If I am right, the same remedies as for thrips will do to keep the place clear of these eggs. I would advise sending some of them to the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., for identification. A. F. J. B.

STEM-ROT AND RUST.

I want to ask what to do for stem-rot. I am troubled with it in Enchantress and Joost, and rust on Victory. I know these subjects have been treated time and again, but I am using these means in the hope that some one has perhaps discovered something I haven't heard of and tried. I keep them a little on the dry side and give lots of air. V. L. S.

The old saying that there is nothing new under the sun is quite appropriate here. This disease is well known and it is not a question of finding something to combat it with, but rather of using known remedies successfully. Keeping the water away from the plants and dusting with slaked lime and keeping the atmosphere slightly charged with sulphur fumes will usually be found successful in both cases. I would suggest that the soil be not kept too much on the dry side. The plants are now well established and need plenty of water to make a strong growth. You can water the soil liberally and at the same time keep the plants dry, and by watering only on bright days the surface will dry off fairly well again by night. If deemed advisable, you can scrape enough soil from between each row of plants to make a trough to water in to keep the stems of the plants dry. Keeping the plants growing strongly will help them to fight off the disease to some extent. A. F. J. B.

TO STIFFEN STEMS.

Please advise me if there is any chemical I can use in the place of unleached wood ashes, to stiffen the flower stems of carnations, where the ashes are difficult to obtain, and in what proportion? M.

If you can not get unleached wood ashes you can secure practically the same results by the use of air-slaked lime. Use about a 2½-inch pot of lime to each row of plants across a 5-foot bench. Stir into the soil lightly and water in with clear water. This may be repeated safely every two weeks.

A cool temperature and abundance of air will help your stems as much as anything and this is really the most desirable method of obtaining the results you are seeking. Little else will be needed on most varieties of carnations, if these elements are not withheld. A. F. J. B.

STIGMONOSE.

Some of my Boston Market carnation plants are full of spots, as you will find on the enclosed leaves. Would you please tell me what the disease is, with its cause, and how I can get rid of those spots? J. A. S.

Can your expert name the disease, with the probable cause, from the enclosed cutting of Fair Maid? The plants showed the disease last season and a little more this season. The treatment was the same in both seasons. A. H. Y.

The trouble in both of these cases is the disease called stigmonose, formerly called bacteriosis. This disease seems to be the final undoing of more varieties than any other disease or cause, and that in spite of the fact that we know to a certainty how it is introduced into the plants' system and that it could be prevented. It must be admitted that it is directly caused through carelessness on the part of the grower in keeping down insects. While it is almost impossible to keep the plants absolutely free from thrips, red spider and aphis, yet the careful grower will allow so few of these pests to live that there will not be enough punctures to injure the plants perceptibly. A plant will bear a moderate amount of these punctures without showing any deterioration, but if they are too numerous the drain on its vitality is too severe, and a breakdown of the cell structures is sure to follow. This is especially true of new varieties.

A plant which is started from seed is entirely free from this disease until it is inoculated through insect punctures. This may happen any time after germination. A plant which is raised from a cutting may have been infected when the cutting was taken from the old plant. In fact, it is almost sure to have some of the poison in it, if the old plant showed any signs of it. The more of these light spots that show, the more is the disease getting the upper hand. So, after a plant is once infected, it is entirely a question of cutting selection, attention to insects and careful growing being only natural, whether there is disease or not. Spraying with fungicides or germicides, or fumigating, will do no good. If the cuttings are taken indiscriminately, regardless of the amount of disease they contain, it will become worse each season until it destroys the whole stock; whereas, if the cuttings are selected carefully, and only such taken as show no spots whatever, and this is followed up each season, the disease can be worked out of the stock entirely. As I have said before, the value of a variety must determine whether it is worth the trouble. New and improved varieties come along so rapidly that unless a variety is unusually good it would pay better to discard it entirely if badly infected.

It is sometimes stated that the presence of this disease signifies that a variety is getting old and less vigorous. I do not agree with this theory. The only thing it proves is that there has been carelessness on the part of the grower in keeping down insects and in the selection of cuttings. There is, however, considerable difference in varieties. Those which have a hard surface and firm growth in general will not succumb so easily as those of a softer nature. That is why some varieties never show this disease at all, while others will show it when you get them from the originator.

One thing which the presence of these spots does prove, however, most conclusively is, that unless great care is exercised the variety will not last long.

APPLYING NITRATE OF SODA.

Will you kindly state what quantity of nitrate of soda should be put on carnations on a bed 5x7, or how much between two rows across the bed? H. E. Y.

I would advise you to use nitrate of soda in liquid form in preference to sprinkling it on the soil. There is more chance of getting it distributed evenly, which is very important in the use of chemicals. Dissolve one pound in fifty gallons of water, and water enough to saturate the soil. Do not have the soil quite so dry before applying any kind of food as you would have it when watering with clear water. You will not apply as much of the liquid feed as you would of clear water, but after the application the soil should be in about the same state as it would be after a watering. Apply not oftener than once in two weeks during the dark days. Too much nitrate of soda will make your blooms flabby; in fact, excessive feeding of any kind will bring on similar troubles. A better plan would be to apply the nitrate of soda once each month and alternate in the middle of each month with lime, wood-ashes, bone, dried blood or sheep manure, A variety of food will bring better results and less danger of harm.

BEST MUMS FOR NEW ORLEANS.

Would you kindly tell me what are the best varieties of chrysanthemums to grow and bloom in New Orleans for November 1, in white, pink, lavender, yellow and red? What fertilizer should be used and when should feeding be started? I should prefer an answer from one of experience, who has experimented near this section. X. G.

In answer to your inquiry about the best varieties of chrysanthemums to grow and bloom in New Orleans for November 1, I will state that for white Mrs. Robinson is far ahead of all others. There is no trouble to have it in time, and when well grown the flower is perfect. Next to it are the two white Holtz seedlings, which originated down here. They also are very reliable. The flowers do not open as white as Robinson, but they are a sure crop and can be depended on better than any other. The tall kind of these two is extensively raised without disbudding and has taken the place of Silver Thimble, which is also a single chrysanthemum, very useful for bunches.

The Yellow Cannell and Yellow Eaton are two good kinds. J. B. Crane and Childs can be grown for November 1, but few of this color are then sold, for at that time the white ones are at least ninety per cent more in demand than any other color.

As a lavender, none has been found so far to be perfect. Dr. Enguehard may be the best, but it is sometimes a little late. Planting in March and disbudding in August, with good attention, will bring that sort advanced enough to be disposed of November 1.

When growing, if planted in good soil at the start, chrysanthemums do not need much fertilizing except a little mulching of cow manure once or twice during the season. It is only after the bud has been taken that they like to be fertilized with liquid manure, nitrate of soda or any of the commercial fertilizers. As soon as the buds crack open you must discontinue this. Thrips and mealy bugs are very injurious. A constant application of tobacco in any form, from the very beginning, will do better than waiting till the plants are covered with these pests.

Perfect chrysanthemums can be grown in New Orleans with a good protection of glazed sashes from the time the buds are showing color. Cotton is also used to cover them, but the flowers will never be as well finished as when protected by glass. M. M. L.

PROFITABLE CULTURE.

How should Estelle chrysanthemum be grown to make it most profitable? How far apart should it be planted and how many flowers should be grown to a plant?

M.

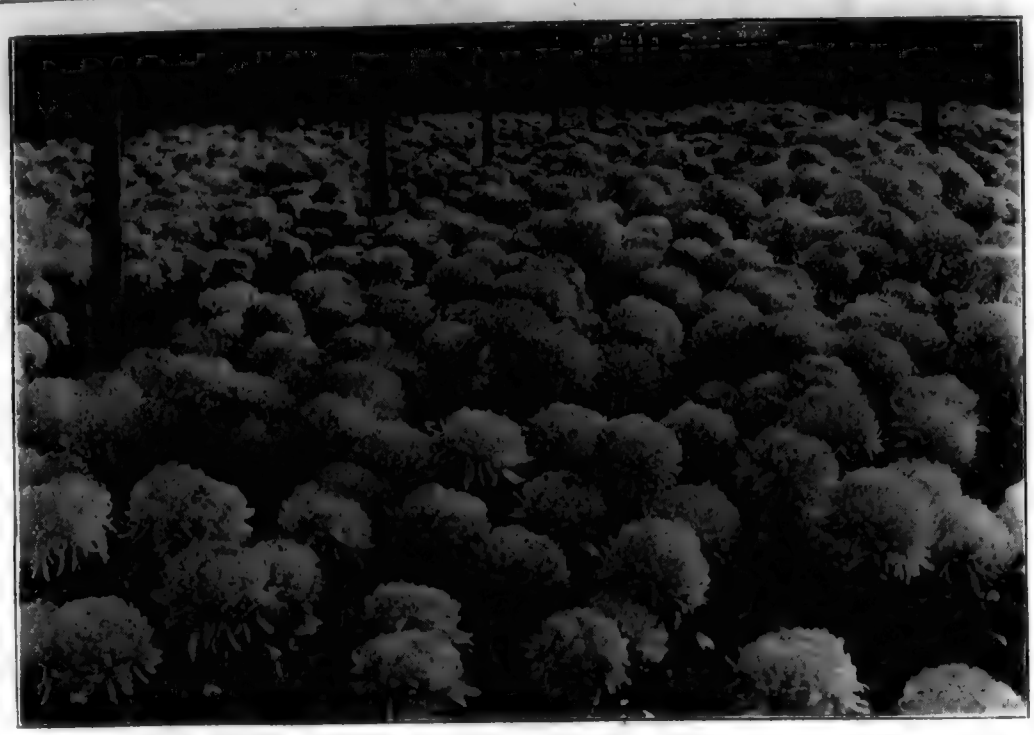
It depends somewhat on the market that one grows for. With us, who grow for New York, by getting extra fine flowers we can realize $4 to $5 a dozen where the medium and small grades are being sacrificed for a song. Such high-grade flowers are grown by planting out nice stock in May, 6x8, and taking one flower to a plant. Some markets will pay 25 cents each and no more and a fair grade can be produced by giving another inch or so of space and taking two flowers to a plant. Other growers claim they can make just as much by running as many shoots as the plant will carry and selling in bunches. Personally I doubt it, but as I have not handled the bunch stock I do not know.

Boiled down, the thing is, as I said at the beginning, a matter of your market.

C. H. T.

LATE VARIETIES.

Will you please give me a list of chrysanthemums that will bloom after Dr. Enguehard has come in? I want to know the color and about when they will bloom. L. G. B.



Enguehard is still in shape to cut, so that L. G. B. needs late varieties only. A selection would be: White—J. Nonin and W. H. Chadwick. Yellow—Nagoya and Gold Chadwick. Pink—Miriam Hankey and M. J. Rosette.

These are all good commercial varieties and can be held for Thanksgiving easily enough, and, if properly grown for late flowers, can be kept even later. Some growers get Bonnaffon good yet, but with most of us it has passed to the great beyond, as also Maud Dean, which was for years the standard late pink.

C. H. T.

IVORY.

In spite of the fact that of new chrysanthemums of mammoth size the name is legion, old Ivory year after year brings in the coin to growers who cater to the wholesale market demand in the big cities. Many are the men who have found little Ivory to bring bigger money than any other sort. One of these is G. W. Renard, of Avondale, Pa., who consigns to the Philadelphia market, where the stock is handled by Eugene Bernheimer. Although Ivory was introduced in 1892, Mr. Renard thinks there is nothing to beat it, and a glance at the accompanying illustrations, which show his house of it photographed early this month, will confirm his good opinion. Every flower of the 13,000 blooms was salable and it is the general experience that blooms of this size and quality go quicker than any other stock offered in quantity.

GROWING EXHIBITION FLOWERS.

[A paper by William Duckham, Madison, N. J., read before the Chrysanthemum Society of America at New York, November 6.]

If by any fortunate chance you could learn something from my methods, I have no doubt that I could learn from yours. But as you are not speaking at this moment, and I am, I must venture to assume the role of adviser and tell you quite frankly and simply just how I grow my flowers. I do not assert that these methods are the best; I simply say that they have come out of my experience and they seem to serve me well.

Cultural Methods.

And now we come down to the point of cultivation, which perhaps is the one all-important thing in maintaining the interest in the exhibition of chrysanthemums, for without good cultivation no good or large flowers would be seen. Each of us has, no doubt, his own ideas and ways of doing this, but the following is what I have practiced for some considerable time. I do not say it is the best way, but far from it, perhaps, for I realize there are a number of you here who could do all this much better than is possible for me.

I hardly know where to begin, for it has all been told so often that I am in fear of this not being as interesting as it might be.

Best Time for Propagation.

I have tried early, medium and late propagating and am frank to say that generally the medium early propagation, toward the end of February or early in March, has given me the best results. It is needless for me to describe in detail the methods employed; you all know about them. But I do claim that as soon as plants are rooted and potted, no neglect can be made up. The plants require all the attention it is possible to bestow.

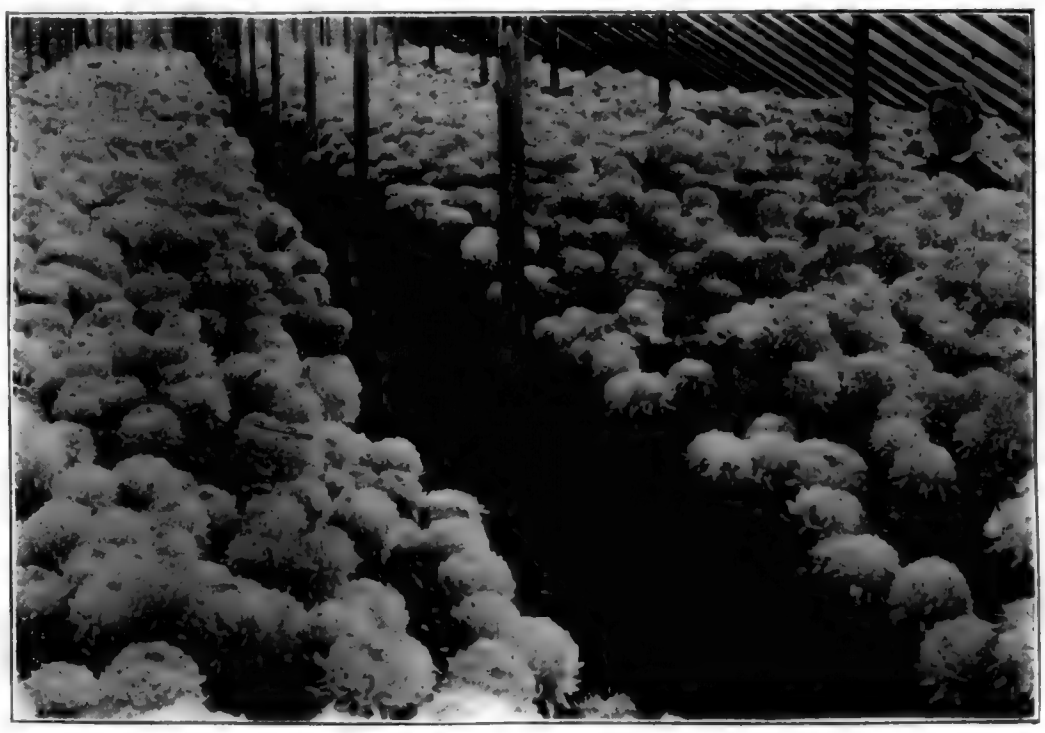
Some of you may say you can produce the very finest flowers from much later propagation. This I am free to admit; so have I produced good flowers from late struck cuttings. In fact, some of the best flowers, not only in finish, color, etc., but the largest, were from plants propagated in April, but for general acceptance I would prefer the first week of March. I shall omit the general cultivation. Suffice it to say, it is impossible to give the young plants too much care and attention in the growing season.

Limited Space for Roots.

I have grown plants in boxes, in benches and in pots; all with about the same result. The best flowers, perhaps, were grown in the bench divided with strips between each plant, confining the roots to a small space, and I found the stronger the grower the better the flowers, especially when the roots were confined to the smallest area. I have always been opposed to large pots or spaces, and, after all I have observed, I am more fully convinced than ever, for when feeding time comes you have all live and growing roots where, on the other hand, if too much space and soil is given, a lot of roots die and the plants consequently suffer.

Some Experiments with Buds.

Now, to obtain flowers we must first have the bud, and to me the bud is quite as important as to have a strong, vigorous plant.



In this connection I have had surprising results during the last year or two and particularly this year—brought about somewhat, in my mind, by the Australian varieties. I will refer only to crown buds, for I don't know of five varieties where terminal or even late crowns would win in fast company. The introduction of so many Australian varieties perhaps accounts for this, as my experience with varieties of Australian origin has shown that the buds can be taken much earlier and will develop perfectly, especially if the weather should be warm. If the weather is cool, get the house a few degrees warmer by fire heat and you will find that buds which seemed very unlikely to open will develop perfectly, and what appears at one time a hard core and without the slightest semblance of a flower develops finally into a beautiful and well finished flower.

Choose Early Buds.

I have in mind a batch of Nellie Pockett, which showed buds August 1. It appeared a little early to take them, but if allowed to go on, they would, in my mind, have been a little late. A part was taken and the result was as fine samples of Nellie Pockett as I have ever seen. The other half, that was allowed to go on, made only medium or second class flowers, although taken August 21 to 24. This applies to a number of varieties, and I say, do not be timid about taking an early bud, especially of varieties of Australian origin. And, as I said before, it is not always the strongest and most vigorous plant that produces the best and largest flowers, but just as important is the bud taken at the right time.

Variety in Feeding.

I would wish it to be distinctly understood that I am speaking of exhibition varieties only, but at the same time do not think I despise the different types, such as decorative, or commercial, or the beautiful singles, for all are very beautiful and all have their usefulness and are fully as beautiful as the large Japanese. But, as I was asked to confine my remarks to exhibition varieties, I have done so.

Feeding chrysanthemums is too well understood for me to dwell on. You all have your own way and it varies but little. I find the chrysanthemum is not very particular as to what it is fed on, provided it is not fed on the same diet too long; a change is always appreciated, and the plant responds and returns, many times over, the best care and feed one can bestow upon it.

BEST MUMS IN FRANCE.

The journal of the French Chrysanthemum Society presents the result of an audit of the varieties introduced in 1903, which shows its members consider the following as the best thirty varieties: Sapho, Mme. Marguerite de Mons, Mme. René Overthur, Lieut.-Col. Ducroiset, President Viger, Tokio, Jean Calvat, Souvenir de Bailleul, Ch. Schwartz, Mme. Henri Douillet, M. Ant Marmontel, La Gracieuse, President Loubet, Le Brévannais, Alliance, Souvenir de Mme Buron, Nathalie Bourseul, Ami A. Nonin, Albert Maumené, Rose Poitevine, M. Loiseau Rousseau, Henri Second, Souvenir de Calvat Père, Mme. Toussaint, Charvet, Vierge Montbrunoise, Amateur Rozières, Mme. de la Verbeville, Mlle. Renée Avisard, Ville de Phénicie, Mrs. J. A. Miller.

The Review will send Smith's Mum Manual, postpaid, for 40 cents.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The Handle Basket.

The handle basket filled with plants, with twig and bird's nest, designed by Charles Henry Fox at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia, is effective in its simplicity. The little bird's nest on the right adds charm.

EMBLEMATIC DESIGNS.

W. L. Leeka, of Fairmount, Ill., is a Mason and as a Mason pronounces the proportions of the Masonic emblem shown in the accompanying illustration as just what they should be. He says that to a Mason the attempts sometimes seen at the reproduction of the square and compass are such as to make the departed member of the order inclined to turn over in his coffin, no matter how favorably they may impress his sorrowing relatives. This design was made of asters and tuberoses, with plumosus for green on the design itself and Sprengeri for green in the base. Mr. Leeka suggests that the proportions of this design be borne in mind by all makers of set pieces, no matter how much they may seek to elaborate the idea, and the same faithfulness should be shown in the reproduction of other emblems. At a recent funeral of an old soldier the derision of the veterans attending was excited by the largest piece in the whole floral display, a reproduction of the G. A. R. badge—but the stars were in the wrong corner of the flag.

SMILAX.

How should smilax be grown? What sort of a place should be given it and what temperature does it require? M.

Smilax may be grown in either solid beds or raised benches, the former giving most satisfactory results. Sow the seed in February or March. Pot off when large enough to handle into small pots. Shift these into 3-inch or 4-inch pots and plant out in beds in June or July. Allow the plants a foot between the rows and nine inches between the plants. There should be anywhere from six to ten feet of headroom. Strings should be run up for the young, trailing shoots soon after they are planted, and they must not be allowed to ramble and become twisted on other strings than their own.

A temperature of 58 to 60 degrees at night suits smilax. For soil use three-fourths good, strong fibrous loam and one-fourth old cow manure. Syringe the plants once a day to prevent red spider securing any foothold. Do not cut the strings until the smilax is well ripened, and after cleaning off any part of the bed, keep the soil quite dry until growth has started again for a second crop, or the roots may rot. Smilax may be carried over for several years, but it pays best to plant it annually. A very light house is not needed; one with a span roof is to be preferred and some of the best strings I ever saw were grown in quite shady houses. Give the plants a mulching of old manure after the first crop is cut. C. W.

HYDRANGEAS FOR EASTER.

When should hydrangeas be brought in to be forced for Easter and Decoration day? C. U.

Hydrangeas wanted for Easter blooming should now be under shelter in a cool house and should be put into a house of 55 degrees by New Year's day. For Decoration blooming, forcing can be deferred till the middle of February.

HARDY WATER LILIES.

What is the best commercial variety of hardy water lilies for a small pond of standing water? I would like a variety of enough substance to stand shipping. What time of year should they be planted, and what is the best method of planting them in water two or three feet deep? C. H. K.

Nymphæa tuberosa rosea is a beautiful shade of pink, similar to the well-known Cape Cod pink water lily, but of a more robust constitution. N. odorata, the white and sweet-scented pond lily of North America, is more in evidence on the markets than any other variety. All the N. Marliacea forms are fine and perfectly hardy. Albida is white, with sepals tinged with pink. Carnea is soft flesh, rosea, deep rose, and chromatella deep yellow. Any of the foregoing are reliable. I think it might be well to grow more than one color if you are intending to market them.

Nymphæas, like all aquatics, like full sunshine, water and rich soil, which should consist of strong turfy loam well mixed with old cow manure. If prepared several months before being used, all the better. If placed in boxes four feet square and twelve to fifteen inches deep, the water will not be dirtied so much every time anyone wades in to pick the flowers. Press the soil firmly with the feet and cover with sand two inches thick. If you do not care to trouble with the boxes, put a foot of earth all over the bottom of your pond. In this they will grow well. Allow each plant not less than fifty to sixty square feet of surface.

Planting may be done as early as April or as late as September. Late fall planted tubers will start better the following season than spring planted stock. A depth of two or two and a half feet of water is ample. C. W.

LILIUM CANDIDUM AND HARRISII.

I have just completed building an even-span greenhouse, 16x50, and have it partly filled with violets and carnations. The temperature at night runs about 48 or 50 degrees. I have just potted a lot of narcissi, some Lilium Harrisii and some candidum. The narcissi I have put in the cellar of my dwelling. Will I also have to put the lilies away to root, and for how long? I would like to have them in flower as soon as proper conditions would admit. J. O. B.

The Harrisii can be stood under a bench in your greenhouse, if there is not too much drip through it. The plants may also be stood in a frame, cellar or frost-proof shed. No frost should be allowed to reach them. Keep somewhat on the dry side until the pots are well filled with roots.

Lilium candidum should be kept outdoors after being potted, until quite sharp frost arrives, when a coldframe covering is desirable. Allow the plants to freeze, for they will force all the better for it. Many failures in the culture of this beautiful white lily are due to the growers persisting in treating it as they would Harrisii, which is entirely wrong. Better not attempt to force any of the candidums before January 1. Fifty to 52 degrees at night is warm enough. The Harrisii, when well rooted and started to grow, can be grown 10 degrees warmer. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Asparagus Sprengeri.

Asparagus Sprengeri, so indispensable to the everyday florist, is of easy culture, but, like everything else, it repays a little extra attention. To supply an abundance for cutting, bench culture is to be preferred, although where space is limited baskets will produce a surprising number of sprays. Even narrow benches along the sides of the paths can be relied upon to give lots of sprays for cutting, more especially if the plants are fed well.

Look over the stock in the benches and remove any sprays which are becoming yellow or mouldy, as sometimes happens where the growth is dense. Afford a surfacing of well-decayed barnyard manure to plants needing some stimulant, scratching over the surface soil before spreading it on. Do not cut the plants too closely, or you will seriously cripple them. It is bad policy to cut them down bare, as we have sometimes seen, with the idea of giving them a clean start. It is much better to always leave a few sprays on each plant.

Antirrhinums.

After the chrysanthemum season has passed flowers of all kinds sell more readily and those who can grow a good batch of antirrhinums will always find a market for them, especially if the most desirable colors only are grown. Plants set out in benches early in the fall are now producing nice spikes, not, of course, of such quality as may be had toward spring, but a nice vase makes a pleasing type as compared with the rather stereotyped roses and carnations. When chrysanthemums have been cleared from the benches and antirrhinums planted in their stead, a night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees is ample. Keep all premature flower stems pinched back. Stir the surface soil frequently and encourage growth in every possible way. Be careful not to overwater; rather keep somewhat on the dry side at this dark season.

Rub all side shoots from the flower stems on the early crop if you want extra strong spikes. It will be necessary to reduce the number of shoots on each plant. This will be more necessary on seedlings than on the young stock raised from cuttings. See that plants are staked and tied in good season. Bent and twisted spikes are of no value. A mixed assortment of colors is also undesirable. Batches of pink, yellow, pure white and clear red invariably take well. Afford a little manure water to early benched plants, alternating this with a surfacing of a good, safe chemical fertilizer. Dot in a few myosotis plants or sow a bordering of sweet alyssum along the benches, if you have a call for either of these flowers.

Freesias.

You should soon be able to see the first flower stems on the earliest batch of freesias, if your plants are being grown in a light and sunny house. Give the plants plenty of water. Freesias require more moisture at the roots than almost any other bulbous plants, and many failures in culture are due to a too scant supply. Liquid stimulants once a week will be found helpful. There is usually a small supply of freesias at Christmas, at which season they always bring very remunerative prices. If you are trying to get in your flowers at that time, 55 degrees at night, a good supply of air during the day and a position well up to the glass are necessary. Keep later batches cooler. They will do well in coldframes yet a while, if you have plenty of covering at hand for severe weather.

Smilax.

The demand for smilax is now only a fraction of what it was before Asparagus Sprengeri and A. plumosus nanus were known, but the country florist usually finds call for a few dozens or hundreds of strings per annum. The first lot of strings will now be cut, or ready for cutting. Do not make the mistake of picking out an occasional nice looking string here and there. Start at one end of the bed and clear it before you. Then stir the soil, mulch with cow manure and keep moderately dry until the new strings appear. Lose no time in putting up the new strings. This work is easily done before growth starts, but a few days' delay may mean endless bother, owing to the entanglement of the young shoots. A night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees suits smilax, although it may be grown 10 degrees cooler. It pays best, however, in the warmer house.

Calceolarias.

Calceolarias, which barely move at all in the warm months, are now making excellent growth. They love a cool house and do not like much sun. A temperature of 45 degrees at night is ample, and if fresh tobacco stems are scattered among the pots once a fortnight, aphis will be kept in control. Pot along all plants needing a shift before they become too matted. Loam, well-rotted cow manure and leafmold, with some broken charcoal and sharp sand, makes a good compost. Use two-thirds of loam and one-sixth each of the leafmold and manure for a final potting. Chemical manures are better left alone now, but can be advantageously used when the plants are well established in the pots.

BERGER'S NEW STORE.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph taken in the store of Berger Bros., wholesale florists of Philadelphia, at a busy time. John Berger, senior member of the firm, may be seen in the background. He is very modest. Henry Berger, the junior member, is on the left. Near him is an employee who unfortunately got the Berger move on just before the photograph was completed. Near the center are William Crawford, of Secane; Edgar Upton, and Paul Klingporn, all well known to Philadelphians. PHIL.

PACKING AND SHIPPING.

Successful Beginners.

There is one thing that always seems especially discouraging to the old grower of violets, namely, the easy success that the beginner so often has, in having first-class flowers for the first year or so, frequently with a haphazard care and a lack of close attention to details that would be ordinarily fatal. This is something that I have never yet met a grower who could explain. One common reason that everyone falls back on is "new houses, etc." That is all well enough as far as it goes; yet there have been new houses, put up by old growers, that have not been such brilliant successes as others. So that is not always a conclusive argument, and I leave the fact as it is for some person wiser than myself to explain. However, if I were a novice in violet culture I would not rest easy with this idea, that the flowers could not help but do well for me, but would give them the very best care that I was capable of, looking very carefully after all the details of culture and properly marketing.

Special Violet Boxes.

This makes me think of an item that I saw only a short time ago regarding sending the blooms out in any old box that was handy. This is a subject that has been frequently referred to, and yet it will bear annual reiteration. Never under any circumstances send out violets in anything but a special violet box, new and fresh and properly lined with waxed tissue paper. And note this, you who have competitors in business: the dealer who always sends out the most tasteful, most neat and attractive violet package, even though it costs a little extra, and always has his violets up to standard, mark you, will in a very short time have the bulk of the trade, and the cream of it, as you will soon find to your sorrow and chagrin.

A Time Not to Smoke.

Now, one of the things that are absolutely essential to this perfect package is the absence of all foreign odors. Never under any circumstances allow smoking while handling them, or while picking or filling with water previously to packing them. This is a matter that you cannot be too particular about.

And do not think any lot of old vases, etc., good enough for putting them in to fill with water, but get some pans of such size and shape as will be convenient for you, and make some covers of wire netting for them, so that as you pick and bunch, you can place them in there, which will keep the leaves and blooms from the water and yet allow the stems to be in in good shape and without crowding in any way.

Another thing that it is well to keep in mind is the grading and quality. Do not mix a few small or off-color flowers in a bunch of otherwise first-class blooms; they spoil the appearance and lower the price of a bunch which, but for them, would be perfect and command the top market price.

R. E. Shuphelt.

BEST SINGLE VIOLETS.

I would like to ask you what you consider to be the best single violet to grow, also what temperature do they require in cold weather? C. H. H.

The best single violet is undoubtedly Princess of Wales, of which probably ten times as many are grown as of all other sorts put together. A night temperature of 40 to 45 degrees suits single violets in winter. It should not exceed the latter figure, or leaf growth will be excited at the expense of flowers. Single violets are hardy and should be allowed to freeze tolerably hard before being housed. They are better housed after the middle of October. C. W.

THE HOUSE OF COCOS.

One of the features which interested the thousand visitors at Riverton, N. J., during the S. A. F. convention was the house of Cocos Weddelliana in 5-inch pots. There were few among the visitors who ever had seen so many plants of this palm, or, indeed, any considerable number in such large pots. The principal use of the cocos is for the center of fern dishes and in 2-inch and 3-inch pots it has a large sale. Last season the Henry A. Dreer company had a few plants in larger sizes and found they sold well. Conceiving the idea that the larger sizes would prove profitable, they this season set aside a number of thousands for growing on into 5-inch pots. The house of these plants as it appeared at convention time is shown in the accompanying illustration. It looks differently now, for a large part of the stock has been taken by appreciative retailers.

AMPELOPSIS JAPONICA POISONING

A British nurseryman writes as follows in the Horticultural Advertiser:

"While we had known that Ampelopsis Japonica (Rhus toxicodendron) was poisonous, having had severe cases through handling it, we had not observed any ill effects from the variety Hoggii until recently, when, having occasion to propagate, one of the propagating staff was told to prepare and put in some cuttings. He took the precaution to wash his hands immediately he had finished, but within two days his lips and face generally began to swell, which were the first symptoms; then his hands and arms swelled and blistered, all the skin came off his hands, and great boils came up on his arms; altogether he was off work for five weeks.

"Like Primula obconica, it does not affect everybody, but those it does the slightest touch seems enough. We decided directly our man took ill to destroy every plant on the nursery. We happened to have a few standing on some plunging ground, and one of our men who is not harmed by handling it pulled them up and burned them. A few days after another man who had occasion to work in the same piece of ground, although he could only have come in contact with some of the roots that had gone through the pots, developed symptoms of poisoning, though not so severe as the first case. So that it would seem that all parts of the plant are dangerous."

THE ANNUAL

will be issued

DECEMBER 12, 1907.

Don't Forget:—

advertising copy must reach Chicago by Wednesday morning, December 11, to be in time, and earlier will be better.

Some desirable advertisements usually are received the morning after going to press with a Special Edition. Send today. Don't get left.

The Timothy Eaton chrysanthemum this season came hollow-eyed with many if not most growers.

It is stated that no less than sixteen firms sent buyers to the Wisconsin lycopodium towns this season.

The lighter the demand the greater is the advantage to the grower who has a reputation for high quality.

It is an excellent thing for the trade as a whole that credits are becoming more restricted and collections closer looked after. In the long run, everybody will gain by it.

Chairman Kasting, of the National Flower Show Committee, has appointed S. S. Skidelsky as chairman of the traveling representatives to the national flower show.

You can turn surpluses into cash by offering them in the Classified Department of the Review. When seasonable stock is offered, the returns usually are out of all proportion to the cost of the advertisement.

In last week's Review there was an illustration of W. A. Manda's house of Dracæna Mandaiana "at Rutherford, N. J.," when in reality the house is a dozen miles away, at South Orange, as was stated in the note accompanying the illustration. Mr. Manda has no establishment at Rutherford.

It is a mistake to put off the work of protecting hardy plants in pots outdoors until the weather conditions are actually present to make such protection an immediate necessity. Far better begin now and have everything snug and secure before hard freezing weather comes. Everything outdoors in pots needs some sort of covering to prevent the breakage of pots by frost, if for no other reason. It is also much the same with things to be left all winter in coldframes, which are not intended to be covered to such an extent as to keep out frost.

The rubber hose has gone up, and still is going up—in price.

A. C. B. fails to sign his full name and to give his address, without both of which it is impossible to answer his inquiries.

The rose society of Germany has 2,500 members. It will give a national exhibition at Leipzig, June 27 to July 5.

Send your latest catalogue to the Review and see that it is on your regular mailing list. All catalogues are filed for reference.

In the Boston market the big mums are decidedly out of favor and the smaller ones bringing much the better return to the growers.

Those who do business in bedding plants are planning big stocks for next spring, in the assurance that the demand will be greater than ever.

It is surely a deplorable state of affairs when the cotton growers of the south and the corn and wheat growers of the west and northwest have so much ready money they don't need to rush their crops to market!

When a grower writes on a piece of plain paper to order a ton of sheep manure it is no more than natural that the dealer should ask for cash with order; the grower may be good for it, but the evidence is against his being a good business man.

This season a larger number than usual of the church sociable kind of flower shows have been held and in most cases with gratifying success. Where florists have participated they have done well, both in advertising and in promoting the popular appreciation of flowers.

Readers of the Review will please bear in mind that it is the practice to promptly discontinue all subscriptions upon expiration if not renewed. If you want the Review you will not neglect sending the dollar when you get our notice that it is due; if you don't want the paper the publishers have no desire to force it on you and then present a bill.

ODDS AND ENDS.

There are other dracænas just as brilliant in color as D. Mandaiana, but perhaps none, with the possible exception of D. terminalis, of the highly colored varieties of so tough a texture of foliage. That characteristic of the new dracæna will, no doubt, cause it to find favor with commercial men.

The day of the huge specimen chrysanthemum plant is surely at an end when the fabulous cash prizes offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society failed this year to induce a single grower to put one up for exhibition.

We hear a great deal of criticism of the arrangement of groups of plants at exhibitions and we must admit that much of it is warranted, but there is little ground for criticism when the object of a group at an exhibition is the hiding of considerable bare wall surface, if that group in its finished state does not show artistic arrangement.

Centerpieces of growing plants can be so made as to be very effective and pleasing, but when they are made in such a way that two-thirds of the material is squatty and the other third set abruptly upon stilts, they are neither pleasing, effective nor artistic. B.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

After ten days of depression the market began to take on life November 21 and by November 23 things had assumed their accustomed activity. Saturday night found the market well cleaned up and, in fact, late orders, received in rather greater number tnan usual Saturday afternoon, were cut in many instances. This was particularly true of Beauties and carnations. The prices on roses had not advanced, but it had become possible to move the receipts, which had been accumulating all the week. Violets, too, felt the seasonable demand and the market was not only cleaned out, but prices advanced. The wholesalers all wore a cheerful air home with them Saturday night and returned to duty this week with enthusiasm.

The Thanksgiving Market.

Monday opened with a rush in all the houses which cater to the shipping demand. It appears that chrysanthemums are approaching an end with all the country growers who look to Chicago for supplies when their own houses are empty, and this brought renewed demand, too, for roses and carnations. Monday regularly is a busy shipping day in this market, but November 25 was better than usual. Prices on Beauties even exceeded quoted rates and special fancy carnations in a few cases went to 6 cents, for it was not possible to fill all orders. In fact, the big orders were savagely cut and buyers who had wired for thousand lots were forced to be content with 300 to 500.

Tuesday brought the bulk of the Thanksgiving shipping orders. Writing before the completion of the day's work, it is impossible to form a very accurate idea of the volume of business, except that it was large and orders for Beauties and carnations were not all filled. The receipts of carnations were heavy, but the demand also was great and prices in some instances above quoted rates. The receipts of roses were not as great as a week ago, when the big cut of Bride and Maid was at its height. Chrysanthemums are pretty well cut out with many growers, but there are on the market thousands of medium to poor quality, the fag end of the crop. Fancy stock was not overabundant. The bulk of the violets sell locally and it cannot now be told how they fared, there not having been many advance orders and receipts being heavy. The market is well supplied with lilies, valley, stevia, Romans, Paper Whites and other seasonable items.

Green goods are in large supply and equal to all requirements.

Various Notes.

There has been much complaint from the Rhinebeck shippers as to the prices realized for violets in the week of November 10 to 16, and no greatly better checks were sent for the week following, but it is hoped this week will make a much better showing. While prices have not been as high as last year at this season, it is felt by the wholesalers that the returns from this market at least compare favorably with what is had from New York.

J. C. Bruchner, on Sixty-ninth street, put in a stock of goldfish bought of the E. F. Winterson Co. and says he is more than pleased with the business it has brought him. He and Mrs. Bruchner run the store without hired help and their expenses are light, so that Mr. Bruchner says the profits on sales of goldfish paid the running expenses last week.

Thomas McAllister has left the position of gardener for Mrs. Ely, at Wheaton, held during the summer, and is looking for a place to start growing outdoor cut flowers for the market.

Scheiden & Schoos were fortunate in having a crop of Timothy Eaton just right this week and E. Fransen says they are pleased with the week's business.

Nellie C. Moore is again at her stand in the Growers' market after a month's illness.

The E. F. Winterson Co. received 2,000 Bonnaffon from one grower November 26.

George Reinberg is cutting some splendid Killarney, and the general crop is larger than at any time in the last month.

John Kruchten says his supply of chrysanthemums will hold on for some weeks yet.

Ed Benthey says he is no longer with the Benthey-Coatsworth Co.

A. L. Vaughan, of Vaughan & Sperry, returned Sunday morning after a week's visit in Louisiana, following his service as judge at the Little Rock flower show. He says the hospitality of the Little Rock florists was unbounded during flower show week.

J. A. Sikuta made a wreath for $150 for the funeral of the mother of Captain Schuettler, the assistant chief of police.

As one of the small items which go to make up the supplies of a big grower, it may be mentioned that Bassett & Washburn this week received a carload of hardwood ashes from Canada.

L. Lommel, who has worked for leading florists all over the country, is now with Seitz & Nordell, at 902 Evanston avenue. The firm has a neat new place and is doing a nice business.

A. L. Randall says they are more than pleased with the improvement in the telephone service since they put in a switchboard with an operator constantly on duty. They have three lines and seven stations.

The Kroeschell Bros. Co. is still sending out its carnation measure to all applicants, and the number increases each year at this season. F. Lautenschlager is now calling on the trade at Cincinnati.

Peter Reinberg is cutting a big crop of Uncle John of fine quality. Mrs. Field also is still giving a big cut.

C. H. Fisk, who operates the Halle stand on West Madison street, is gradually directing the trade around the corner to his old store and says he will eventually rent the Halle store for another line of business, retaining the greenhouse for his own use.

The carnation growers are becoming expert at mending calyxes with the Baur clip. Enchantress and Lawson are beginning to split badly, so they have plenty of practice.

Wietor Bros. have kept a record ever since they started in business, showing the amount of space devoted to each variety and the receipts from chrysanthemums, carnations and each variety of rose, so that they know exactly what it has paid them to grow, and what they have been justified in dropping.

Albert Amling is not only president of the Albert Amling Co., at Maywood, but is vice-president of the Maywood State Bank and of the Melrose Park State Bank, with combined resources of $675,000. He never misses a directors' meeting, but just now he is especially anxious to liquidate a crop of smilax, which is ready to relieve any possible money stringency. E. C. Amling handles all the stock from the Maywood district.

G. C. Crego and wife are making a short trip to the Pacific coast.

Percy Jones says he thinks the market's experience in the first half of November was little different than usual, although chrysanthemums may have averaged less than last year.

W. E. Lynch, at Hunt's, says he never will have a complaint to make if the market will continue as good as it has been since November 22. In the supply department they have been busy right along.

E. E. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., says they are saving a great deal of work this week by having George Bayer, at Toledo, ship many of their chrysanthemum orders direct. Mr. Bayer's Bonnaffons always are in demand.

John Poehlmann is one of those cautious gentlemen who never commit themselves to an unqualified statement of fact, but he admits that if the week continues as well as it started it will be a good one.

J. A. Budlong is cutting White Perfection and Enchantress, which readily brought 6 cents Monday.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, says the market for roses is not yet as strong as he would like to see, but other lines are moving satisfactorily.

Weiland & Risch are figuring on another big crop of Killarney for Christmas.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is receiving some especially fine stevia.

If Frank Beu can get a clear title to a piece of property he has bought adjoining his place, he will in the spring put up a house 50x200, which will be devoted entirely to Kaiserin, which made him excellent money last season.

Louis Wittbold says that the interest taken in his method of making cement

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The trade here has passed another dull week in the cut flower business, and about the only work done was for funerals. There is not much going on in the social world worthy of mention. In the downtown district the florists are displaying signs for stock at cheap prices.

Cut stock of all kinds in the commission houses was so plentiful last week, and the demand so slow, that plenty of stock was dumped or sold in thousand lots very cheap. This is not encouraging for this, Thanksgiving, week, and should the glut continue, prices will hardly go up on anything, unless it be on violets. In these, $1 per hundred will be demanded for the best Californias. No doubles are in this market at present.

Chrysanthemums are still plentiful, but the prices are not so high; still they have a depressing effect on roses and carnations. Eaton and Wedding are the best that come in. Roses are of good quality, but so many come in that seconds hardly bring over $5 per thousand. In these they are mostly Bride, Maid, and short Richmond and Killarney. Carnations are also of good quality, but did not clean out last week. Enchantress, White Perfection, Craig and Lawson are in demand. Others drag. Violets are extremely scarce. There is plenty of good valley to be had. Paper Whites sell well. Romans are still among the missing.

Smilax, asparagus and adiantum have daily calls, but not in large lots.

Various Notes.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., was in the city the early part of last week, buying supplies. He reports his business as such that he could not find time to visit the recent flower show.

The western half of Forest park, which since the world's fair has been undergoing restoration at the hands of the Louisiana Exposition Co., has been turned over to the city as completed. Walter B. Stevens, of the Exposition Co., reports that the company spent $500,000 in restoration. George Kessler, the landscape architect, had charge of the work. All it needs now is the approval of Park Commissioner Phil Scanlan.

Otto Triebwasser, formerly in business at 1542 North Twenty-seventh street, Philadelphia, is in the city. Mr. Triebwasser was lately with Miss Schnell in East St. Louis, Ill., but will leave next week for the west, stopping at Kansas City.

The St. Louis Seed Co. has purchased a tract of land in the county and contemplates building a range of houses next summer, to grow plants, mostly vegetables, for the mail trade. After the first of the year a lot of hotbeds will be started going on the place. In this line the firm is doing a large business each spring.

The Burton-Allison Co., manufacturers of flower colorings, of this city, have placed on the market here a lot of colors for flowers. Their yellow, St. Patrick green and American Beauty are fine, all having been tried by the trade here through sample. Charles E. Schoenle, of the Schoenle Floral Co., is one of the company. All of our wholesalers are carrying stock in all colors.

Adolph Brix reports that since his free flower show in the north end, his trade has increased greatly in all lines. His foreman, Mr. Vogel, at the greenhouses is sending to the store a fine lot of cut chrysanthemums and carnations. His show windows are always attractive.

H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., is sending to this market a fine lot of chrysanthemums. They are handled by G. H. Angermueller.

Among the daily shipments sent in by Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, we find as fine a lot of Uncle John roses as could be seen anywhere. His Chatenay, Ivory and Richmond are not far behind. He also sent in fine blooms of Appleton, Golden Wedding and Bonnaffon. Mr. Ammann and his foreman, Henry Blixen, were seen at the recent flower show looking over the new roses on exhibition. They thought well of Cardinal, Marshall Field and Rhea Reid.

Robert F. Tesson and bride are enjoying their honeymoon at Jacksonville, Fla. They will return after Thanksgiving and settle in their new home at Sunny Point, West Forest Park, where Mr. Tesson is engaged in the dairy business.

The Riessen Floral Co., John Burke and the Foster Floral Co., who are in the center of the theater district, are daily making great window displays to catch the eyes of the transient trade. They report that white, pink and yellow chrysanthemum blooms of the fancy grades are most in demand. Roses and violets are not selling so well.

The executive committee of the St. Louis Horticultural Society held a meeting last week at the Missouri Athletic Club. Harry Young, chairman of the committee, called the meeting. All bills were ordered paid. The show was a social success, but not so financially. All the members of the committee were present.

The seventeenth annual banquet of the trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden and their friends will be held at the Southern hotel Saturday evening, November 30. This banquet is provided for in the will of Henry Shaw, bequeathing $1,000 annually for the purpose. The guests are literary and scientific men, friends and patrons of the natural sciences. The officers are Rufus J. Lackland, president; H. D. Cunningham, secretary, and William Trelease, director of the garden. J. J. B.

DETROIT.

The Market.

The general depression in all branches of business has had its effects on the florists' trade, until all the florists are complaining more or less. Of course it affects the retailers differently; those who get the swelldom's business probably do not notice the dullness so much. There does not seem to be the usual number of funerals and this has caused a falling off in this work. Still, stock remains well cleaned up at the wholesale houses; at least the better grade of stock does.

In chrysanthemums about the only variety that does meet with ready sale is Dr. Enguehard. The mums are bringing good prices, the medium size selling at from 12½ cents to 18 cents and 20 cents. Roses are none too plentiful at the present time. Many receptions have kept these well cleaned up at good prices. Good carnations sell readily at from 2 cents to 3 cents in the different colors.

Considerable valley, stevia, etc., is disposed of daily. The different greens are at present of good quality. Some very fine bronze galax leaves are on this market.

The above prices are, of course, not Thanksgiving prices, which were much higher. Violets jumped from 75 cents up to $1.50 per hundred. The latter are a scarce article on this market and the chances are they will be for some time to come.

Club Meeting.

The most successful show and entertainment that the Detroit Florists' Club has ever had was held Tuesday evening, November 19, at Harmonie hall. The attendance was a little less than on some previous occasions, but the absent ones were the losers, as all present had a grand time. The young people, as well as many of the old, danced to their hearts' content, while the genuine cranks spent the evening discussing the good and bad qualities of the carnations, roses, mums, etc.

The whole affair was in charge of the exhibition committee, which consisted of T. Browne, A. Pochelon and Robert Unger; and the entertainment committee, composed of Walter Taepke and William Hielscher. These committees, with several other volunteers, worked hard to make the affair the success it was, and deserve much credit.

The dancing program was interspersed with some selections on the violin by Miss Ella Schroeder, one of our local violin virtuosos.

As an inducement to the exhibitors, the club appropriated a small sum to be used as premiums. This was divided into some fifteen prizes. The judging was done by Messrs. Breitmeyer, Sullivan and Holznagle. There were no second prizes given, but in some cases two prizes were awarded. The exhibitors and winners were as follows:

In chrysanthemums, Thomas Browne, of Greenfield, showed nine varieties, including Dr. Enguehard and T. Eaton, both of which won prizes. Albert Stahelin, of Redford, showed three varieties and won a prize for white with Adelia. The Breitmeyers showed six varieties. Frank Holznagle exhibited Helen Frick, which won a prize as the best pink. J. F. Sullivan showed six varieties, including Golden Chadwick and Nagoya, both of which won prizes as best yellows. August Von Boeselager exhibited a fine vase of assorted mums, not for competition.

In carnations, Thomas Browne won a prize with Winsor as the best medium pink, and with White Enchantress as the best white. He also exhibited Beacon and Lawson. Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens, was awarded a prize for Beacon as best red; for Enchantress as best light pink, and for a sport of Enchantress as best dark pink. He also exhibited White Perfection. Fred Miesel showed four varieties. J. E. Smith, of Wyandotte, showed two fine vases of carnations, not for competition. A. Von Boeselager showed a fine vase of Moonlight.

In roses, Robert Klagge, of Mount Clemens, exhibited a vase of La Detroit and a vase of Kaiserin, for both of which he received prizes.

In miscellaneous exhibits Fred Miesel showed a fine lot of cyclamen, for which he received a prize; also a vase of snapdragon, for which he received a prize. Robert Klagge showed a fine lot of violets and received a special prize donated by Walter Taepke. J. Breitmeyer's Sons received a prize, donated by A. Pochelon, for a group of plants. B. Schroeter also was on hand with a fine collection of plants. J. F. Sullivan showed some lilies and Romans.

Much interest was taken in some centerpieces for dinner-tables. A. Pochelon, of the Bemb Floral Co., received a special prize, donated by Robert Unger, for an arrangement of pompons, Arline, and different grasses. Walter Taepke exhibited a prettily arranged piece of valley and Sunrise roses. W. B. Brown had a nicely made basket of La Detroit and cosmos. J. F. Sullivan showed a low mound of Arline, decorated with green chiffon ribbon. B. Schroeter was there with a centerpiece of orchids and valley, arranged in a low basket of wicker-work.

Considerable interest was taken in our show by out of town growers and their efforts were much appreciated. The Robert Craig Co., Philadelphia, sent on four vases of pompons, which attracted much attention. They were Klondike, Garza, Kitty Bourne and Lulu. The E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., sent an assortment of twelve mums, including some fine blooms; also a fine vase of Rhea Reid rose, and a vase of the pink rose, Princess. Robert Scott & Son, of Philadelphia, sent a vase of Mrs. Jardine, which was well spoken of. The Chicago Carnation Co. sent a large vase of Aristocrat, which showed up well. They seem to be exceptionally good keepers. Stevenson Bros., of Govanstown, Md., sent a fine lot of Splendor carnation, which showed up finely. It has a growth similar to Dorothy, with a long stem and a fair-sized flower, and is of a pleasing deep pink color.

It is surprising that not more of the florists turn out on an occasion of this sort. The writer could name at least a dozen who should have been there. The evening's affairs were wound up with a lunch.

Various Notes.

Pickling of stock was again noticeable before Thanksgiving, bringing up the price of stock when there was no reason for it, thus driving away many prospective buyers.

Beacon, Winsor and White Enchantress were the three favorites at the club's show last week. Judging from the comments you cannot make a mistake on any of them.

George Rackham is still far from well. His knee is causing him no end of misery.

The Breitmeyers had the decorations in Strassburg's hall for an elaborate ball November 22. The color scheme was white, yellow and green. The white was a background of lattice work and a nicely executed pergola at one end of the hall. Southern smilax was used effectively with probably 1,000 artificial yellow mums, well made. The whole produced a pleasing effect. What is otherwise a barn-like hall looked like fairyland. H. S.

Current Comment.

A week of dismal, rainy weather had a depressing effect on business. The only activity was among the decorators; there were quite a few notable weddings. Mums are a glut, with plenty of good stock of all kinds. Our new commission house reports business beyond all expectations for the short time it has been open.

A visit to the plant of Gude Bros. found the fern houses in fine shape. These houses looked as if cleaned out by fire six weeks ago. The Department of Agriculture sent several experts to see the destroyer of the ferns. The only remedy they could suggest was to pick off the rainbow-colored worms that nothing seemed to kill. Mr. Bartus, in charge of the houses, says some mornings he would pick half a peck of them. He is now using a formula of his own, which has proved very effective.

J. H. Small & Son have the Root-Grant wedding this week.

J. H. Small, Sr., who has been seriously ill for some time, is still holding his own.

The flower show has enthused all the florists and the guaranteed fund is growing for the show of 1908.

The Washington club will be well represented at the Baltimore show next week.

Mr. Peterson, Jr., of Cincinnati, and Mr. Dikis, of the Jansen Co., New York, called this week. O. A. C. O.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Indian summer said farewell November 23. It was a week of almost summer temperature. A heavy rain of nearly twenty-four hours' duration ushered in Thanksgiving week and the cold snap, so long anticipated, is here.

The receipts last week were enormous and better quality never graced the boards of the wholesalers. Everything received was good and yet, with operas and horse show in full swing, the increased demand was hardly detectable and there was never a scarcity. At the horse show many violets, orchids and gardenias were worn. We look for a fairly satisfactory Thanksgiving. Stock will be plentiful and superb in quality, and prices will be reasonable.

Last week the chrysanthemum supplies did not diminish and prices did not increase. The $4 a dozen ones of 1906 were the $2 a dozen stock of 1907, but thousands were sold as low as $2 a hundred. There should be a decided change for the better for Enguehard, Gold Mine, Chadwick and Golden Wedding. No better stock of these ever came to the New York market and this market, F. H. Traendly says, with the possible exception of roses, is head and shoulders above the west. Certainly no other center can compare with us in the size, perfection and variety of the chrysanthemum. Violets were low.

Beauties are advancing in price slowly but surely. On Saturday $25 a hundred was easily obtained. Some claimed a higher rate for the selects. There were too many Bride and Maid for independence in values. Few touched $5 a hundred. Quantities were sacrificed early in the week.

Carnations remain below their real value. Finer stock cannot be grown. A year ago they were worth twice their present quotations. The grower grows impatient and wonders. Dozens of them have been here to see conditions for themselves. These observe and understand. Conditions are abnormal.

The supply men seem to be very busy. Millions of ferns are being housed. Galax, the bronze variety, so long scarce, is now arriving. Wild smilax in abundance may be found at all the supply centers and the basket and Christmas bell disseminators are already rushed. There will be some holly for Thanksgiving and the supply of blooming plants would indicate an expected demand for home decoration.

The advance orders for plants for Christmas are now being booked daily. The demand is universal for medium-priced stock and the day of options at $50 and $100 is past. The outlook seems to be encouraging for an enormous call for the plant combinations at $5 and $10, and growers, as well as retailers, are governing themselves accordingly.

Various Notes.

December 9 the New York Florists' Club will hold its final meeting of the year, and election. President Totty will retire with a splendid record. His pet schemes, the club home and the champion bowling aggregation, will yet see fulfilment. The secretary is too good to lose and too necessary to the club's stability. There will be no contest.

Mayor McClellan has appointed Henry Smith park commissioner. Samuel Parksons, Jr., has been acting as commissioner and president of the board for some time.

F. H. Traendly's mascot has just reasserted her winning power at the Courtelon Club, Flatbush, where on a 25-cent chance she won a $100 ice-box. No wonder Traendly was elected president of the S. A. F.

Emile Savoy, an expert grower of ferns, at Secaucus, and formerly with the Robert Craig Co., at Philadelphia, is sending his stock to Samuel A. Woodrow, 53 West Thirtieth street.

R. Wadamon, of South Orange, N. J., is making a fine exhibit of Japanese dwarf trees at 273 Fifth avenue, for which a good demand has developed. Some of his specimens are 100 years old.

Siebrecht & Son move into their new store, at 427 Fifth avenue, December 1. This large and convenient store is next door to the corner establishment opened two years ago in the Siebrecht building, and close to their present location. This firm grows about everything required in its retail work at the greenhouses and nursery in New Rochelle. On Wednesday, November 20, Charles See, bookkeeper for this house for the last twenty years, was married to a New Rochelle lady and is spending his honeymoon in Washington. Mr. See has just completed a handsome home on his property, the old Tom Paine farm, where the couple will reside. The wedding was a great surprise to his many friends, as he has long been considered immune.

A fire above the store of the Geller Co. last week did considerable damage by water to the stock in the cellar and store. This is the second experience Mr. Geller has had with fire since he opened his supply house. The damage is covered by insurance.

The imported Irish yews, Koster blue spruce, and Nordmanniana find a ready sale at Cleary's, where both at auction and private sale good attendance and brisk demand is encouraging the new firm beyond expectations.

B. Rosens, 48 West Twenty-ninth street, will call upon his Chicago patrons after Thanksgiving. He has put in a big stock in the new store.

McIntosh, on Broadway, celebrated horse show week with a window decorated with yellow mums with a horse's head of immortelles in the center of a wreath.

The most unique advertising seen in New York of late is that of the Dayton Cash Register Co. In its window is a representation of a florist's store with ice-box, natural flowers, boxes and all else the florist uses. The purchaser and salesman are expert actors and carry out the simulation of purchase, payment and change from the cash register, with all the gusto and detail of the real thing. Crowds surround the display all day and, in the meantime, the florist and his wares enjoy the benefit of a first-class advertising method. The company evidently had not yet forgotten the S. A. F. convention and the advertising the florists gave it. This was "casting bread on the waters." Now it is returning.

Donohoe last Wednesday had charge of the Shaw-Hemmens wedding, a white and yellow mum decoration, with canopy of valley. The bride's bouquet was of white orchids, with Ivory roses for the maid of honor and Golden Wedding mums for the six bridesmaids.

Bonnet & Blake, in Brooklyn, are complaining of lack of room. One of their largest shippers is John N. May, of Summit, N. J. The stock they handle is largely from Jersey and their roses, especially, are appreciated by the Brooklyn florists.

Poinsettias now add to the brilliancy of the retail window decorations.

At Traendly & Schenck's, J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati, has samples of his pandanus and begonias.

J. Austin Shaw.

Business last week was in no way overrushed, but I am of the opinion that the money market is somewhat responsible. However, not any of our banks have closed their doors. Money is scarce and it seems that the public is slow in spending it for flowers.

There is an abundance of good quality of flowers on the market and the demand is not enough to clean them all up. Funeral work calls for the greater part and uses a great deal of the small blooms.

The mum season is at its height and the market is well stocked. The outdoor stock is still heavy, owing to the favorable weather we have had. At present we are having a heavy rain; flurries of snow are falling with the rain and the wind is blowing a gale. From indications the weather is surely making a change to winter time and the inside blooms will be depended on. Roses are still plentiful and, as usual, selling at a low figure. Carnations are coming in good shape, but many are holding them back until Christmas, for better prices. Paper White narcissi are on the market, but sell slowly. Lily of the valley are slow sellers at present. Violets are arriving in good quantities.

Samples of mistletoe have arrived here from Georgia in fine condition. Greens of all kinds are enough to meet the demands.

Various Notes.

W. O. Stran, Waverly, Md., has opened a new retail store on North and Greenmount avenues.

Harry Ekas, Irvington, Md., is still bringing some choice mums to the retail market.

John Reinecke, Catonsville, Md., is raising some extra fine English milltrack mushroom spawn, averaging half a pound each.

James H. Barnett and wife, of Adamsville, R. I., are visiting their son, C. P. Barnett, at Catonsville, Md.

W. Teipe, Catonsville, is cutting a fine lot of Enchantress carnations and reports that his mums were up to the usual average.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

A week of cloudy weather, with Sunday's added touch of winter, has reduced the quantity of cut flowers coming into this market. Possibly the near approach of Thanksgiving has also caused some holding back of stock in the hopes of increased demand and better prices. At the opening of this week, November 25, the demand is but slightly increased. Few advance orders for Thanksgiving have been placed. Carnations are in lighter supply and prices are firmer. The oversupply of poor chrysanthemums is a thing of the past. The quality of the chrysanthemums now coming in is exceptionally fine. White cattleyas are in fair supply and cypripediums are becoming plentiful. Roses still are overabundant, but fancy stock sells well. Romans and Paper Whites have made their appearance. Violets are not so plentiful and are in fair demand. Bronze galax leaves are now in.

The shipping demand shows some improvement compared with preceding weeks.

The Strafford Flower Farm.

Thomas Beattie was standing at the front door to welcome his guests. This was a mark of courtesy due to the presence of C. S. Wertsner. For, as is well known in horticultural circles, Mr. Wertsner decides who shall fill all the various offices of the Germantown Horticultural Society, including president, three vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer, and all the members of the executive committee, wholly and solely himself without consulting anybody else, merely remarking in a casual way that he thinks So-and-So would be a good man for that office, and should the friend prove at all refractory he adds in his persuasive way, "You are slated for promotion next year." It may be that next year, like tomorrow, never comes, but Mr. Wertsner gets his way. In fact, it has become recognized that C. S. Wertsner is to the Germantown Horticultural Society what Israel W. Durham is to the city of Philadelphia; so now you will see why Mr. Beattie was standing at the front door to welcome Mr. Wertsner and his three companions.

He showed with justifiable pride 24,000 carnations that would have done credit to anyone. In fact, they average better than any carnation plants grown at Strafford in previous seasons. The stock that is particularly fine has been grown indoors all summer, the first house showing some varieties that would be hard to beat with outdoor-grown plants two months later. While the field-grown stock was in good shape, it had not yet rounded into condition, the blooms being smaller and the stems shorter than on those grown in pots. The varieties have undergone considerable change since they were last noted two years ago. Harry Fenn, crimson, has been discarded, and also May Naylor, the then best white, both having proved unequal to market requirements. A white seedling of Edward C. Marshall's is on trial, but has not yet come up to Chester county form. The standard varieties today are: White, Lieut. Peary, My Maryland, Lady Bountiful, Queen and Queen Louise; soft pink, Enchantress; bright pink, Winsor and Genevieve Lord; rose pink, Helen Goddard; scarlet, Beacon and Gov. Bliss.

The chrysanthemum house was filled with a fine lot of Chadwick and Bonnaffon; some pompons are also grown. The flowers of this place are ranked as among the very best by the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co.

The whole place is a model of neatness and cleanliness, showing the progressive ideas of Edward A. Stroud and the faithful ability of his grower, Thomas Beattie.

A Chat With Mr. Berkowitz.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co. have a pleasing novelty in Delft ware. Delft ware is the name given a new style of china vases made in various designs. They are shallow, suitable for small flowers, like violets and pansies. Delft ware is especially adapted for dinner and luncheon decorations and for favors. Mr. Berkowitz's time is too precious to be lavishly expended on anything but business in business hours, but he always takes time to point out something of interest. Showing some bunches of statice, he remarked that this is something many florists are learning to use effectively, often with natural flowers. Statice develops when put in hot water.

Carnations at Forty-ninth and Market Streets

Robert A. Craig led the way into the carnation range, the home two months ago of the Philadelphia lace fern, Nephrolepis Amerpohlii, now so widely distributed over the country. The carnations are fully established, just beginning the season's work. A glance over the varieties may be of interest. Three seedlings have been benched in quantity: a pink and a crimson that did well last season, both from the Cottage Gardens, and a white, the Craig Co.'s own seedling, a beautiful flower, large and fragrant, with strong stems. The standard varieties grown are Robert Craig, Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Fisher and White Perfection. The former is well liked as a productive white for every day.

A Christmas Novelty.

M. Rice & Co. have a pretty idea this season, carried out in baskets, ferneries and pot-covers. It is a combination of red palm and natural willow, the brilliant hue of the former being softened by the green willow drawn through it. The effect is a pleasing Christmas red, free from the glare that so easily becomes too pronounced. Mr. Eschner says these have touched a popular chord.

Various Notes.

"The Retailer's Position Toward the Wholesaler" will be the subject for the Florists' Club's meeting next Tuesday evening. It will be treated by Charles H. Grakelow.

Every man feels especially kindly toward the satisfied customer, one who appreciates his efforts to please. The following extract from a letter received by William J. Baker is gratifying: "The work for which I bought flowers on Saturday, November 9, turned out beautifully. I had a few of the roses left, which I used this last Saturday, November 16, and they were still fine."

John De Buck, an orchid collector, was in this city recently. Mr. De Buck states that the increased demand for orchids from South America is rapidly depleting the stock of plants within easy reach of the coast, and it is now necessary to go much farther into the interior than in the past, thus increasing the expense of gathering the plants.

At the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society the following officers were elected to serve during the ensuing year: President, James W. Paul, Jr.; vice-presidents, James M. Rhoades, Dr. J. Chester Morris, Henry F. Michell, Rudolph Ellis; treasurer, S. W. Keith; secretary, David Rust; professional staff, Prof. Stewardson Brown, Dr. Percival Frazer, Dr. Henry Skinner, Dr. Ida A. Keller; executive council, Robert C. Lippincott, John W. Pepper, Edward A. Schmidt, Robert Craig, John McCleary, Dr. Robert D. Huey and William Robertson.

William K. Harris has been ill. His many friends will be glad to know that he is better and was out again last Friday, November 22.

propagating house planted with poinsettias for cutting. They make a fine showing.

John Berger hopes to have some of Stockton & Howe's new rose on exhibition at the club meeting next Tuesday.

Among the visitors in the city were O. J. Sawyer and Mrs. Sawyer, Allentown, Pa.; P. J. Quinlan, Syracuse, N. Y.; Daniel Gorman, Williamsport, Pa.; Harry Schroyer, Lancaster, Pa., and the manager of the Fernery, Baltimore, Md.

Stockton & Howe, Princeton, N. J., have a new rose of promise. It has a rather long bud, of a pleasing shade of pink, somewhat like Bridesmaid; tough, leathery foliage and an unusually heavy stem give evidence of hybrid tea blood.

T. N. Yates & Co. are cutting their first Harrisii lilies from this season's bulbs. They expect to have 10,000 flowers for Christmas.

Wm. J. Baker and Berger Bros. are receiving some fine Romans and Paper Whites. PHIL.

ATLANTA, GA.—In order to obtain the larger floor space which their increasing business demands, Otto Katzenstein & Co. have removed to 35½ West Alabama street.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Business conditions were such last week that it is not pleasant to write about them. Almost every retailer sings the same song. Outside of the few large social affairs and funeral jobs, there seemed to be nothing doing. Even the street men were complaining, but all are looking for Thanksgiving to start the ball rolling.

Among the wholesalers there has not been quite so much complaint, although there have been such quantities of chrysanthemums, lilies and tea roses that prices were not considered if there was an opportunity to get rid of the stock. Violets seemed to have lost their pull, as they were being sold in quantity at prices which attracted the street men.

Various Notes.

To have seen the shipments of ground pine, boxwood and moss received by the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. last week one would have thought it was Christmas instead of Thanksgiving that was approaching.

Among the visitors were S. S. Pennock, of Philadelphia; J. A. Peterson, of Cincinnati; Martin Reukauf, of Philadelphia; Will Craig, with his new rose, Mrs. Jardine, the flowers of which were well received here by all.

J. B. Murdoch & Co. express themselves as well pleased with the change to 714 Penn avenue. HOO-HOO.

BOSTON.

The Market.

A shortening up of supplies has been in progress for the last few days. The weather also has been overcast for a week, which reduced the output of flowers. There has not been any striking advance in prices, but better clearances have been effected and Thanksgiving prospects appear a little more roseate. Unless an avalanche of flowers appears on the market November 26 and 27, it looks as though trade would be about equal to the normal.

Roses continue to improve. Beauties are advancing on the better grades. Bride and Maid show little change. Killarney is making better prices and there promises to be a good call for the best quality Richmond, Chatenay and Wellesley. Liberty is little seen, having been largely displaced by Richmond.

Carnations are of fine quality and promise to clean out as well as any flowers, colored sorts of course being in best demand. Chrysanthemums will not cut much of a figure after the present week. The finest flowers seen are that excellent late white, Mlle. Jeanne Nonin. There are also some good Chadwick, Golden Dome and Eaton. Of course Bonnaffon is most abundant of the cheaper varieties. Violets have made a little spurt and with clear skies may reach the dollar mark. Paper Whites are now quite plentiful. Callas are more abundant, as are lilies. Valley is in good supply. There are a few sweet peas and some nice gardenias. Cypripedium insigne and cattleyas are among choice flowers. No special change in prices of green supplies.

Various Notes.

Patten & Co. are finding Variegated Lawson prolific this season and the plants carry long stems. They are growing quite a few Winsor, which are doing well. They have a number of promising seedlings coming along.

The club field day at Framingham December 14 will undoubtedly draw a big crowd. Carnations are always a potent attraction when seen as they are done with the Framingham growers.

S. J. Goddard has been on the sick list, but we are pleased to report him as much improved.

The club landscape gardening classes will be held on Tuesday and Friday evenings at Horticultural hall, commencing December 3. One class is for advanced students, the other for beginners. There will be thirty lessons for a total cost of only $8.

J. T. Butterworth has this season many Cattleya labiata sheaths carrying six flowers each and quite a few with seven each. His Cypripedium insigne are fine.

Henry M. Robinson & Co. have received many more orders for Thanksgiving than a year ago and anticipate first-class business this week.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, have a fine house of Cattleya labiata. They had 2,500 flowers open a few days ago.

The Harvard-Yale football game, played at Cambridge November 23, caused a lively demand for violets and crimson mums and carnations. The weather was clear for the first time in a week and this helped trade.

A telegraphic error made the name of F. P. Davis appear in the last issue of the Review as the newly elected vice-president of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, instead of William Downs. The latter served efficiently on the executive committee last year, and his promotion is well merited.

Herman Waldecker, of Braintree, has a fine lot of carnations this season. Mr. Waldecker is a thoroughly up-to-date grower, having some fine, modern houses.

Thomas Roland is marketing some of his fine cyclamens, which are superior to any seen on the Boston market before.

Sidney Hoffman is rapidly coming to the fore as one of the most up-to-date Boston retailers. His successes in the competitive classes at Horticultural hall have greatly benefited him. Mr. Hoffman's window displays at his Massachusetts avenue store are always attractive and rivet the attention of passers-by.

Horrigan, of Foxboro, who is a specialist on Marguerites, is bringing in some fine flowers this early in the season.

Charles J. O'Brien, of Jamaica Plain, has, as usual, a big lot of bulbous stock. Owing to late arrival of bulbs these are a little behind the usual schedule.

George B. Anderson, of Hyde Park, is growing his new scarlet seedling carnation in quantity and finds it a profitable variety for local trade, although its stem is a trifle short.

William Sim's new violet, Boston, awarded a report of superior merit at the last club meeting, promises to be a winner. It has a larger flower than Princess of Wales, a bunch of seventy-five Boston equaling 100 Princess. Mr. Sim has a 300-foot house of it, which is a grand sight now.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal. There were quite a number of other promising seedlings.

Welch Bros. are prepared for a heavy Thanksgiving trade and, with advance orders already secured, they anticipate it will be ahead of last year.

W. N. Craig.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

The Market.

Trade has been a little quiet the last week, as far as the cut flower trade goes. Funeral work is good and this calls for lots of white flowers. Carnations are in good supply, with the demand rather light just now. They retail from 35 cents to 60 cents per dozen. Roses sell from $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail. Violets have not sold very well as yet; they are now bringing from 75 cents to $1 per hundred.

From present indications there will be a good supply of flowers for the holidays.

Horticultural Society.

At the last meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society the subject for discussion was the outdoor and indoor culture of the chrysanthemum. In the absence of the grower who had been expected to address the society on the subject, William Keith delivered a few impromptu remarks, giving some useful information about the outdoor culture of mums. In the general discussion which followed, many important details were considered.

H. A. Jahn spoke of some important early-blooming varieties which have not yet reached us from Europe.

Messrs. Forbes, Sherman, Peirce and Reynolds were appointed a committee to recommend suitable awards for the winners of premiums at the monthly exhibits for the past six months.

The subject for the meeting on December 9 will be "Plants for Christmas Decoration."

Various Notes.

One of H. V. Sowle's boilers gave out last week, but luckily the weather has been good of late. His carnations are looking good and healthy. He intends propagating about 50,000 plants the coming season and has got a big batch in already. White Lawson is a winner with him. He has some grand Boston and Piersoni ferns, which find a good sale. His late mums are now in full swing. There will be some fine Jeanne Nonin mums here for Thanksgiving.

Davenport & Son have a large stock of artificial flower wreaths at their store on Purchase street.

Peter Murray is sending some nice Winsor carnations in to E. H. Chamberlain.

Mrs. H. V. Sowle recently suffered an attack of pneumonia. She is slowly improving.

The ten houses, each 20x150, fitted with Evans' Challenge ventilators, in the new range of the West View Floral Co., are considered by Alec Scott, the superintendent, to be the best sizes for working in this locality. Brides and Maids do well, but Kaiserin is the best summer variety. Wellesley is grand outdoors and will rival Maman Cochet; both are as large as hybrid perpetuals. Wellesley also does well under glass, but prefers solid beds to benches. Killarney is not so thrifty. Richmond does well and likes more water than other teas. Carnations are very promising. Enchantress and Queen Louise are the only two kinds grown and are kept under glass all summer. Pink Enchantress has not been tried, but Mr. Scott says they will have it another season, not wishing to be behindhand with a good thing. He has made several improvements and has things in excellent shape. In time benches will be done away with, as he is convinced that solid beds are the thing in the south, where the sun has such power.

Chrysanthemums are passing, but those having late kinds are getting good prices. There is an abundance of good stock outdoors, which affects the sale of early varieties. Timothy Eaton, Mrs. Jerome Jones and Dr. Enguehard, with Golden Wedding, are the chief kinds. I saw some grand blooms of these in the swell store of the C. A. Dahl Co., where Logan D. Thompson has introduced metropolitan ideas; in fact, it is doubtful whether a more handsome and attractive store of its size can be found anywhere. I saw some grand Beauties here.

I met Dr. Howard, of the Atlanta Floral Co., returning from his extensive plant. He is quite an expert in the business and has a fine stock on hand.

Wachendorf Bros. have made great improvements and added new houses. They do a big outside business, roses being a strong feature, especially the crimson Etoile de France, which they consider the best outdoor tea yet introduced and an excellent companion to Maman Cochet, white, which grows to an immense size here.

I found Mark W. Johnson, of the Johnson Seed Co., engaged in reading the REVIEW. He says the seed bulletins issued weekly are very interesting and keep folks posted when so far from the seat of war. Mr. Johnson landed here and embarked in the business directly after the war, and although he follows along the old lines, he does a remarkable business.

Katzenstein & Co. are busy removing into larger quarters. Seedsmen seem to have the moving fever about this time.

W.

MACON, GA.

Chas. N. Woodruff has the plant formerly owned by his father and does a good business. His specialty is outdoor roses, grown on a ten-acre lot a short distance out. Such varieties as Etoile de France, Maman Cochet, Kaiserin, Wellesley, Hermosa and Etoile de Lyon should be in every southern garden. They thrive luxuriantly in this rich red soil and clear atmosphere.

D. C. Horgan, of the Idle Hour Nurseries, was inclined to think the stringency in the money market is responsible for the sudden let-up in business which started in with a boom. Certainly it is not because this establishment is not producing the stock or is lacking in an attractive display.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

A. Mitting, Santa Cruz, Cal., is offering seed and plant novelties to the trade and working farther into this line each season.

If your opinion does not agree with any expressed in this column of the Review, send in a statement of the situation as you see it.

Visited Chicago: Max Wilhelmi, of Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kan. Mr. Wilhelmi seems not to have lost interest in the onion set problem.

The last of the bulbs for bedding are not moving out as they should, and many little surpluses still represent a considerable part of the season's profit.

Sluis & Groot, Enkhuizen, Holland, annually send out with their catalogue a table showing its prices, stated per cwt. of 112 pounds in English money, reduced to cents per pound in American money.

Many of the bean crops are still in the straw and the growers are hoping that they have kept all right since harvest. This lack of knowledge as to how the beans will look when they are threshed out is the only reason that exists for thinking there may be a shortage. At the time of the last field inspection before harvest things looked favorable for a fairly good yield.

The seedsmen who issue catalogues and cater exclusively to retail trade by mail are not worrying much about prices, from all accounts. They know what they have, they know what it cost them, and, as they have no wholesale trade to bother about in protecting as to price, they can proceed with their catalogues and when they are sold out of a given article and cannot buy at prices to cover they can refund the money and let it go at that.

In the judgment of many of the catalogue compilers the wholesale values of certain varieties of scarce seeds at this season of the year are of little value as a guide to base retail prices on. It is often the case that the users of large quantities of seeds will pay more in the fall than the small buyer will stand for in the spring. A market gardener will usually wait until planting time is at hand and if the price of anything in seeds that he intends to buy is beyond a certain figure he will let it go and swing to something else.

The surplus of Harrisii and longiflorum buds still hangs on.

Orders wired for quantities of peas and other items at prices contained in the wholesale lists have failed of acceptance, although sent without delay.

C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, are steadily increasing their facilities and extending their business, not only in the wholesale department but in the retail catalogue line, where they confine themselves to the Pacific coast, but limit their operations in no other way.

THE Albert Dickinson Co., Chicago, received an importation of $30,000 in gold from Europe November 23.

THE skirmish for sweet corn is reported to have reached the stage of overbidding the other fellows' contracts.

THE Binghamton Seed Co., Binghamton, N. Y., has been incorporated with $25,000 capital stock by William B. Cleves, Harry H. Evans and N. Leroy Boyce, all of Binghamton.

SPEAKING of onion sets, it is a noticeable fact that the whites, no matter where found, are showing a dry rot that is shortening them up; and the worst feature is that there is no way to stop it.

AT Chicago the week opened with the market for timothy seed quiet. November, $4.20, and March, $4.50. Country lots quoted at $3.60 to $4.20. Clover seed, November closed at $15, cash lots at $10 to $14.50.

THE seeds of the flat varieties of onions are likely to range around $2 per pound in the retail catalogues. The Globes will stand at about last year's prices, with the exception of White, which will hardly be less than $4 per pound and perhaps as high as $5. The Italian sorts will not be changed much and the American Silverskin will sell around $2. These prices are the ideas of one or two parties who are anxious to get things settled, and if they do not correspond with the ideas of others on account of being too low they may be altered before the presses are started. It is pretty certain, however, that they will not be lowered.

SEED TRADE IN FRANCE.

A writer in the Journal of the French Trade Federation, in describing the grievances under which the seed trade languishes in that country, makes heavy accusations against the wholesale trade. He states that a large number of wholesale houses, not content with the custom of the recognized retailers, have organized a system of sales through outsiders of all descriptions, such as greengrocers, chemists and many others. The result has been to divert a large volume of trade into the hands of men totally unfitted to deal with it by previous training or knowledge of the articles dealt in; many of whom, by their methods of business, have brought serious discredit on the trade as a body. While the city and suburban trade is cut up by these tactics, the country peasants and farmers are largely supplied by syndicates, philanthropic and otherwise; which many of the wholesale houses treat on trade terms, thus enabling them to supply their members with seeds in small quantities on wholesale lines. The writer states that the trade has been so cut up by these unfair methods that there is no longer a fair living to be made in it, and appeals to his confreres to take united action for mutual defense.

AZALEAS.

The U. S. Board of General Appraisers gave notice of the following reappraisement November 21:

Azaleas.—From Eugene Vervaet, Swynaerde, exported Sept. 20, 1907. Entered at New York. File No. 46692. Invoice No. 2704. Findings of Somerville, G. A.: Azaleas, 18 to 20 inch; entered at 250, advanced to 300 francs per 100. Ditto, 20 to 22 inch, entered at 300, advanced to 400 francs per 100. Add cases and packing.

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $31,472.

SEED WARRANTY.

The Rural New-Yorker has been interesting itself in the matter of the seedsmen's non-warranty and recently addressed the following inquiry to a number of leading seed houses:

One of our readers says he will pay $10 a pound for Prizetaker onion seed absolutely true to name—which will not produce onions of different shape or color from Prizetaker. Will your house guarantee such seed?

The replies are full of interest as showing how such inquiries are handled by those who meet them most frequently. Thorburn & Co. cut it short, as follows:

"We can supply seed of Prizetaker onion, but we would not guarantee it, or any other article, in fact, under any consideration. Our stock comes from the most reliable growers, and we believe it to be pure, but we could not hold ourselves responsible for the crop or for the seed being true to name."

Burpee & Co. talk as though they expect to make a sale, as follows:

"At Fordhook Farms each season we have the most complete trial grounds in the United States. We know that our seeds are as good and as pure as any on the market, and in fact many times we find them far superior to many strains that are ordinarily supplied. There is so much to be considered as to the purity of a seed crop that we doubt very much if there is a seedsman anywhere who would guarantee new crop seed to be absolutely pure. If your reader desired to purchase seed of the Prizetaker onion that can be guaranteed to be as true to name as it is possible to get it, it would be far better for him to purchase year-old seed from a firm who annually test all the seed they supply. At Fordhook we test samples for purity from every sack of onion seed that is received from our growers. Seeds of all kinds, as you know, will vary very much indeed in different seasons, but it is reasonable to suppose that seed carried over from a lot that had been proven in the trial grounds will give the same results the next season, although it may be a little deficient in vitality. We have so much confidence in our seeds that they have for years been sold under a guarantee which states plainly that while we cannot assume any responsibility for the crop, yet we will at all times, if any of our seeds prove unsatisfactory, replace the seeds supplied or refund the purchase price. Further than this we would not guarantee."

New Close-Clinging Hardy Climber

AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Veitchii.

The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn.

In size the leaves are small, beautifully dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump.

This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

CATALOGUE COVERS.

Now that the covers of the 1908 books have been mostly determined, it may be of interest to weigh the effort by the remarks on the subject made at the last Seed Trade convention by J. Horace McFarland, as follows:

"Covers fall into two general divisions, the first including that type of cover which specifically offers something to sell in addition to announcing the business of the seedsman. The second class includes the plain and decorative covers not making any specific selling offer, but intended to serve merely as the protection implied in the name, cover, or, if sufficiently dignified and decorative, to stop the catalogue on the way to the yawning waste-basket, which is the seedman's Hades.

"Much experience has made me shy in relation to having any definite opinions as to the selling power of any particular form of cover. This same experience has convinced me that there is a tendency for better covers; that is, those truer to life and free from the garish characteristics of the German school of lithography. Yet candor compels me to also state that I have seen an apparently beautiful and accurate cover fall down utterly in pulling business, and an extremely plain and simple cover produce satisfactory results.

"The selling covers have been usually colored, and sometimes gaudily colored; yet a number of extremely satisfactory covers are in monotone. Speaking cautiously and with an attempt to consider the whole country and not the east merely, I feel that a well-considered colored cover made by some one of the processes which give truthfulness in form as well as in color, is likely to be satisfactory and profitable. That it is hard to devise and secure such covers no man before me needs to be told.

"I think that, after all, the question of covers simmers down closely to the class of trade sought. If the seed house is of age and dignity, the covers of its catalogues should show that dignity, and can bear to advantage some restraint. If the trade sought is that of the farmer, color may and frequently does prove distinctly advantageous. That one of the strongest, oldest and largest American seed houses has within the last two seasons found it pays to drop entirely the glaring forms of lithography for an extremely refined decorative cover on its expensive book, is a significant point which may well be sharply considered.''

SIMILAR SWEET PEAS.

Many seedsmen, both at home and in America, says a writer in an English trade paper, look upon George Herbert as an improved John Ingman. Cole's determination to offer seed of his original stock will settle the matter, for it is certain that some of the stuff going about is nothing like the variety he first sold to Sydenham. George Herbert is claimed to be the result of a cross. A much boomed penny-a-seed variety of last year was also said to be the result of a cross, but the difference between it and John Ingman, as I know it, was infinitesimal. The advent of Rosy Morn, which was quite fixed with me, still further creates trouble, and I was amazed when I saw it flower.

Rosie Sydenham is little if any different, and the fact of Burpee's dropping it out of their list after introducing it serves to indicate its nearness to John Ingman. Personally, I could find no difference in these two as I grew them in 1905.

Still another variety that is likely to cause some discussion is the new Paradise Carmine. I suppose we may take it for granted that these newer sorts have been selected from some other variety, and to the selectors they may possess points which appear to warrant a fresh name. The difficulty, however, is to convince the growers that such is the case. There are scores who look upon Enchantress as being little if any way different from Countess Spencer. Paradise was claimed to be an improved Enchantress, yet the greater part of it was purely Countess Spencer, while the remainder differed in no way from Enchantress, so far as I could see. Yet when Paradise was first exhibited, I looked upon it as synonymous with Codsall Rose, a variety possessing more color than Enchantress, but having a tendency to reversion.

What applies to John Ingman also applies to Countess Spencer, for the raiser's own stock is now being offered. Should Cole's stocks of these and his other Spencer varieties possess superior points, either in coloring or fixity, it is safe to say that the recognized traders will suffer.

I have reason to believe that Cole has been worried a great deal by amateurs for true stocks, and his determination to offer all varieties of his own raising means that the many splendid things he has in hand will not pass into trade channels in the ordinary way, and all because of the sporting trouble. It is a great pity, anyhow!

SUMMIT, N. J.

Lager & Hurrell are continually extending their glass to hold their steadily increasing importations of orchids, the trade in which grows from year to year. Five large houses are filled to repletion, in addition to a lean-to built last season for cool subjects. In this latter house cement benches are built, which Mr. Lager says are less expensive than wood and practically imperishable. Cattleyas in all the standard commercial sorts are largely grown and look well. Such sorts as Trianæ, Mossiæ, Mendelli, labiata, gigas, Dowiana, Schrœderiana, of which a splendid lot were recently received; Gaskelliana, Warneri, superba and speciosissima are mostly grown. Some fine white forms of C. labiata were in flower. C. labiata chrysotoxa and Percivaliana were all being cut for market, the demand for orchid flowers being good.

Fine lots of Lælia anceps, many being white; phalænopsis, Vanda cœrulea, cypripediums, including such valuable sorts as Fairieanum; insigne Sanderae, Harefield Hall, Leeanum, Clinkaberryanum and others; cymbidiums, Vanda teres, Calanthe Veitchii, Lælia elegans, cœlogynes and Miltonia candida and Roezlii are grown. Many of the cattleyas are grown on rafts to supply cut flowers. They do not last so long grown in this way as if in pots or baskets, but soon pay for themselves in flowers marketed.

Both Mr. Lager and Mr. Hurrell are very optimistic as to the future of orchids, and find a steadily growing call for them, especially from commercial men.

Vegetable Forcing.

The price of leaf lettuce at Chicago has been unprofitably low for the last month or six weeks.

Walter P. Stokes, Philadelphia, calls himself "the market gardeners' seedsman," because the special attention he gives the market gardeners' needs has brought him a large business in that special line.

In taking up asparagus for forcing, if forced in that way, great care should be exercised so that all the roots possible will be carried. The plants should be planted somewhat closely together in light, rich soil. The temperature at starting should be about 50 degrees. As growth proceeds the temperature may be increased to 70 degrees. In finishing the crop, ventilation is essential to a natural color.

Under greenhouse conditions and at the time of year that the cucumber is forced it is necessary to provide for pollination. In small establishments this work can be done by hand. The staminate blossoms are removed, the petals turned back so as to allow the anthers to project, and the pencil thus produced is then thrust into the cup of the pistillate flower in such a way as to distribute pollen upon the stigma of the pistillate flower. In large establishments where hand pollination is out of the question a colony of honey bees frequently is placed in each house to accomplish the work.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 25.—Cucumbers, 75c to $1.25 doz.; leaf lettuce, 20c to 25c case.

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Leaf lettuce, 15c to 17½c case; cucumbers, 75c to $1.25 doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 40c lb.

Boston, Nov. 25.—Cucumbers, $3.50 to $8 box; tomatoes, 25c lb.; lettuce, 40c doz.; mint, 40c to 50c doz. bunches; mushrooms, 60c to 75c lb.; romaine, 75c to $1 doz.; escarolle, 75c to $1 doz.

New York, Nov. 25.—Cucumbers, select, 75c to $1.25 doz.; seconds, $2 to $3.50 box; lettuce, 60c to $1.12 per strap of 3 doz.; mushrooms, 25c to 75c lb.; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 15c lb.

Findlay, O., Nov. 21.

PRIZE ONIONS.

Some may wonder how the large onions that are occasionally seen at exhibitions are produced in such size and perfection. Although large specimens are sometimes the result of ordinary outdoor culture all through the summer, the method usually adopted by gardeners when aiming at exhibition onions, is the sowing of the seed of Prizetaker or Ailsa Craig in shallow flats during the latter part of winter. When the seedlings are fit to handle they are transplanted into other flats, and perhaps shifted later into small pots. In spring, when danger of frost is over, they are planted outdoors in well enriched soil. Generous space is allowed for each onion to develop properly. Thorough soil cultivation is always essential to success. Feeding with liquid manure or chemicals is also resorted to by enthusiasts. B.

DAMP-ROT OF LETTUCE.

The damp-rot has lately appeared in my lettuce. Any advice you can give regarding the treatment of the disease, also treatment of the soil to prevent the spreading of the disease, will be appreciated. H. O.

The only thing you can do to check the disease is to lower the temperature a little and keep the atmosphere of your house as dry as possible, but if damp-rot has much of a hold it is doubtful if you can ever bring your plants back to a fairly healthy condition.

This disease is one of the most vexing problems that confront the lettuce grower, and is brought on by some unsuitable condition for which it is often hard to account. Several causes may contribute toward the development of the disease. Constant vigilance is the price of good lettuce, so the grower's energies should be directed toward the prevention of the trouble by keeping the conditions as suitable for the crop as possible.

Lettuce does not take kindly to artificial conditions, such as must prevail to a greater or less extent under greenhouse treatment. It will stand so much, but no more. In all my experience I have never found a case of damp-rot on lettuce grown in coldframes, with average care. This goes to show that the conditions prevailing in the coldframe are quite congenial to its welfare, and in growing it in the greenhouse it is a safe guide to copy the coldframe conditions as nearly as possible; here there is usually abundance of natural moisture, but this does not seem to do them any harm in the absence of artificial heat. In the greenhouse the artificial heat dries up the natural moisture, but causes an unnatural condensation. In this condensation, it is my opinion, lies the root of the trouble. From this, then, we can readily conclude that the less artificial heat we use the less condensation we are likely to have, besides preserving more of the natural moisture.

I have found from experience that lettuce cannot be forced. It must come along by easy stages, and it pays to wait a little longer for a good crop and make ample allowance for the time it will take, rather than start a little late and try to rush them in for a certain date. For just as sure as the grower begins to try to push things, damp-rot or some other such disease will put in its appearance and not only check the growth of the plants, but cause endless trouble. W. S.

Baltimore, Md.—The Maryland Horticultural Society will hold its annual meeting here December 3 and 4. Among the announced speakers on floricultural topics are E. A. Seidewitz, of Annapolis; Peter Bisset, of Washington, D. C., and C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y.

Des Moines, Ia.—Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Simons, whose little son, Joe, died November 15, wish to extend their sincere gratitude to the many florists, in Des Moines and throughout the state, who sent messages and flowers, expressive of sympathy with them in their bereavement.

PACIFIC COAST.

SNOHOMISH, WASH.—Fred Gall, who came here from Chicago five years ago, now has about 5,000 feet of glass and is carrying on a very prosperous business.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Trade.

The city is feeling the effects of the financial quiver which is visiting the whole country, and, as three banking institutions have already suspended, naturally we are apprehensive of the outcome. We experienced a few extremely quiet days early in the month, and every means of economy was rigidly enforced, lunches consisting of coffee and sinkers being one principal dish and a nickel cigar our only luxury. However, we are not pessimistic, and trade has averaged well. Social events are of minor importance and counter trade is suggestive of the depression. It is the big funeral orders that keep us occupied and relieve the market of the surplus. The bright days are still with us, and all kinds of stock are abundant and of the finest. Never have we seen more beautiful chrysanthemums than the blooms now offered to the Portland public. Timothy Eaton and Appleton are giants and have all the qualifications for strong competition. Yet we have to admit that they have suffered, like all other matured stock, for present prices will not warrant growing so many of them another year. Even the great horse show last week did not stimulate the sale of them, violets being the general favorite for that occasion.

Carnations are maintaining good quality, and we notice some excellent blooms of late addition to this staple flower.

Roses are good, only a trifle off crop, which is as it should be while the mum is supreme. H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business, although not equal in volume to that done at this time one year ago, is in comparison with that of other trades, very fair. There is a surplus of outdoor mums, and violets are overplentiful, but outside of these two articles everything is well bought up. Roses continue to be scarce, especially fancy stock, and there are not more than enough carnations to supply the demand.

Valley is in good supply and is being better cleaned up than it was a couple of weeks ago. Indoor mums are getting scarce and only a few of the later varieties of white and yellow are seen. Narcissi have made their appearance in fair supply and Roman hyacinths are seen, but move slowly.

Sweet peas are showing the results of the cooler nights and all kinds of outside stock, with the exceptions I have named, are becoming scarcer and of poorer quality.

Smilax has at last become cheap enough to be used in any place where green goods are required. Good, long-stemmed maidenhair seems to be off crop with a majority of the growers. There is plenty of shorter stuff, but this is not of a desirable quality.

Business in Oakland continues to be as good as can be expected, although not up to the standard of one year ago. The best trade at present seems to be in the line of funeral orders.

Various Notes.

Domoto Bros. are cutting heavily of late white chrysanthemums. They have several fine lots of Mrs. Jerome Jones.

Charles D. Belden will leave on an extended eastern trip immediately after Thanksgiving.

The Italian growers in the vicinity of South San Francisco complain that this is the first season in many years that there has been a surplus of flowers at this time.

Mrs. Mary Belle Gill, wife of Edward Gill, the pioneer Pacific coast nursery man, died at her residence, Bellamount Place, West Berkeley, November 17, aged 65 years. Mrs. Gill had been a resident of California for over forty years and was well known for her charitable deeds. She had been a constant companion for her bereaved husband during that time and when death overtook her she was surrounded by her immediate family, consisting of PREPARING CUTTINGS.

We are now at the season when hardwooded cuttings of hardy stock can be made with safety. This does not apply to all portions of this country, but the Pacific coast is peculiarly situated climatically and consequently we do such work much earlier than it can be done farther east. When the rainfall decides whether planting of cuttings is to commence or not, it is all-important that the soil be put in condition at the earliest moment. I mean by this that the plowing or spading must be done as soon as possible, even if it has to be done again, owing to an excess of rain, by which the soil packs so hard that planting is impossible. This is more noticeable in heavy soils than it is in sandy soil and it is nothing unusual to have to replow three or four times before the soil is in the proper condition to receive cuttings.

When the proper time to make the cuttings arrives, and it is when deciduous trees are thoroughly dormant and at this time evergreens will be practically in the same condition, I have found it a good plan to make the cuttings, tie them in bunches and put them under a greenhouse bench, covering the ends for an inch or so in sand. They should not be kept too long or too dark in this position, but they have the advantage of not getting too much water before they are ready to sprout.

On the other hand, if the weather is too dry or the ground not yet sufficiently moistened to be workable, the same rule can be carried out. Do not let the cuttings get dry, however, for although they do not require much moisture, they must not be allowed to get too dry.

In this condition most cuttings will callous over and this makes them doubly sure to grow, and at the same time the dead ones can be discarded.

This way of handling is not applicable to many kinds of evergreens, especially those that are heavily leaved. But in other cases the leaves can be stripped off and the cuttings treated as in deciduous stock.

Should unfavorable conditions remain so long that the cuttings are in danger of damping off, the best plan is to open the bunches and plant them in flats. They can be put very closely together and the sand should be well packed around them. Be careful that they do not get any excess of heat overhead, for this is particularly liable to happen during our season of frosty nights and warm days.

Provided the roots have grown in proportion to the tops, there is little danger of handling hardy cuttings of any kind even as late as April, when the soil is sufficiently moist either by natural or artificial means to receive them.

The great trouble is with too much moisture at the root and an excess of heat overhead, with an absence of the callousing process at the planted end.

Much better success will be had in making cuttings early and keeping them in the way mentioned than in waiting for the soil and the weather to get right. And the stock plants in the meanwhile are allowed to get in a condition where the sap commences to rise. G.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

C. A. Rowley is preparing to start a nursery at Gridley, Ill.

David P. Marcum is reported to be planting an orchard of 10,000 Elberta peach trees at Woodward, Ok., this fall.

Wiseman's horticultural establishment, Elgin, Scotland, says it has ten million larch and eight million Scotch fir seedlings one and two years old.

William A. Peterson, Chicago, says that his confidence in the peony has been justified by the aggregate of the season's sales, which are ahead of last year.

This has been a splendid season for the nurserymen of the middle west. Freezing up having held off, they have done a most gratifying amount of fall planting, and are still at it.

One feature of the nursery business is that fall orders, if anything prevents filling, can be carried over until spring, but spring orders, if not filled, are lost. It pays to push for autumn business.

Gorse, or Ulex Europæus, has been successfully grown from plants raised from seed imported from Scotland, in several locations along the New England coast. It has not only survived one but several winters and blooms regularly and profusely.

Peterson Nursery, Chicago, reports that its fall season now is double the spring season in volume of business done, where it was just the other way only a few years ago. Now all work of transplanting in the nursery is done in the spring instead of in the autumn, as formerly was the practice.

Fred C. Smith, Ashland, Wis., has taken steps toward becoming a nurseryman as well as a florist. For that purpose he has purchased twelve acres of land near town, and will begin work on it as soon as the weather will permit next spring. It is his intention to put in 20,000 plants the first season, including fruit and ornamental trees, shrubs and everything appertaining to a first-class nursery.

When it is desirable to procure trees of rapid growth and of pyramidal habit, to be planted somewhat closely together to screen some unattractive object, Lombardy poplars will be found to answer the purpose admirably. This tree is also well adapted for planting on boundaries of estates and on places where the architecture, as well as the general character of the landscape, requires trees possessing such pronounced characteristics.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, N. Y., who holds timber interests in Michigan, is attacking the state taxing laws, which he says are hastening the deforesting of the state by making it economically impossible for property owners to maintain their property on the plan of a forest reserve. Mr. Ward delivered a carefully prepared address on the subject at the Lake States Forestry Convention held at Saginaw, Mich., November 12 and 13.

The season is now at hand for the annual meetings of the state horticultural societies, and the nurserymen who have the gift of oratory or the art of "mixing" will proceed to get busy. Either accomplishment is worth cultivating.

One of the most rapid growing thorns, as well as one of the handsomest while in flower and fruit, is the cockspur thorn, or Cratægus Crus-galli. This thorn flowers usually about the middle of May, and while in full bloom it is a gorgeous mass of pure white. Late in the autumn the fruit begins to color, until by the middle of October it is a bright red color. The fruit remains on the tree for a considerable time during which there are but few more striking or cheerful objects than trees covered with fruit.

PROTECTION OF EVERGREENS.

Small and medium-sized evergreens invariably need some protection in winter. At least, it usually happens that those protected in some way are in much better condition when spring opens than those of our choice varieties we may have neglected to protect. Manure, hay, straw or even leaves will answer for the soil over the roots.

In providing partial cover in winter for the branches of evergreens the idea is not to protect them from frost, but rather to shade them from the evil effects of the sun when they are in a frozen condition. To prevent such bad

FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well ripened. Roses potted up in the fall or winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard and force at your leisure. We recommend American-grown Ramblers. Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are a failure.

We offer exceptionally strong two-year-old dormant, low-budded stock (on Manetti), in the following varieties, true to name:

Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson, shaded.
Baroness Rothschild. Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh-color.
Duke of Edinburgh. Bright vermilion; fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose pink.
La France. The finest light pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

Prices on Hardy Hybrid Perpetual Roses. 75c for bundle 5. $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. 25 at 100 rate, 250 at 1000 rate.

AMERICAN GROWN CRIMSON RAMBLERS

The Only Stock for Forcing.

Large plants, 2 to 3 feet, $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.
Large, heavy plants, two years old, 3 to 5 feet, $1.75 for 10; $15.00 per 100.
Extra heavy plants, 4 to 6 feet, $2.00 for 10; $18.00 per 100.

THE BABY RAMBLER

Mme. Norbert Levavasseur. Strong field-grown plants, $1.25 for 10; $12.00 per 100.

THE NEW BABY RAMBLER ROSE

Catherine Zeimet. A very important novelty. A White Baby Rambler Rose, larger and better flowers than the type. White with yellowish center. An important fact is that it has the true rose perfume in a high degree. One of the best polyantha types to date. Fine forcer. 50c each; $5 per dozen; $40.00 per 100. Extra heavy, 75c each; $7.50 per dozen; $60.00 per 100.

THE TREE BABY RAMBLER

Grows as a Standard.

The popularity of the Baby Rambler has suggested the growing of it as a tree or standard. The variety is too well known for description; enough to say, it retains all its characteristics of free blooming qualities, etc. 35c each; $3.50 per dozen; $25.00 per 100.

DEUTZIA

Gracilis. Pot-grown for forcing, $2.00 per dozen; $15.00 per 100.
Lemoinei. Pot-grown for forcing, $2.50 per dozen; $18.00 per 100.

the greatest Pot Rose for Florists extant. A superb forcing variety. We have proved it. Color a deep pink. Price, $3.50 per 10; $30.00 per 100.
WHITE BABY RAMBLER (Catherine Zeimet), with double white perfect flowers—fragrant. A good forcer. Price, $3.50 per 10; $30.00 per 100.
PINK BABY RAMBLER (Anny Muller), a perfect bedding rose—as such there is nothing to equal it. Its color is charming. $3.00 per 10; $25.00 per 100. Above all field-grown plants.

effects, spruce or hemlock branches stuck in among the growing plants will help greatly, and so will loose hay or straw strewn over and among the branches.

It is not expedient to transplant small evergreens from now on until spring, but if there is urgent need of moving large specimens, the work can be carried on successfully if good balls of earth are taken with the trees. If the nature of the soil makes it difficult to retain large balls, a good plan will be to do all the digging except that necessary for undermining and then allow the ball to freeze, when there will be little difficulty in excavating underneath. M.

SPRAYING.

There is no questioning the fact that the almost unchecked ravages of the San Jose scale on fruit trees has had a very bad effect on the growing and sale of fruit trees, as well as what is of fully as much importance, the supply of many kinds of fruit.

In the last year or two spraying has been resorted to for the extermination of San Jose scale, with marked success wherever it has been thoroughly and systematically done. Now that fruit trees are bare of foliage and thus in a condition to receive a thorough covering of the spray, they should be attended to without delay. There is a great deal in seeing to it that no portion of the tree is uncovered, else the scale left untouched will increase with amazing rapidity. Farmers looked on the spraying of potatoes with Paris green as a matter of course and a necessary duty. Nurserymen and gardeners have no excuse for being in any way less mindful of fruit trees, and when spraying will come to be looked to as a duty, then the days of the San Jose scale will be numbered, if along with that every state gives legislative authority for the destruction of infected trees when their owners are indifferent to their condition. M.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business has been quite satisfactory to the retailers. Several funerals which called for a large number of designs, besides a number of dinner decorations and several weddings, have used up nearly all the good stock on hand. The continued bright weather has given us a good growing season and the fall crop of flowers is showing quality rather ahead of the usual at this season. The troubles of the stock and money markets seem to have had less effect on the cut flower business than in any other line of the so-called luxuries. Some dealers report a slight percentage of falling off from the receipts compared to last year, but others report what they consider a normal trade, or even a slight increase for November. The charity ball which took place November 21 was the beginning of the social season, and the attendance showed no falling off. The decorations for the ball were elaborate, as usual, and done by the Park Floral Co.

Beauties are scarce and hard to get, especially long stems. Carnations are none too plentiful, but tney are of excellent quality. Reds are a little scarce, and will be for Thanksgiving, while white and pink and Enchantress are more abundant. Prices are firm at 3 cents and 4 cents. The violet situation is not exactly satisfactory as yet, and supply is limited, at $1 per hundred wholesale. Paper White narcissi are coming in now and they find ready sale.

Chrysanthemums have come forward very fast and this week will practically see the last of these flowers, except a few late ones. They have been in good supply and as a paying crop they have been a success, with prices averaging as good as last year.

Brides and Bridesmaids are in good crop and yet none have gone to waste. Richmond, perhaps, is more abundant than others and excellent in quality. E. S. K.

BERLIN, ONT.—The potting shed of H. L. Janzen was gutted by fire early on the morning of November 17 and the contents were entirely destroyed. Owing to the calmness of the night and the excellent work of the fire department the greenhouses were saved, but considerable damage was done to the stock by smoke and heat. The loss is estimated at $4,000, partly covered by insurance. The fire started in the boiler-room, but the cause is unknown.

New Carnation Brilliant Scarlet

DEFIANCE

THIS sterling novelty is the result of a cross between Estelle and a seedling with Maceo and Daybreak blood in it, and was originated by W. N. Rudd, Mount Greenwood, Ill. The color is a most brilliant scarlet, brighter than anything seen in Carnations heretofore; size, 3 inches and over; habit and form ideal. It is a very rapid grower and has no tendency to produce surplus grass, every shoot advancing rapidly and producing a perfect flower. If you did not already place your order for some, we would advise you to do so without delay, so as to get early delivery.

$12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Usual discount on larger orders.

There may be other reds, but there is only one scarlet carnation, and that is DEFIANCE. Come and see it growing, and be convinced.

Current Comment.

Business was quiet last week and prices for all stock remain the same. The supply, as far as mums are concerned, is greater than the demand. All look for a good Thanksgiving trade and that will about clean up the mum crop, with the exception of a few late ones.

I forgot to mention in my notes of last week the exhibit of Mr. Totty. The single chrysanthemums he sent contained two or three varieties that will be useful, but the six single blooms were the attraction and easily overshadowed all others in size. All wished he had added a few more and put them up in competition. The exhibit of Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., arrived too late to be judged, much to the regret of all concerned, as all the blooms were fine and would have displaced some of the others. But such is the fortune of the shows, as it seems to be impossible for all exhibitors to be able to get their exhibits through on time and it's an "ill wind that blows no one any good."

Messrs. Langstaff and Irwin Bertermann are candidates for the position of superintendent of parks. Their many friends hope they are not losing any sleep over the job.

F. J. Hartwich, of the Foley Manufacturing Co., was in the city this week. S.

THE trade could not do without it.—F. W. MURDOCK, Gardner, Mass.

CARNATION SARAH HILL, ACTUAL SIZE.

SARAH HILL

The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

Either variety at $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Business conditions remain steady, with a little rush of funeral work now and then. Many small parties have taken place, with the exceptional large one. Plenty of stock is going to waste, the bulk of the stock being mums. The Japanese air plants have found a ready sale and, with a neat vase, bring a good price.

Various Notes.

John Milley, who a few months ago bought the business from his brother, is erecting a new house. The King Construction Co. is doing the work. William Milley was married a few weeks ago.

J. Rowland Cloudsley has been suffering from a slight attack of rheumatism.

David Scott, of Corfu, is sending in fine mums, the leaders being white and pink Maud Dean. R. A. S.

WACO, TEX.

In the chrysanthemum exposition recently held here by the State Floral Society, many fine exhibits were staged and attracted a large attendance. One of the most unique designs, awarded a prize, was an elaborate navigation scene, made of mums and roses, by Miss Annie Wolfe. The following were among the prize winners in the general exhibits: In plants and decorations, Miss Annie Wolfe, Chas. H. Mayer and Miss B. Harn. In cut chrysanthemums, James Mohan, Chas. H. Mayer, Walter L. Reese and Walter L. Reese, Jr. In cut roses, C. A. Kasserman and Walter L. Reese, Jr. In cut carnations, Miss Annie Wolfe.

Among the most successful exhibitors in the amateur classes were Mrs. Geo. W. King, Miss Emma Nelson, Mrs. N. M. Gay, Mrs. W. S. Plunkett, Mrs. W. P. Gilbert, J. W. Barnett, D. A. Saunders and George Stubblefield.

DENISON, TEX.

Regardless of the unfavorable weather and the freeze just before the opening, the second annual flower show of the Denison Civic Improvement League November 20 to 23 was a success in every way. The exhibits of the city schools were a prominent feature. Among the out-of-town florists who sent exhibits were: J. W. Vestal & Son, Little Rock, Ark.; H. O. Hannah and T. P. Gorman, Sherman, Tex., and Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich.

Blue Island, Ill.—William Beyer is about to start on a trip to Europe, where he will spend the winter.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Flowers of all kinds moved rather slowly last week. Roses especially have been a drug on the market. Good mums brought fair prices, but the large quantity of poor stock that arrives has had to be moved at great sacrifices. Valley has hung fire, it being impossible to interest a buyer at any price. About the only stock cleaned up was carnations and eastern double violets, which sold well.

Various Notes.

Smith & Fetters held their usual fall opening three days last week. The store was handsomely decorated with southern smilax and autumn leaves, elaborately lighted with fruit and vegetable electric globes, giving the store a regular Thanksgiving appearance. Huge bunches and baskets, mostly gifts from the trade, of chrysanthemums, roses, etc., were arranged in the store. The window looked especially well, with its handsome green and lace curtains sprayed with California grapes and adiantum. The dining-table in the center of the window was exceptionally handsome, with its different decorations of choice flowers each day. Small baskets, hampers and vases of violets, orchids, sweet peas and valley furnished the decorations. The attendance for the three days was unusually large.

Frank Piggott, on the west side, is out with a fine new delivery wagon, it being one of the handsomest in the city. The color is solid black, with gold lettering.

George W. Smith, of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, had the misfortune to lose his daughter, a baby of eight months. The entire craft expresses sympathy in the bereavement.

Ogden Gaul, of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., reports business first-class throughout the state.

Fred Zeichman has been rebuilding some of his houses, putting in cement sides on the new benches.

John Kichner is cutting some fine Romans and Paper Whites, which come in handy for his funeral work, of which he has quantities.

Gordon Gray has a fine house of mums for Thanksgiving.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. will be in its new store on High street December 1. It will be one of the finest wholesale cut flower and supply stores in the west.

Knoble Bros. report trade good, having had a good run of funeral work all last week.

Visitors: A. Weaver, Massillon, O.; John Scott, Lisbon, O.; Williams Bros., Lorain, O.; W. H. Jones, Lorain, O.

B.

Boonville, Mo.—E. C. Stammerjohn has four greenhouses and a prosperous business. He is just putting in a new boiler. He, too, has a sport of the Boston fern.

Bargains Now

Prices reduced to the lowest point to suit the times.

Watch! Prosperity! Look!

MONEY STRINGENCY IS NOW OVER, market revised and the country is now again in normal condition. Great prosperity is now in sight for us all. Why not for you? A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band

and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), planted in 5-in. pots, 3 tiers, beautiful little stock, 40c. You can sell them at once.

Last Spring's Importation

Araucaria Excelsa—3-year-old, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 10, 12, 14 inches, 3 tiers, 50c.
Araucaria Excelsa—3-year old, 5½-in. pots, 15, 16, 17 inches high, 3 to 4 tiers, 60c.

The Market.

Last week brought the lowest ebb of the flower business for this season. There was hardly any life in the demand and what stock was sold had almost to be pushed upon the buyer, and at any price. Roses were sold out at job lots for what one could get for them. Even the best quality was hard to move at a decent price. Mums arrived in large quantities, but it can be said for them that few found their way into the ash barrel and the average price was not so bad, all things considered. But it took hustling to keep things moving so as to prevent a big glut. Carnations in all but the poorer grades moved out nicely and the best quality sold at a good price. Violets were in fair demand and sold well in spurts. Valley sold much the same way. Lilies are a drug. The small mums for work were a glut and they were the hardest of all to move. The retailers had no funeral orders, and even cheapness would not tempt them.

From all indications it appears that from now on mums will be good property. The heaviest cut is over and what are left will average much better prices. Thanksgiving also will give things a boost, as quite a few advance orders have been booked and there ought to be some good business before this week is over. With the demand anywhere near the supply, prices will advance to normal, and with the business thus equalized all of us will feel more cheerful and perhaps begin to make a little money.

Various Notes.

David Knott, who has charge of the city greenhouses in Eden park, has his mums in fine shape this season and the houses are being visited by thousands of people every day. The last two Sundays brought out large crowds, who were well pleased with what they saw.

Myer Heller, of New Castle, Ind., was here for a couple of days last week. He was on his way home from a business trip through the south.

Fred Lautenschlager, representing the Kroeschell Bros. Co., of Chicago, was a caller.

C. J. Ohmer.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—As is well known in the trade, T. L. Metcalfe, besides his greenhouses, has several other interests, including a steam laundry, and it is said that between the greenhouses and laundry he gives the express companies more business than any one else in Hopkinsville.

"PLEASE SEND THE REVIEW."

The Review finds much encouragement in the receipt of letters like the following from a florist at South Framingham, Mass.:

"Please send the Review to ———, South Framingham, Mass., for which I enclose his dollar. The Review is all right, as is shown by my advising Mr. ——— to take it in preference to three others."

But what interests the publisher is that the Review is all right enough for a subscriber to take it upon himself to take a friend's money and mail it in, simply because he thinks the friend will profit by having the Review; it must be all right, sure enough.

The Review frequently receives such courtesies at the hands of its readers, for which it not only returns thanks but promises to provide an increasingly interesting paper.

21 YEARS

spent in running greenhouses will not make a rubber manufacturer out of a florist. But 21 years' experience enables a FLORIST to select a hose as no manufacturer could, with regard to lightness, strength, flexibility and endurance.

SUNNYWOODS GREENHOUSES afford both the experience and the hose.

A TEST

The "Sunnywoods" Hose is one that I can heartily and conscientiously endorse, after seeing its behavior since the spring of 1905. This afternoon I gave a severe test to a length that has been in constant use for over 2¼ years, by putting on the "Boss jet" SHUT TIGHT, and then turned on the water. Our water has a pressure of 110 lbs. and although this hose was worn through 4 of the 7 ply, it stood the test; which is even better than I thought for. This should speak for itself to any florist wanting a good hose.

(Sig.) H. A. STOLLERY,
Nov. 16, 1907. Foreman.

Price, 16 cents per foot. Size, ¾-in., in lengths of 30 and 50 feet, with couplings.

To introduce it, it will be sold at 15 cents when cash accompanies order or if ordered C. O. D.

TOLEDO, O.—John Barrow says that business is good. He has started a store at 2103 Park place, to be run in conjunction with his other place.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—Burt & Coggan, successors to Henry M. Burt, formally opened their fine double store October 29. During the opening 1,500 small mums in bloom, in 4-inch pots, were given to the first 1,500 ladies that entered the store. When these plants had been disposed of, 2,000 cut carnations were also given away. Though the store was uncomfortably crowded by the throngs of people that attended, yet they were all good-natured and appreciative. The opening has proved to be a good advertisement.

SAVANNAH, GA.

A. C. Oelschig & Son report a bigger trade than ever in rubbers. Mr. Oelschig, Sr., the acknowledged rubber king, was under the weather at the time of my visit, but only for a spell, he says. The boys are keeping up the reputation made by the founder and, judging by the quality of the wagonload of floral designs just being sent out, the Gate City can hold its own in this direction.

A. W. Richardson is a recent addition to the craft and is scoring a success. He was formerly a successful market gardener and has combined the two branches into one.

Geo. Foulsham is superintendent of the S. P. Shotter estate and is making many improvements. He is a Lenox graduate and very popular with the boys here.

There is talk of forming a florists' club, and certainly there is ample material for one. John Wolf will give the first essay, on how to force valley, he being one of the heaviest growers in the south, as well as one of the most artistic decorators. John Heeremans, superintendent of the R. T. Wilson, Jr., estate at Bluffton, is expected to give an illustrated lecture on the culture of the famous Sea Island cotton plant, which under his care has attained a high degree of cultivation. He is also a Lenox graduate and is making rapid and successful strides on this vast estate, which embraces an area of twenty square miles. A leading feature will be the naturalization of hardy bulbs and orchids, the idea being to give a semitropical effect.

H. F. Teynac is building a snug dwelling adjoining his greenhouse plant. He is one of the pioneers and has built up a sound business. W.

Oregon, Ill.—Frank Gilbert is erecting a greenhouse seventy-five feet long and expects to shortly put up two more. He sees every prospect of good business.

Toledo, O.—Krueger Bros. have purchased twenty-six acres of land about a mile beyond the city limits, in Wood county, and intend to begin next spring the building of what will eventually be a large range of houses.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The Bridesmaid's Basket.

The accompanying illustration is from a photograph of a bridesmaid's basket designed by Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia. It is a crushed hat filled with Killarney roses, Mr. Fox being a great admirer of the delicate shading of the Killarney rose when used for this purpose. No green has been used, the foliage being sufficient.

THE RETAILERS' POSITION.

[A paper read before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, December 3, 1907, by Charles H. Grakelow.]

The retailer of today is a much harassed man, as, with endeavoring to realize the constantly increasing opportunities of the business, trying to adjust the prospective customer to the ever-varying prices of grower and commission-house, and a desire to hold and add to his most valuable asset, customers, his is an unenviable lot. Wholesaler of cut flowers, temper your prices with the knowledge of past sales and the possibilities of the future, and at the first sign of scarcity do not make advances so rapidly that the retailer stands mutely by, thinking it a Shakespearean drama and expecting to hear that world-famous quotation: "Lay on, lay on, Macduff, and damned be the first to cry enough."

The Retailers' Troubles.

A slight knowledge of the conditions of the market and the orders entered on the book, which are paid for and waiting to be delivered, educate the retailer to the advance, but a duplication of last week's effect for the same amount or a slight increase, if any, is all the prospective customer can see.

The Thursday before Easter last year a little girl asked your humble servant for 15 cents' worth of cut flowers, and, "Mamma does not wish too many of one kind." Another instance: Carnations are 35 cents a dozen. "Give me three and put them in a box; plenty of wax paper so they will not bruise, as I am taking them across the mountains."

Will some wholesaler kindly advise the best method of handling the retail trade?

Gentlemen, I know this is the extreme and is simply quoted to give you a slight idea of the troubles a retailer encounters without advancing prices. Help us to educate the people to a more generous use of flowers; do not discourage. Our business is in its infancy and abnormal profits today will not meet all the obligations of the future.

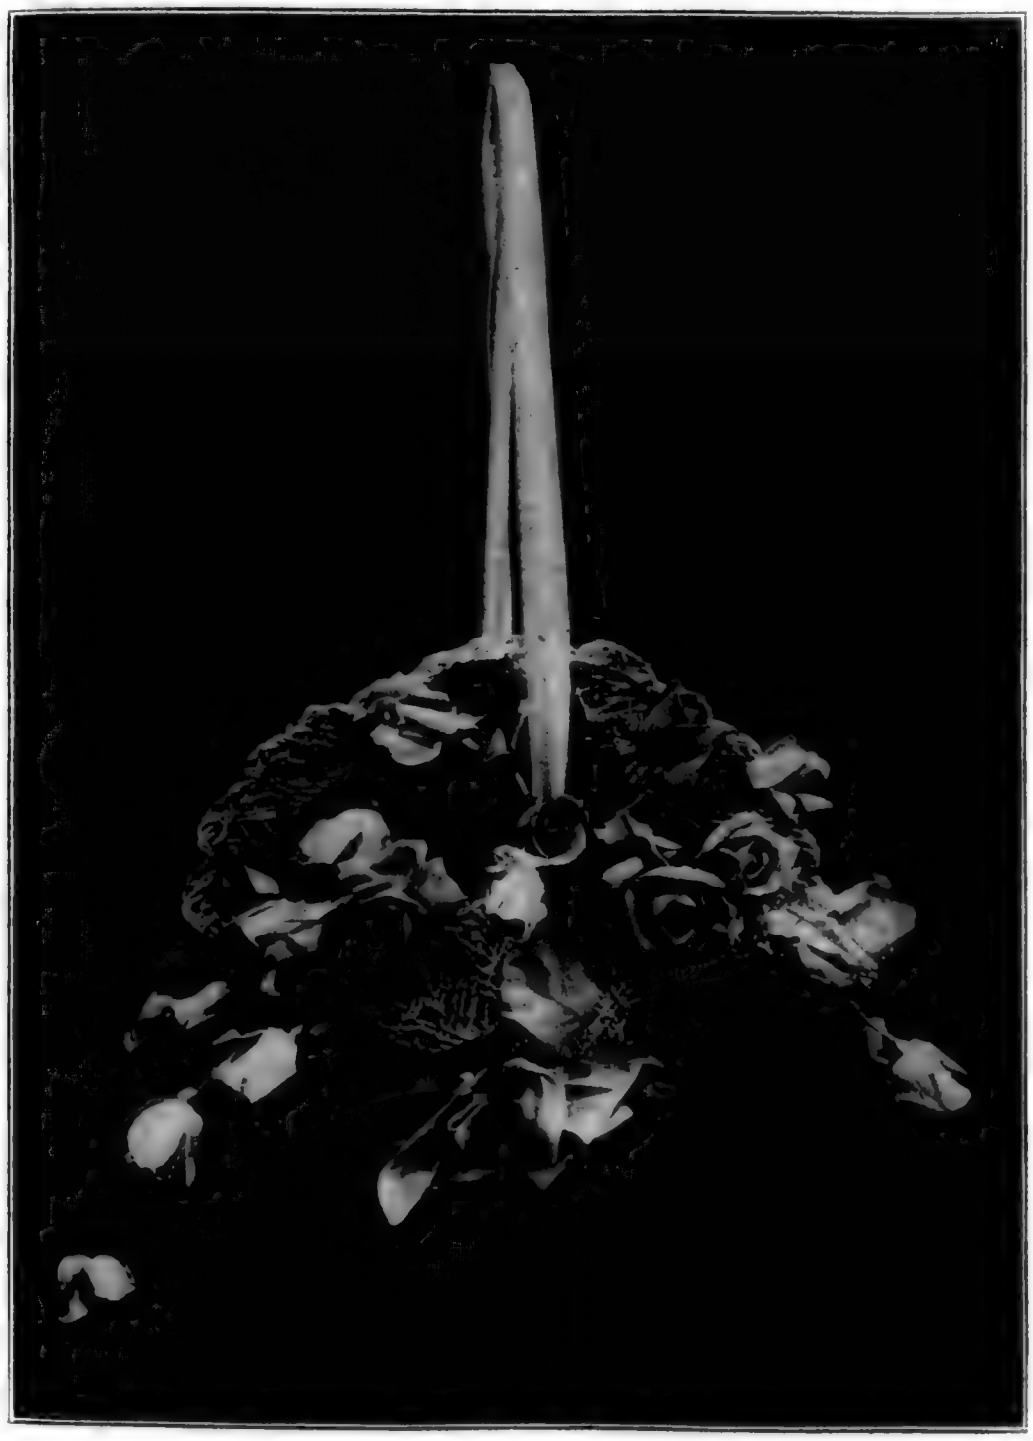
Carfare and Credits.

Agitation of carfare charges is one worthy of consideration. In large purchases, carfare is ignored. Now, then, when the occasional short-notice, unimportant order (except for the knowledge of the value of the customer in the past and the prospects of future business) comes along, should not the wholesaler pleasantly share our misfortune as well as our prosperity?

While, no doubt, unreasonable demands are made upon the wholesaler, a fixed rule in this case is not practicable. The wise man measures his cloth to fit the customer.

The amount saved by the wholesalers by a united stand for only thirty days' credit would more than meet the carfare charges and assist the legitimate florist by effectually removing the "take-the-order-at-any-price" retailer. The small occasional payments on a constantly increasing account enable him to take an order at almost any price and still figure on a 100 per cent profit. That which he does not pay for can be sold at any price, and with a handsome profit.

Laxity in credit invites men of no stability to embark in any business, making unequal competition for the men who pay and a sad experience for the wholesalers when the inevitable failure takes place.



Give the small fellow the same attention as the big fellow, as our baby of today is our man of the future.

Local and Shipping Demand.

Keep in close touch with your consignors. Impress on them the necessity of shipping when requested, the stock desired, so the poor retailer does not have to substitute and thereby lose a good customer.

When stock is scarce and out-of-town orders strong, before filling orders on file, ask yourself: "Where were the shipping orders when the summer glut was on?" Then fill according to your judgment, realizing that the high dollar policy is not always the most profitable in the end.

Whether the faker is the godsend to the business that the wholesaler would have us believe, is a question in my mind. That he instills in the heart of the public a love and a desire for flowers is true, but would not more good be derived by the business in the future by allowing the storekeeper to purchase at the same price when the glut is on, thereby enabling him to run a "special" or use the extra quantity (which he would purchase at the reduced figure) to make a window display? The attention would attract credit to that store, and, incidentally, create a heavier demand for the wholesaler by reason of the increased patronage which the retailer would receive.

True, the fakers move stock we couldn't; but is it right that we should pay a higher price than they for the good stock we so often see upon the street, when we in winter pay the price which they will not? The up-to-date retailer, if given a chance at low-priced stock, will consider a display good advertising. The wholesalers claim the fakers move stock which would otherwise stand: When next overstocked give us a chance to do a little moving and the result will, I think, be a pleasant, profitable surprise.

Closer Relations Desirable.

The retailer is a grateful, but independent, man, and does not desire something for nothing, but only asks the same desire to serve him in January as is displayed in July, and his sun will always shine bright.

Discuss all subjects with your retailer that concern him, inject into every club meeting a social feature, and the distrust now existing throughout the trade will give way to a better feeling between wholesaler and retailer and good fellowship will be the stepping stone to a better understanding of each other.

THE TABLE DECORATION.

"Go hire a hall" is old advice where friendly argument is long drawn out, but Adolph Brix, of St. Louis, accepted it as fitting his case when he concluded to give a public flower show this fall. He not only hired his hall but he filled it with exhibits, all on his own responsibility and as a demonstration of his facilities as a retail florist. To say that Mr. Brix was amply repaid for his enterprise and expenditure is putting it mildly. The hall was thronged with visitors throughout the days of his display and as an advertisement it was far and away ahead of what any other retail florist has accomplished this fall.

The illustration opposite shows a unique table decoration which was a feature of the exhibition. It is supposed to have been spread for a wedding feast and plates are laid for twelve. It will be noted that both low and high styles of decoration are combined and that the greatest objection to high decoration, the obscuring of the view across the table, is obviated by the character of the supports used. The flowers were roses and valley.

As is almost always the case at flower shows, the table decoration attracted more attention than any other display of the retailer's skill.

CARNATION NOTES - EAST.

System.

The beginning of this month should see the pressure of work relieved and a routine established.

If the plants are clean of dead leaves, the soil in good mechanical condition and free from weeds, and if the supports are in place, close attention can now be given to watering, airing, disbudding and cutting the blooms, each in its proper time. By this is not meant that certain parts of the day can be set apart in which to perform each operation, or that all claim attention every day, but that we can arrange the work in such a way as will allow of its being done at the most essential time; in other words, at the plants' convenience and not our own.

By this means one can drive the work, instead of the work driving him.

Every grower must, of course, plan his work to make the most of his working force and to best serve his trade, but whether the place be large or small, there should be a system—necessarily somewhat flexible, it is true, to meet changes in weather.

Watering and Airing.

Watering and airing are operations much dependent on weather conditions, though it is a safe rule to take a look over the beds every morning and afternoon in search of spots that may have dried out more than the surrounding soil, remedying this, if need be, whatever the weather may be. And it may be said of airing that every day requires more or less, it being more the amount than the mere question of ventilation that is dependent on outside conditions.

Early morning or late afternoon is the proper time to cut blooms—the former preferred.

It is said that "woman's work is never done"; this is likewise true of disbudding; so that there need be no lack of something to fill out the routine. To go into details of all these operations in one batch of notes is not possible, but each will be dealt with in due time. Meanwhile keep this matter of system well in mind.

The Christmas Crop.

The time is very near when growth in plants is naturally at its lowest ebb; every minute of daylight is needed to keep things moving and to forward the holiday cut.

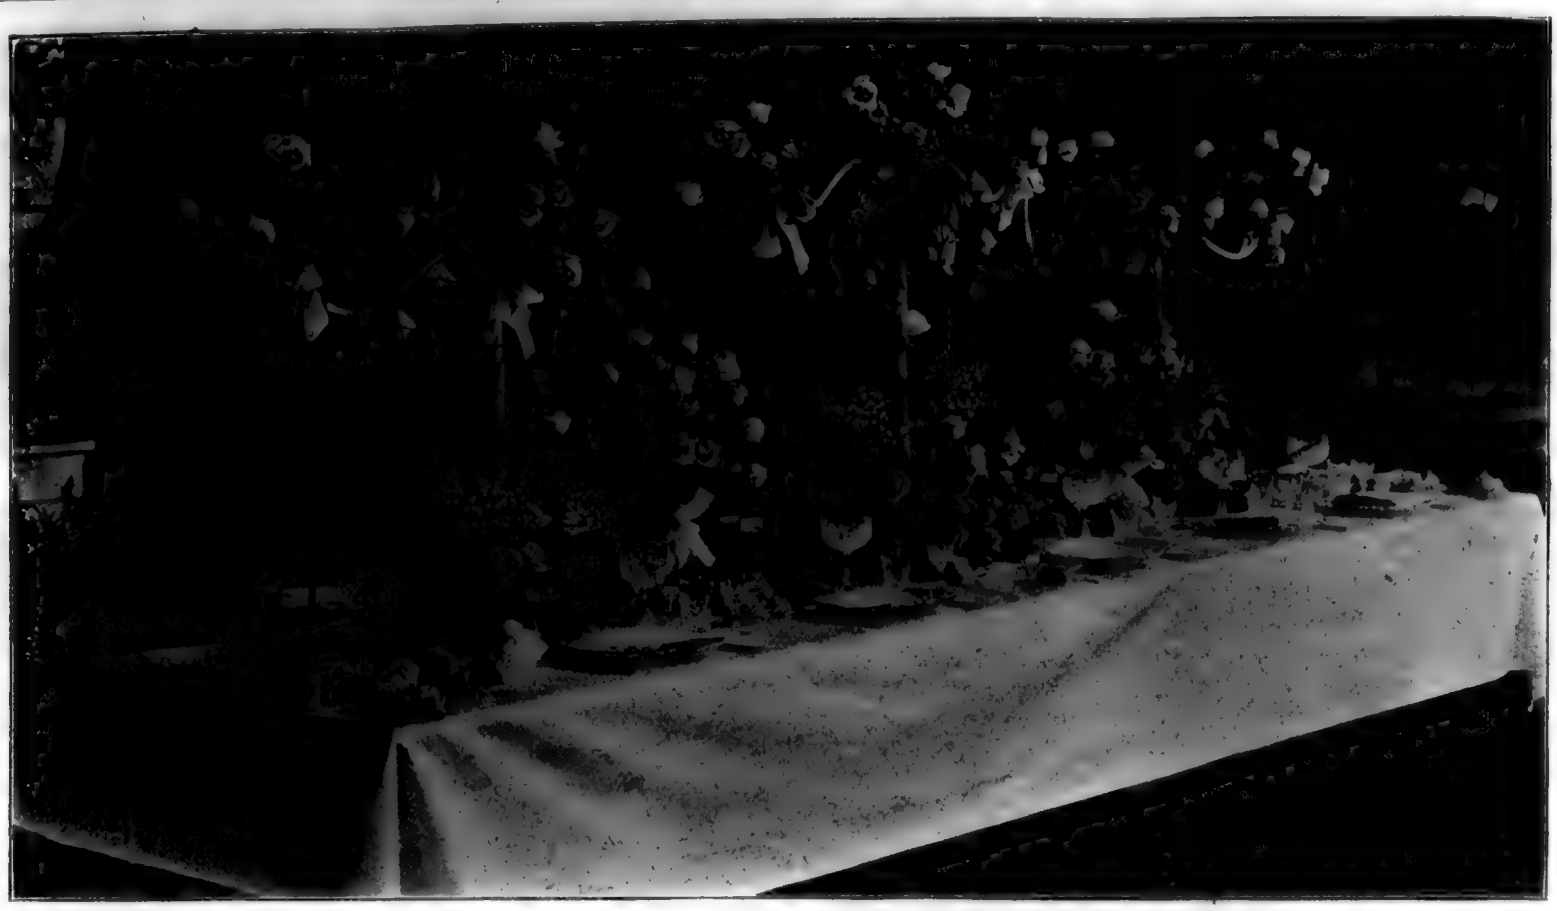
You may have noticed in former years what unfavorable weather we usually experience during the week previous to Christmas. In any event one cannot go far wrong in taking this circumstance into consideration, for if the period should prove fine this year, so much the better.

Geo. S. Osborn.

CARNATION NOTES—WEST.

The Holiday Cut.

All your plants will be well established now and should be making a strong growth, if they are not in full crop even now. No doubt you are beginning to figure up what your chances are for a big cut for the holidays, and I may add that it is not too early to do whatever you find it necessary to do, to get your crop as heavy as possible at that time. There will be a scant three weeks from the time you get this until Christmas. At this time of the year it is not wise to hurry a crop too much by running the house warm. With the lack of sunshine and the short days the plants and blooms grow soft enough under normal conditions, and hard forcing will likely make your cut worthless for the greatest part of the season.



However, if you see that your crop is going to come a few days late, you can speed them along moderately by raising the temperature 2 degrees from now on and giving light top dressings of wood ashes and lime two weeks apart. Before watering it into the soil, rub it into whatever loose material there is with the hand. This rubbing over the loose surface material will help as much as the dressing itself. In fact, you will find that one of the best things you can do is to repeat it every two weeks throughout the season. It opens up the soil and lets the air in. It acts the same as cultivating in the field. With this extra heat must go a proportionate amount of extra ventilation, even though you may find it necessary to run an extra pipe part of the time. If you neglect this part you will find yourself the possessor of a lot of fine big blooms which will go to sleep the day after you cut them. The carnation's great popularity is based very largely on its fine keeping qualities, and to destroy these qualities is a mistake you cannot make up with size of bloom or in any other way.

Beware of Overfeeding.

If your crop is right and coming along nicely, with blooms of fair size and good texture, etc., be reasonable. It is a great temptation when one has fine, strong plants, in excellent health. One wants to push them just a little harder, to get extra size and more blooms, and feeding is the first thought which presents itself. Many a fine crop has been ruined by it when applied by overzealous hands. Much of the splitting of calyxes is also caused by overfeeding. For instance, take Enchantress and such varieties; when there is a good crop of buds, if the encouragement is confined to keeping the top soil stirred slightly and careful watering and ventilating and firing, fine blooms will be cut and very few splits. But give them a dressing of sheep manure or any other of the common feeding materials and at once you will see a large percentage of splits, to say nothing of soft texture. To avoid the splitting you will raise the temperature, only to aggravate the softness of bloom and stem. Later, when the days are longer and the sun is strong enough to necessitate a good deal of ventilating, the plants will be able to take the feed and then they will enjoy it and give it back to you with interest in the blooms.

Some Early Propagating.

It is a little early yet to begin propa-

Novel Dinner-table Decoration by Adolph Brix, St. Louis.

gating most varieties. However, if you have some which you wish to work up all you can, there is no need to throw away the one or two good cuttings you will cut with each bloom. Take them off and root them, and if you will keep them growing they will make fine plants. Take only good, strong cuttings if you wish to keep up the vitality of the stock. Weak cuttings will never make strong plants, even though they have twice as long to grow. Of course you have your supply of sand, enough for the whole season. Do not cover it with boards, but use sash instead. The sunlight will be better for it. A. F. J. BAUR.

BREAKING OFF THE BLOOMS.

Should carnation blooms be broken off at a joint or cut with a knife? C. U.

Carnation blooms should be broken off at the lower joint of the flower stem, and if this is done early in the morning they snap off readily. RIBES.

CUTWORM AND RED SPIDER.

Enclosed you will find some carnation leaves. Will you please tell us what the trouble is and how to remedy it?

R. H. L.

The specimens you sent were so badly frozen that I could tell but little about them. Your inquiry does not give any description, either. I could see that some of the leaves had been chewed by some form of cutworm or larva, and for these I would suggest that you use the flour, sugar and Paris green mixture, as recommended in the REVIEW of October 24, page 11.

There are also traces of red spiders, which cause the foliage to take on a rusty appearance. For these the best remedy is a sharp spray from the hydrant, applied with as much force as possible on every bright day, until they have been eradicated. Cut the foliage with the spray from the side; in fact, it should be done from both sides, in order to hit the under side of each blade, as that is where they lodge usually. Whenever a leaf is cupped or furled you will always find them in the cupped side. Do not spray too many days in succession at this time of the year, even though the days may be bright. If the plants are thoroughly syringed they will be wet through and through, and one day's sun will not dry them out fully, and if the drenching is repeated several days in succession the dense part of the plant is likely to begin decaying. By spraying two days in succession and then skipping one or two days, you will avoid any such condition. A. F. J. B.

SPOT ON VIOLETS.

Please inform me what to do for white spot on violet leaves in field and house. Is there any means of eradicating it? If so, detail the plan. R. L.

The spot on violets (Alternaria violæ) is dreaded by all cultivators of this flower. The single varieties seem almost immune from its attacks, or, if they have it, usually grow out of it quickly. It is otherwise with the doubles, as once it appears it will speedily run over a house. No spraying antidotes are really effective. Picking off affected dead and decaying foliage, keeping the soil stirred and everything as clean and sweet as possible is the best way to combat it. Select the best plants to propagate from for another season. Grow your stock under glass through the summer or plant in very early. Use care in watering, ventilating and other details and this is about as much as you can do to keep clean stock. Even with these precautions many fail; still others succeed, and there is no reason why you should not be one of the latter. W. N. C.

VIOLET GOVERNOR HERRICK.

Is the Governor Herrick a true violet or is it one of the pansy-violet hybrids? My Herricks have practically no odor; neither do they send out any runners, but grow in dense clumps. I should be pleased to know if they take with the trade. W. D.

Not knowing anything of the parentage of this violet, I am unable to answer the first part of your query. Governor Herrick has not with us proved a satisfactory single violet. It gives few flowers in winter, when flowers are most needed. And when they do come they are neither in size, color nor odor equal to Princess of Wales. The color is not popular in the large flower markets of the east and it looks as though Princess of Wales had the field pretty much to itself among single violets. C. W.

OUTDOOR PROTECTION.

While no severe weather has yet come our way, we can never tell how soon an arctic visitation may arrive, and it behooves us to be ready for it when it does arrive. Roses of the perpetual class, as well as hybrid teas, should be protected at once in the more northern states. Farther south a few days later will be early enough. Perennials of doubtful hardiness, which have not been lifted and stored in frames, should be given a good covering of forest leaves, pine needles or strawy manure. All herbaceous perennials are benefited by a winter mulching, either of leaves or coarse manure. If leaves are used, and they make the most ideal covering, they must be held in place with spruce or pine boughs or the wind will whisk them in all directions. Rhododendrons, andromedas and other flowering evergreen shrubs need a heavy mulching of leaves to keep the roots moist and exclude frost. Pansies, violas, foxgloves, aubrietias, hollyhocks and similar plants will winter well in even northern climes if on sloping ground and mulched with leaves or straw held in place by evergreen boughs. This covering should not be applied until the ground becomes hard frozen. Beds of Dutch bulbs require the same treatment. It is a big mistake to heavily cover them until they are frozen, for the mulching keeps the ground warm and causes the bulbs to push up into the covering when they should be lying dormant. Consequently, when removing the protective material in the spring, many tops are broken. Lilıums should have a good covering, which should not be removed too early in spring.

The majority of hardy plants need only a light mulching, just such a covering as we see shed in the woods each fall. Unless it is necessary to exclude a frost, be on the safe side and cover lightly, but be sure your covering cannot blow away. Firm all labels well in the ground to prevent frost heaving them. Look over and rename any plants requiring it.

C. W.

INSECTS ON FERNS.

I have an insect on my ferns which is doing great damage. It is a very small white fly, which multiplies rapidly, and the ferns turn yellow and die. Please advise me as to what I can syringe with and not damage the ferns. G. W. C.

Without seeing a specimen from the affected plants, one must necessarily answer this query by guess, there being so many insects found on ferns. But it seems likely that this is the same insect that is so frequently found upon Boston ferns, and one that has caused much trouble to growers. If so, the best method of procedure would be to cut off the worst leaves, and then to dip the plants in a solution of Rose Leaf extract of tobacco, using one part of the extract to fifty parts of water.

This insect is hard to kill and may need more than one application. Syringing with the same preparation may also be done, but is less effect ve than dipping. W. H. Taplin.

PROFITS IN PLUMOSUS.

I should like to have someone tell me, through the Review, if Asparagus plumosus would be a paying crop at an average price of 20 cents a bunch, a dozen in a bunch. I have a house 20x60 feet. What could I realize out of a house that size? F. J. R.

If F. J. R. is not growing any strings from the same plants, he ought to cut about twenty-five good sprays to the square foot, which, at his price, would make a house 20x60 bring about $480 of gross income. With extra good culture, he may be able to exceed that estimate. Albert F. Amling.

THE NOVELTIES.

Grace Whitney.

Grace Whitney is an American seedling that has received the society's recognition as a handsome exhibition pink. It was exhibited by Frank Whitney as No. 4 and has since been named Grace Whitney. Size, stem and foliage are O. K., and it will hold its own with any of the importations. I considered it one of the good things that I could not afford to let go, and so the control passed from Mr. Whitney to myself. We do not have many native seedlings that come large enough to run in the exhibition class, and I think more of it on that account.

Other Novelties.

W. Meredith, as a crimson, is also welcome, because we have so few really good crimsons. We all used to love the old Edwin Molyneux, and Meredith might easily be taken for a good flower of that variety. I have no compunction in recommending Meredith to any one who will give it good care and who knows when to stop feeding.

Glitter, which W. Wells thinks very highly of, has not done well with me. The color is good, but the flower is only medium in size and poor in stem, and after a second year's trial I cannot indorse it. I understand it has done fairly well in the west, but I do not think it will do in our locality.

Mrs. J. C. Neill has a serious rival here in Cheltoni, which is also an Australian, and seems to get better every year. It does not show much difference in style, color or growth from Cheltoni at present. It is a gold medal winner in Australia, and so another year may show it up in a much more striking manner.

The notes printed November 21, with this addition include the best of the new things as I have seen them, and I think we have more good ones than usual. The interest in novelties certainly keeps up, and I believe it will continue to do so as long as the quality of the novelties is likewise kept up.

C. H. Totty.

One of the successful exhibitors at the show of the Indiana State Florists' Society, held at Indianapolis in November, was W. A. Bitler, of Kokomo, and the interesting feature about his prize-winning was that this is his first season growing chrysanthemums and that he had an exceedingly limited quantity from which to select his exhibition blooms. He took first for ten pink, on Dr. Enguehard, with only 150 plants to select from, and he took second on yellow, with Col. Appleton, with only 100 plants to select from. Mr. Bitler's blooms are shown in the accompanying illustration, but as the flowers are only second consideration in the Bitler family, the children were put in front.

REVIEW OF VARIETIES.

The Best Forty.

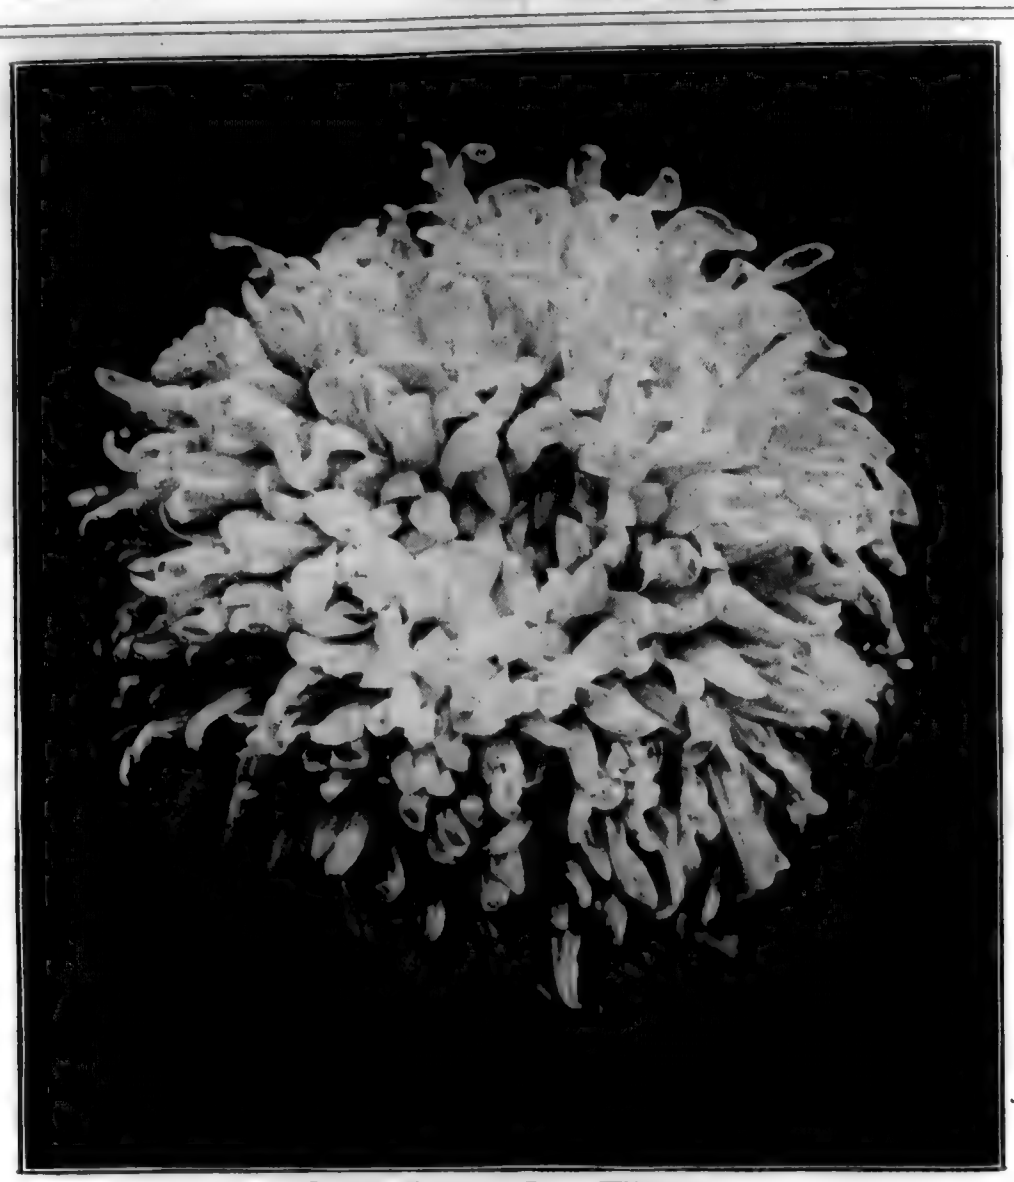
In accordance with my usual custom, I present herewith a review of the best forty varieties, in their respective colors, as they have shown up at the exhibitions. This table of varieties is compiled as far as possible from my own experience, and from the published lists of varieties exhibited at different shows and checked by myself at shows I have visited. Not one of the undisseminated sorts is given, because they are not yet in general culture, and consequently are only in the experimental stage.

Yellow.—F. S. Vallis, Col. Appleton, Mrs. Geo. Hunt, Cheltoni, Mrs. W. Duckham, C. Montigny, Dubuisson-Foubert, Mrs. W. Knox, Souv. Scalarandis and Rose Lawrence.

White.—Beatrice May, Miss Clay Frick, Pres. Loubet, Mrs. D. V. West, Merza, Nellie Pockett, Mlle. Simone Jossier, May Seddon, Ben Wells and Mrs. F. F. Thompson.

Pink.—President Viger, Miriam Hankey, M. Loiseau-Rousseau, Morton F. Plant, William Duckham, Reginald Vallis, Valerie Greenham and Lady Hopetoun.

Red.—Mrs. H. Partridge, S. F. Wright, Mrs. A. H. Lee.



Bronze shades.—Ethel Fitzroy, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Mrs. Geo. Heaume, Mme. L. Roussel and Dakoma.

Chestnut and red shades.—Mrs. John E. Dunn, Mrs. Henry Barnes, E. J. Brooks and Mary Ann Pockett.

Some Old Friends.

It is interesting to note how some old friends stick. Among them are Merza, which was shown in splendid shape again; also Nellie Pockett, which seems to improve right along; F. S. Vallis, which still takes the prize always for the biggest flower in the show, and Col. Appleton, which is still largely shown in yellows.

Chrysanthemiste Montigny furnished the most sensational vase in yellows. This has been previously noted in these columns, but I seriously question if it is ever shown again in such condition. Mrs.

Chrysanthemum Grace Whitney.

W. Knox and Rose Lawrence, while not much used as long-stemmed vase flowers, are fine for the short-vase classes. Souv. Scalarandis is an addition in this class that may need special treatment to keep it from wilting, but so many growers can now handle Merza right that I know many will handle Scalarandis equally well.

The two most prominent additions to the yellow class of the novelties are Mary Donnellan and Mrs. J. P. Neil.

Wonderful Keeping Qualities.

The whites show Beatrice May as being exhibited more largely than any other one variety. One of the most remarkable instances I know of, in regard to flowers keeping, was told me at the Philadelphia show, of Beatrice May. An exhibitor, William Robertson, staged flowers in perfect condition and won first prize with the identical flowers that he had exhibited a month previously, which, with all due credit to the skill of the grower in knowing how to keep them, shows wonderful lasting qualities on the part of the flower itself.

President Loubet did not do very well with me, but some splendid blooms were set up by men who caught an early crown bud. Clay Frick and Mlle. Simone Jossier, two new additions to the whites, should hold for some time. The latter might be stouter in stem with advantage, perhaps.

Mrs. D. V. West and Mrs. F. F. Thompson are for short-vase classes only, but they cannot be beaten in this respect, the former being the largest white we have, and the latter one of the most beautiful. May Seddon is a beautiful white, but it needs to be started early to get the best results. The whites will be enriched this year by the addition of several good ones, among them W. M. Moir, Mrs. Norman Davis, Mrs. Girard Foster and Lynnwood Hall.

In the pink class President Viger furnished the largest flowers in several shows. It is coarse and often of poor color, but in size it is truly enormous. Reginald Vallis has shown itself to be one of the most striking things of late years and will be very largely grown another year. Loiseau-Rousseau is a poor color, but well-nigh perfect in form, size, foliage, stem and every other good quality. It was very popular wherever exhibited. Lady Hopetoun was shown splendidly in several places, particularly so at Lenox, Mass., by A. H. Wingett. We certainly cannot yet do without Lady Hopetoun. Additions to the pink class this year are O. H. Broomhead, Grace Witney and Mrs. Jos. Sinnott, the first an imported variety, destined, I think, to become a leader, and the two latter American seedlings, one of which, Grace Witney, was awarded a certificate by the C. S. A.

Few Good Red Novelties.

Perhaps the most unsatisfactory class is the reds. Very, very few are good, Partridge being practically the only variety that does not burn. Wright, on the late bud, is fine if one keeps the feed away from it. I tested a dozen or more reds in the novelties this year and retained only one, W. Meredith, which I think should be a welcome addition.

The any other color class takes in many of the finest varieties we have, Mrs. John E. Dunne, Mrs. J. A. Miller, Ethel Fitzroy and E. J. Brooks being shining examples. While they cannot be shown as either white, pink or yellow, when it comes to a collection, or for, say, six varieties, six flowers of each, these kinds are indispensable.

The additions to this class that will be welcomed will be Mary Mason, Mrs. W. Wells, Dorothy Goldsmith, Margaret Codrington and Kitty Lawrence. Neither of these has been scored by the C. S. A., because stock was scarce with me and it is impossible to exhibit at several places and have enough to do the variety justice. Were I to exhibit at all the shows where I am asked to exhibit, and where I would like to exhibit, I would need several hundreds of each variety, and those who have tried importing plants do not need to be told that this is impossible.

The Exhibitions.

Speaking so far as my personal observation goes, I would say that the average quality of the flowers staged was well in advance of any previous year, not alone in a few wonderful vases that were shown here and there, but in the great bulk of the flowers. The growing season, or rather I should say the finishdodendrons, andromedas and other flowering evergreen shrubs need a heavy mulching of leaves to keep the roots moist and exclude frost. Pansies, violas, foxgloves, aubrietias, hollyhocks and similar plants will winter well in even northern climes if on sloping ground and mulched with leaves or straw held in place by evergreen boughs. This covering should not be applied until the ground becomes hard frozen. Beds of Dutch bulbs require the same treatment. It is a big mistake to heavily cover them until they are frozen, for the mulching keeps the ground warm and causes the bulbs to push up into the covering when they should be lying dormant. Consequently, when removing the protective material in the spring, many tops are broken. Lilliums should have a good covering, which should not be removed too early in spring.

The majority of hardy plants need only a light mulching, just such a covering as we see shed in the woods each fall. Unless it is necessary to exclude a frost, be on the safe side and cover lightly, but be sure your covering cannot blow away. Firm all labels well in the ground to prevent frost heaving them. Look over and rename any plants requiring it.

INSECTS ON FERNS.

I have an insect on my ferns which is doing great damage. It is a very small white fly, which multiplies rapidly, and the ferns turn yellow and die. Please advise me as to what I can syringe with and not damage the ferns. G. W. C.

Without seeing a specimen from the affected plants, one must necessarily answer this query by guess, there being so many insects found on ferns. But it seems likely that this is the same insect that is so frequently found upon Boston ferns, and one that has caused much trouble to growers. If so, the best method of procedure would be to cut off the worst leaves, and then to dip the plants in a solution of Rose Leaf extract 1 to fifty parts of water.

This insect is hard to kill and may need more than one application. Syringing with the same preparation may also be done, but is less effective than dipping.

W. H. TAPLIN.

PROFITS IN PLUMOSUS.

I should like to have someone tell me, through the REVIEW, if Asparagus plumosus would be a paying crop at an average price of 20 cents a bunch, a dozen in a bunch. I have a house 20x60 feet. What could I realize out of a house that size? F. J. R.

If F. J. R. is not growing any strings from the same plants, he ought to cut about twenty-five good sprays to the square foot, which, at his price, would make a house 20x60 bring about $480 of gross income. With extra good culture, he may be able to exceed that estimate.

ALBERT F. AMLING.

THE NOVELTIES.

Grace Whitney.

Grace Whitney is an American seedling that has received the society's recognition as a handsome exhibition pink. It was exhibited by Frank Whitney as No. 4 and has since been named Grace Whitney. Size, stem and foliage are O. K., and it will hold its own with any of the importations. I considered it one of the good things that I could not afford to let go, and so the control passed from Mr. Whitney to myself. We do not have many native seedlings that come large enough to run in the exhibition class, and I think more of it on that account.

Other Novelties.

W. Meredith, as a crimson, is also welcome, because we have so few really good crimsons. We all used to love the old Edwin Molyneux, and Meredith might easily be taken for a good flower of that variety. I have no compunction in recommending Meredith to any one who will give it good care and who knows when to stop feeding.

Glitter, which W. Wells thinks very highly of, has not done well with me. The color is good, but the flower is only medium in size and poor in stem, and after a second year's trial I cannot indorse it. I understand it has done fairly well in the west, but I do not think it will do in our locality.

Mrs. J. C. Neill has a serious rival here in Cheltoni, which is also an Australian, and seems to get better every year. It does not show much difference in style, color or growth from Cheltoni at present. It is a gold medal winner in Australia, and so another year may show it up in a much more striking manner.

The notes printed November 21, with this addition include the best of the new things as I have seen them, and I think we have more good ones than usual. The interest in novelties certainly keeps up, and I believe it will continue to do so as long as the quality of the novelties is likewise kept up.

One of the successful exhibitors at the show of the Indiana State Florists' Society, held at Indianapolis in November, was W. A. Bitler, of Kokomo, and the interesting feature about his prize-winning was that this is his first season growing chrysanthemums and that he had an exceedingly limited quantity from which to select his exhibition blooms. ing season, from September 1 to show time, was the best season I ever remember. No fogs to cause one heart failure, and no very warm spells, but just the clear, crisp, cool weather that the mum delights in. This, no doubt, helped the growers to finish their flowers in better shape than usual. Many of the shows were rendered more attractive by exhibits of pompons and singles and a larger variety of short-stem classes.

Anything that furnishes a change from the monotonous routine of the average flower show should be encouraged, if we are to retain and increase the interest in flower showing and flower growing.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

TWO SAMPLES OF GARZA.

I send what are supposed to be two flowers of the Garza chrysanthemum. Which one is the true Garza, the single one or the one with the full center? Are they distinct varieties in the trade? The culture of both has been the same.

O. S.

The flowers sent were both Garza, to the best of my knowledge and belief, though they were both flattened out when they reached me so that I could not tell very much about them. The type varies somewhat, of course, but the cushion, which is the distinguishing mark of that class of chrysanthemums, is plainly visible.

If O. S. wishes to keep his stock good he should propagate only from the best plants, showing true character, and by that means eliminate the poorer variety. Selection of stock has just as much to do with success in chrysanthemum culture as anything else. CHARLES H. TOTTY.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

Work of the Committees.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 23.—No. 74-5-06, pink Japanese, incurved, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, scored 83 points commercial and 86 points exhibition scale.

The variety exhibited by C. H. Totty before the New York committee October 12, as No. 20, has been named A. McKendry, and the variety shown before the Philadelphia committee by Gordon Smirl November 4 has been named Mrs. Girard Foster. DAVID FRASER, Sec'y.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Propagating.

As the season for propagating approaches we should begin to get everything in readiness for that important branch of the work, so that there will be no drawbacks to prevent the work being done in season.

The propagating house should claim our first attention. The benches should be looked over and put into good shape; the pipes should be tested and the ventilators adjusted. The benches should be thoroughly washed and given a coat of hot lime wash to help destroy insect eggs and fungus spores. The house should also get a thorough fumigation.

The Supply of Sand.

The propagating medium should be secured while the weather is open, and in sufficient quantity to supply the season. Where clean, sharp sand can be procured it is suitable for almost any of the ordinary kinds of stock, as it possesses no nutritive properties, thus preventing decomposition, and as a medium for retaining moisture in sufficient quantity for this purpose, without souring, it is nearly perfect.

This sand should be laid on the bench to the depth of five inches and then watered. When partly dry it should be pounded quite firm and made of even depth all over.

Handling the Cuttings.

The cuttings of teas and hybrid teas should be put in straight lines across the bench, with a distance of about two inches between the lines and with the cuttings an inch and a half apart in the rows. Beauties require more room, as they are very impatient of crowding.

The heel of the cuttings should be at a uniform depth in the sand, and as the center of the sand will be of a more uniform condition both as regards temperature and moisture, the heel of the cuttings should be placed at about half the depth of the sand. With other conditions right, all the cuttings will form roots in about the same period of time.

Selecting the Cuttings.

The care and skill bestowed on the proper selection of wood for propagating are among the fundamental elements of success. A thorough knowledge of what is best, with care and patience in selecting, being really essential, this duty should never be entrusted to any but the most experienced and painstaking help.

We frequently see whole batches of cuttings taken indiscriminately, including strong, pithy flower stems and small, blind wood. These make a very unsightly bench, and while they will form roots, they fail to make good, thrifty plants, and the grower who uses such is courting failure.

Immediately after being cut, the wood should be immersed in water to prevent wilting, as the least wilt proves almost fatal, for even if the cutting does form roots, it will take longer time to do so and consequently will lose in vitality.

RIBES.

THE MRS. FIELD ROSE.

It has been said that Peter Reinberg, Chicago, who led the way in the building of the mammoth ranges for which the great central market has renown, was born under a lucky star, but in the matter of the Mrs. Marshall Field rose some little foresight and skill were coupled with good fortune. The rose has been on the place for several years, but has only now come into its own.

Several years ago the search for novelty led to the importation of four new sorts from England. Among these, two were red, one was white and one was yellow. The whole lot proved worthless, but among the plants one diminutive specimen produced a flower of fine form and substance and of a delightful pink. This plant was saved and gave three cuttings for the next year, when the flower again proved excellent, although the growth was as poor as could be imagined. The result was that the following season plants were grafted on Manetti. With this foundation they thrived splendidly and gave good stems and fine flowers in abundance. The following year quite a stock was worked up and the blooms exhibited at the first Coliseum flower show in Chicago under the name of Mrs. Marshall Field, who was just then occupying a particularly bright spot in the public eye. The choice of name proved an inspiration from a business point of view, for that season and the following one the limited stock made it impossible to supply the demand for the cut flowers.

This year Mr. Reinberg has six and a half houses of the Field rose. That this means something may be better realized when it is stated that the houses are each 26x265. It proves without doubt his confidence in the variety, for no man would venture planting practically 50,000 feet of glass with a speculation.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows one of the houses of the Field rose photographed October 18. No grower ever saw a finer sight. The picture gives no idea of the crop the plants were carrying. It is the practice to cut the buds quite tight for shipping purposes, so that the houses never present much of a showing of color, but one seldom sees a heavier crop in a rose house than was on at the time the photograph was taken. The remaining space in the range, two and one-half houses, is planted to Killarney and Kate Moulton and neither compares with Mrs. Field as a producer. At Mr. Reinberg's city store they say they sold over $100 a day of Mrs. Field through August, and through September the sales were over $200 a day. Mr. Reinberg and Mr. Spencer were disposed to send out young stock of the variety to the trade in the spring of 1908, but Mr. Kill thinks the rose is such a good thing from a cut flower standpoint that they will retain it at least another year for their own use.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

A June Exhibition.

An invitation to hold a June show in connection with the Horticultural Society of New York, at Bronx park, New York, in June, 1908, was accepted by the executive committee of the American Rose Society at its meeting at New York November 25. Various prizes of value will be offered, including the society's medals. This is a popular show which it is estimated thousands of people will visit daily and is a part of the usefulness of the society planned from the beginning.

The March Exhibition.

August Poehlmann, of Chicago, wrote that the people in the west mean to do their part to make the annual exhibition one which would leave a name behind it as to what Chicago can do. It was resolved to issue the schedule of prizes without delay. The cash premiums at present reach $700. There are two prizes amounting to $300 in cash, from Philip Breitmeyer and A. T. Boddington, for outdoor roses. There is $25 for the best twenty-five blooms of La Detroit; $25 for the largest and most varied collections of cut roses of all classes, only one bloom in a vase, variety to count sixty-five points, from W. A. Manda. The E. G. Hill Co. offers $50; Alexander Montgomery donates a silver cup for the best fifty blooms of any variety of American origin, and four other cups are also promised.

The new life membership certificates were authorized to be issued, also certificates of merit for the roses exhibited in Washington, which were as follows: F. H. Kramer, Washington, D. C., for Queen Beatrice; Myers & Samtman, Wyndmoor, Pa., for Wyndmoor; E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., for Rhea Reid, and M. H. Walsh, Woods Hole, Mass., for Paradise, La Fima, Delight and Juniata.

The following topics have been named to be presented to the Chicago convention: "Practical Rose Growing in the Middle West," "The Raising of New Roses," "What Is the Proper Size of a Greenhouse to Grow Roses for Commercial Purposes?" "Twelve Best Garden Roses," "Roses in the Far West," "Forcing Roses in Pots for Easter," "Roses from the Retailer's Standpoint."

BENJ. HAMMOND, Sec'y.

THE RURAL FLORIST.

The accompanying illustration shows the establishment of one of the most fortunate of men. It is typical of the many places of moderate size in the hundreds of small cities through the land. Belvidere, in northern Illinois, is large enough to provide a good business for a progressive florist and it is small enough so that endeavor may be less strenuous than where crowds gather and costs are higher; where there is more time for the amenities of life and the pleasures of doing business among those who are one's personal friends. This is the establishment of Bert R. Lucas and the picture shows his home, his barn, his poultry sheds, for he handles poultry extensively as a side line, his boiler-shed and packing-room and the end of his greenhouses. In the foreground there is his plantation of summer cut flowers. It is a site any man might feel satisfied to call his own.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Geraniums.

It seems a long time ahead before there will be any sales of bedding geraniums, but if you want plants which will do you credit and please your customers, you cannot afford to neglect them even now. Far too often they are crowded together in some out-of-the-way place to make room for what are, at the time, considered more important plants. Even if this has been done, it is not yet too late to remedy it. Your chrysanthemums will be on their last legs, so to speak, and you can afford to space out your little geraniums somewhat. Let them have all possible sun, but do not overwater them. They are much better kept on the dry side for the next two months. Pick off any decaying leaves and keep water off the foliage now as much as possible. Water only on bright days, so that any moisture may dry up before nightfall.

Quite a number of florists are beginning to appreciate the value of a few nice pots of geraniums for winter blooming. They are particularly serviceable at Christmas, especially the scarlet and crimson varieties. The semi-doubles and doubles are usually grown, and while they stand shipping better than the singles, they are much less beautiful. S. A. Nutt, Alphonse Ricard, John Doyle, General Grant and Ville de Poitiers are fine doubles for the holiday season, while among singles, Jacquerie, Paul Crampbel, Richmond Beauty, Cannell's Crimson Bedder, Telegraph and Mrs. E. Rawson are among the best. A rather dry atmosphere and a night temperature of 50 to 55 degrees suits these geraniums to a nicety. Feed the plants with light surfacings of some good chemical fertilizer, in preference to liquid manures, which tend to promote too rank growth at the expense of the flower.

Show Pelargoniums.

These showy spring flowering plants require a cooler house in winter than the geraniums; 40 to 45 degrees at night is better than 50 degrees. It is unwise to promote too rapid a growth now. It should be the grower's aim to keep them stocky. This cannot be done in a warm house. Do not allow any of them to become potbound before overhauling them. Pinch the tops out of any shoots which seem likely to take the lead. Keep a sharp lookout for green aphis, which has a marked partiality for these plants. If you make a plan of fumigating once a week and adhere to it strictly, you will have no trouble.

Calceolarias.

A temperature such as has been recommended for the show pelargoniums will be all right for calceolarias. They cannot tolerate anything in the nature of coddling. We never saw finer plants than were grown in a cold, clammy feeling house, which gave one the shivers on entering it. The temperature varied from 36 to 45 degrees in winter, but the calceolarias simply reveled in it, as the big plants in 10-inch and 12-inch pots, clothed with dark green, luxuriant foliage, testified. We cannot all imitate these conditions, but we can at least remember that a cool, moist house is to the liking of these plants and in such a structure aphis will trouble comparatively little. If some tobacco stems are scattered around once in two weeks, they will scarcely obtain a foothold at all.

In potting along calceolarias, use some well dried and decayed cow manure, as well as a dash of soot and bone dust. A rather lumpy compost suits them better than a mixture which has been passed through a screen. Some growers make too frequent use of the screen. It may be all right for soil for seed sowing, or for young plants just potted off, but it should be tabooed for later pottings. The turfy lumps are just what the plants need and, furthermore, they are the best of the compost, also giving it the needed porosity.

Genistas.

As a rule, these attractive yellow plants sell best in the early spring, being specially in demand for Easter. They do not require at any time anything like forcing, being injured by it. A temperature just clear of freezing will suit them just now. If an early batch is needed, introduce a few plants into a house kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night. Spray well once a week to prevent red spider getting any foothold. If you want to increase your stock, and have not yet put in any cuttings, do so now. A bench which roots carnations satisfactorily will be just the place for the genistas. These cuttings should be potted off as soon as rooted, and will make very nice, bushy stock for sales a year hence.

Camellias.

A somewhat better demand now exists for these plants. They will never again attain the proud precedence they held before the rose displaced them as a cut flower, but a few bushy plants make an attractive window decoration and usually sell well. Let your plants have a temperature of 50 degrees at night and spray on bright days, until the flowers start to open. The only time camellias will tolerate a little forcing is after the blooming period, when making their growths.

Ericas.

The heaths are very acceptable Christmas plants. The most popular and easily grown kind is Erica melanthera, which, when neatly trimmed with ribbons, makes an ideal holiday plant for retailers. E. gracilis and E. hyemalis are both good, but do not seem to succeed so well in America as the other variety. Do not try to force your plants into bloom. They will not stand it. If you cannot get them in for Christmas, they may be kept until Easter if required. They may be had in bloom over a long period and the flowers last surprisingly well. Be particularly careful not to allow ericas to become dried out at the root. One thorough drying will often kill a plant. While a dryness at the root may not seriously hurt a geranium or marguerite, it may mean death to a hard-wooded plant, especially if it has the pot filled with the fine, hair-like roots peculiar to the bulk of these plants.

Establishment of Bert Lyons, Belvidere, Ill.

Hydrangeas.

Your old plants will now be stored in some cellar, pit or cold house for the winter. Keep on the dry side and look over them once a week and shake off the decaying leaves. Give all air possible in favorable weather. A light freezing will not hurt them. If an early batch of plants is wanted, some can be started now. Pick away some of the old surface soil in their pots, and give them a liberal top dressing. Do not start in a very warm house. Fifty-four degrees at night is better than 60 degrees. You can give a higher temperature after the plants have fairly started.

Brief Reminders.

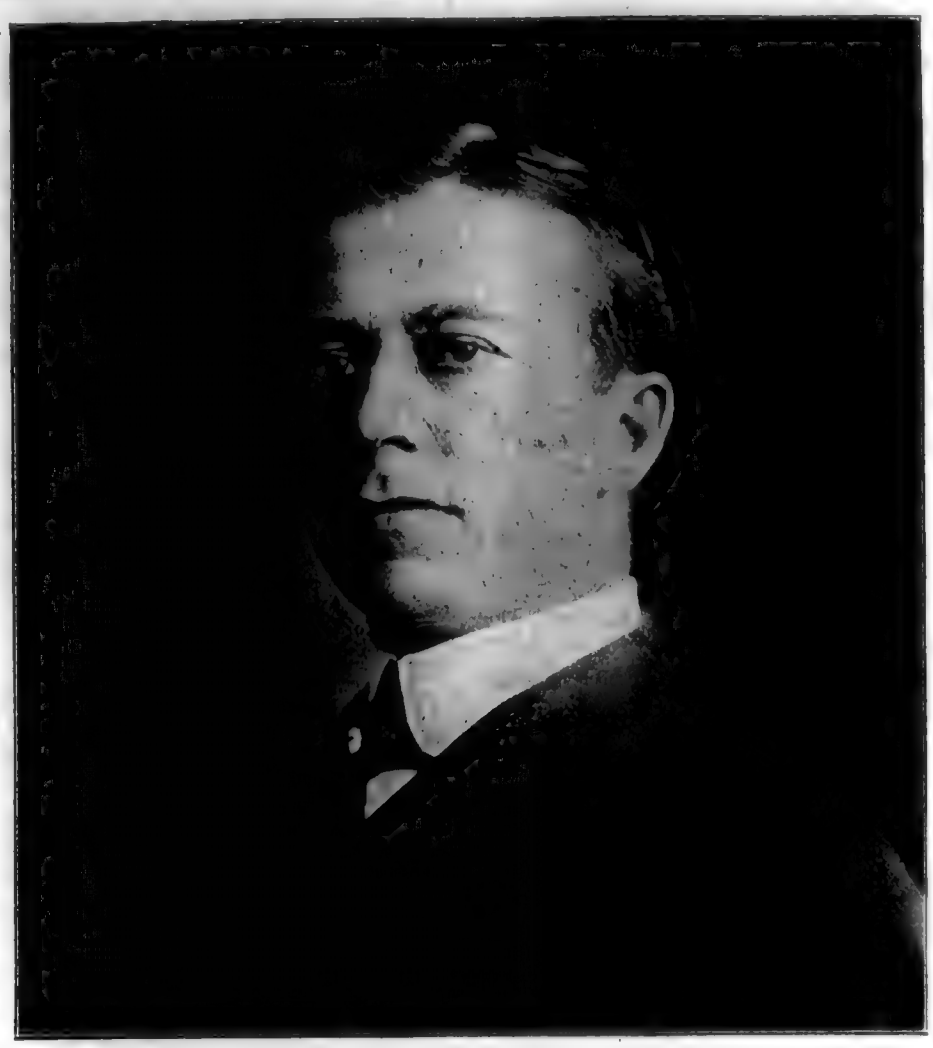
Poinsettias with bracts well developed should be moved to a cooler house; 50 to 52 degrees at night will suffice if they are carefully watered.

Move the lilies around which are being timed for Christmas. Put early ones in a cooler house and force those that are backward. As lilies sell fairly well after Christmas, do not attempt to force those on which the buds are not well advanced.

Keep decaying foliage and any showing spot picked off the violets. Let them have an abundance of ventilation and no more fire heat than is necessary.

Pot up clumps of spiræa (astilbe), which are now coming to hand. First soak them, if dry, and lay the clumps where they can have a little frost.

Cover spaces with leaves or straw outdoors where hardy lilies are to be planted which are not yet to hand. These give far better results planted in December than in spring.



THE DEATH ROLL.

P. J. Hauswirth.

Genial, lovable, loyal Phil Hauswirth is gone. He shot himself in the stomach while in a period of despondency about 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, December 4, and died before his son, Edwin, who was just coming in to open the store in the Auditorium Annex, Chicago, could reach his father in the basement workroom. The inquest, held the afternoon of his death, failed to bring out any fact sufficient to account for his mental depression, for no man in the trade had more friends. Generous to a fault and indefatigable whenever a friend's interests could be served, he might have had any service in return.

And in his loss the craft loses one of its most willing workers for the general good. His time and talents always were at command whenever any organized undertaking was afoot, and he was as active in the affairs of the Red Men and the Elks as he was in matters of the S. A. F., the flower shows or the Chicago Florists' Club. The S. A. F. turned to him at Dayton as the ideal man to fill the secretaryship, made vacant by the advancement of W. J. Stewart to the presidency after twenty years of service, and so well did he perform his duties that he was unanimously reelected at Philadelphia. Mr. Hauswirth also had served twice as the president of the Chicago Florists' Club and was a member of the Rose, Carnation and Chrysanthemum Societies.

The funeral will be held Friday, December 6, at 1 p. m., from the family residence, 144 Clybourn avenue, and at 2 p. m. at the chapel at Rosehill cemetery. The services at the house will be for the family and those at the chapel for friends. Florists will serve as pallbearers, the Elks will have charge at the chapel and the Red Men at the grave.

P. J. Hauswirth.

Mr. Hauswirth was born in Germany, December 18, 1861. While a boy he came to Chicago with an aunt, who, in 1871, married Charles Reisig, who was one of the pioneers in the trade. In the school vacation of 1873 the boy worked in the Reisig greenhouses on West Sixteenth street and may fairly be said to have been identified with the trade since that time. In the autumn of the next year he went into the store as errand boy. He continued with Mr. Reisig almost continuously for eighteen years. They had stores at 88 and 66 Washington street, at 175 Wabash, on State street, and again on Washington street, where the Marshall Field annex now stands, at various times during that period. Joe Curran, who is a few years older than Mr. Hauswirth, was also a protege of Mr. Reisig, and in the store during that time. At the time the Auditorium was completed it was far south of the center of trade, but Mr. Reisig moved there, occupying a part of the drug store on the Wabash avenue side. This was not at first profitable, and in July, 1892, Mr. Reisig, being well along in years, turned his business over to Mr. Hauswirth, dying within the year. Mr. Hauswirth later moved into a store on the Michigan avenue side of the Auditorium Annex, and only a few months ago moved again to a new store in the latest addition to the Annex, where he had one of the best stands in Chicago.

In 1882 Mr. Hauswirth married Marie C. Collnot. They have two children and two grandchildren. Mrs. Hauswirth has spent part of her time in the store and has been her husband's constant companion on convention and other trips, so that she is widely known in the trade. The whole trade shares in her bereavement.

John Ringier.

Stumpp & Walter Co., New York, report the death of John Ringier at Seurch Home, in Switzerland, November 15. He had two brothers in the United States, both in Chicago—Arnold Ringier, secretary of the W. W. Barnard Co., and Max Ringier, of the Kennicott Bros. Co.

George Edward Davenport.

George Edward Davenport, a noted botanist and scholar, who had won a national reputation as a specialist in the ferns of North America, and who formerly possessed one of the finest collections of these plants in America, died suddenly November 29, while strolling through the picturesque Middlesex Fells, which he loved so well, accompanied by his three grandchildren. Mr. Davenport was seized with vertigo and died before help could be summoned. One of the children stayed by the body while the others ran for help.

As a young man, the deceased was a great friend of Wendell Phillips and William Lloyd Garrison. After marriage he confined himself to botanical work, and for many years classified new and rare plants for Harvard and Yale colleges and the Smithsonian Institution, at Washington. He lived in Medford, Mass., since 1875, was a member of the school board for eighteen years, and held other offices.

Mr. Davenport's figure was well known at Horticultural hall, Boston. He frequently exhibited collections of ferns and other native plants, and had served on the library and other important committees. He had been a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society for many years.

THE ANNUAL

will be issued

DECEMBER 12, 1907.

Don't Forget:—

advertising copy must reach Chicago by Wednesday morning, December 11, to be in time, and earlier will be better.

Some desirable advertisements usually are received the morning after going to press with a Special Edition. Send today. Don't get left.

AND now Christmas is less than three weeks away.

FOR those who can use them, there are some fine bargains in bulbs offered in current issues of the REVIEW.

MANETTI stocks are due to arrive in the next few days. Time to plan your grafting operations for 1908 planting.

THE laying off of unskilled labor by the big corporations, perhaps this season a little earlier than in other winters, has brought its usual number of seekers after work in greenhouses among those who were called away by the better wages and change of scene incidental to other occupations.

THE market for bouquet green at Chicago has weakened, but is expected to stiffen as soon as the season opens in earnest. Demand has been light in the last few days. Buyers inquiring for strictly fancy holly find it difficult to place orders. The indications are that well-berried holly will be decidedly scarce.

IF no better place is available, aucubas will winter fairly well in a cellar where there are windows to admit reasonable light. Box in tubs or pots will also keep in good condition under like circumstances. Much water will not be needed through the winter for either aucubas or box, but it will not do to let them get dust dry, especially large specimen box cramped for room in their pots or tubs. Bay trees should not be allowed to get bone dry at their roots when stored away for the winter, and when they are watered they should get it in such quantity that all the roots will get wet.

CHRISTMAS GREENS.

The Packer, recording the doings of the fruit and vegetable commission men throughout the country, takes a one-sided and inaccurate view when it says: "Since the selling and manufacture of holiday decorations has been placed on a commercial basis the florist has almost become a nonentity in the trade." But there is some truth in its further statement, probably not intended to apply to bouquet green, that "whereas goods were formerly sold at high prices, the active competition as now extant among Chicago commission men has resulted in bringing sales down to a small margin of profit. A reduction of from seventy-five to eighty per cent is manifest since the retail florists were ousted from this particular line.

"Chicago supplies a big part of the holiday trade from Maine to California, and as far north as Winnipeg, Canada. This business, yet in its infancy, is growing almost beyond the hopes of its South Water street originators."

THANKSGIVING TRADE.

Almost without exception there is report of satisfactory trade for Thanksgiving. Not all cities report an increase in sales, as compared with recent years, but practically every reporter says business was rather ahead of expectations than below them. Supplies were large throughout the country and prices did not average as good as a year ago. The trade, as a whole, feels greatly encouraged with the Thanksgiving business, and regards it as an assurance of a splendid demand for Christmas.

OH! HAPPY FARMER.

"No general crop failure afflicts the farmer this year, not even within small areas. The production of the farms, all things considered, is well up to the average of the previous five years in quantity, while its value to the farmer, as now appears at this annual day of reckoning, reaches a figure much above that of 1906, which by far exceeded any previous year's wealth production on farms," says that greatest of optimists, James Wilson, in his eleventh annual report as Secretary of Agriculture. "Out of the farming operations of 1907 the railroads will get an average haul of freight, and foreign countries will take a heavy excess above home consumption. The farmer will have more to spend and more to invest than he ever before had out of his year's work. He reckons his income in ten figures, and he is still improving his farm, buying bonds, lending to his neighbors and putting his money into the vaults of banks.

"The grand total of the value of the crops for 1907 is $7,412,000,000. This is $657,000,000 above the value of 1906, $1,103,000,000 above that of 1905, $1,253,000,000 above that of 1904, $1,495,000,000 above that of 1903, and $2,695,000,000 above the census amount for 1899.

"A simple series of index numbers shows the progressive wealth production by the farmer. The value of the products in 1899 being taken at 100, the value for 1903 stands at 125, for 1904 at 131, for 1905 at 134, for 1906 at 143, and for 1907 at 157.

"The miner cannot restore the mineral to the mine. With the farmer it is different. The primal forces and atoms of the universe are his. The sun shines and the rain falls and the farmer applies his art and science to inexhaustible resources, ever adding enormously to the country's wealth, capital, credit and welfare."

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

December came in with temperatures considerably below the normal and the opening of the present week found supplies somewhat reduced thereby, but there is in market an edequate quantity of everything to take care of all the business there is doing. Local demand is not active, but those houses which cater specially to the shipping trade are not complaining. Prices are fair and the volume of sales is fairly satisfactory.

Roses continue the most abundant item, and several large producers are coming in with crops of Beauty, so that the Beauty market is much easier. For several weeks it has been difficult to fill all orders for Beauties.

Carnations have not yet caught up with the season; they have been backward ever since housing. While there are plenty of carnations in the market, not all are up to standard and there is a great difference in reports as to demand; the lower grades are not wanted.

The cold weather appears to have struck the Hudson river violet growers, for receipts are lighter and this week started with a stronger market than at any time this year. The wholesalers all are hoping it will continue, for the violet growers have had the worst of it thus far this season.

With some wholesalers, chrysanthemums are pretty well at an end, but others have considerable quantities to market. Out-of-town buyers may not be able to get what they want on telegrams late in the day, but if they will send orders early, mums can be supplied for some weeks. Lilies are more abundant and lower in price. Stevia is everywhere, and fine. Romans and Paper Whites move slowly. All green stock is abundant.

Thanksgiving.

There are varying reports as to how Thanksgiving turned out, but on one point all are agreed: The growers played the same old trick. With wonderful unanimity they held up Monday's shipments, with the result that on that day every order went out billed at the limit price and it was impossible to buy a carnation; many orders were cut severely. Tuesday there was enough to go around, with some exceptions, for there are always special circumstances which prevent any statement applying without exception. Wednesday the market had more stock than it could use, and local demand was not sufficient to clean up the supply carried over to Thanksgiving morning.

It seems that the demand for stock was somewhat better than a year ago, and had supplies been evenly divided between Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, everyone would have been in position to enjoy his turkey. Those wholesalers who did not increase their sales for the three days, lay it to the fact that they did not have as large supplies as a year ago. For instance, one house lays a decrease to an absence of a crop of Beauties; another had a good crop of carnations last year and a light crop this year.

On the whole, the average prices were lower than a year ago and the grower who did not produce more stock certainly got less money than last Thanksgiving. The market had the stock for a fine increase had the receipts been a little more evenly divided and conditions a little more favorable.

The three days following Thanksgiving also give a variety of report: Some houses say they were active, others only fair, while one or two report them dull.

Christmas Prospects.

Joseph Foerster, manager of the selling end of George Reinberg's business, has been sizing up the prospect for Christmas. As he looks over the market, it appears to him that there will be a good supply of almost everything. Rose crops may not be at the full, but Beauties will be on, and so will carnations. Mr. Foerster says the prospect pleases him, because a good supply means moderate prices, but at the same time returns more money to the growers than would a small supply at higher prices. At the same time the buyer has a better chance to please his customer and can do a bigger and better business.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., subscribes to the prediction of good supplies of carnations for Christmas.

November Weather.

The mean temperature for November was 2 degrees higher than normal, according to the averages of the Weather Bureau, and the rainfall was six-tenths of an inch less than normal. There were twelve clear days, ten partly cloudy and eight on which the sun did not shine. The wind movement, which affects greenhouse heating, was less than usual, 10,520 miles.

Various Notes.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. looks forward to a big Christmas, with a fine crop of Beauties and heavy supplies of carnations. They have booked an order for mums for New Year's.

E. C. Amling points to bouvardia as an evidence that a steady and adequate supply is necessary before a satisfactory business can be done. He can supply bouvardia on advance orders, but says he could get more money for it, as well as doing more business, if he had it regularly in quantity to supply at a moment's notice.

Vaughan & Sperry handled 40,000 violets the day before Thanksgiving, which of itself made a good day's sale.

Bassett & Washburn say they have had an especially good season on chrysanthemums, and are well satisfied. It is a report to which not all chrysanthemum growers can subscribe this season.

Leonard Kill says that if the market is at all favorable, Peter Reinberg will make a new record this month. He says they will have a greater supply the next four weeks than in any period in their history.

In the Flower Growers' Market, Mrs. Beu says they will be cutting chrysanthemums for Christmas and M. Evert will do even better, for a lot of Nonin are only just showing bud.

C. W. McKellar says that since Thanksgiving there has been an excellent call for gardenias and cattleyas. He has just opened a stock of immortelles, cape flowers and other Christmas goods.

Wietor Bros. still grow White Cloud as their principal white and, the way they do it, it leaves little to be desired.

C. L. Washburn is trying to beat Job's record, with boils, and his patience, also, is entitled to special mention.

F. F. Benthey says the Benthey-Coatsworth Co. has every reason to be satisfied with the business of the last two weeks.

John Kruchten is doing quite a business with boxwood, ferns and other greens. His location is excellent for this trade.

John Zech, of Zech & Mann, says Thanksgiving was even a little better than he expected.

E. H. Hunt has taken the exclusive selling agency for Louis Wittbold's patented articles, including the watering system and the cement bench device.

It is reported that O. Johnson and some associates have purchased a piece of property at Wilmette and will erect greenhouses in the spring.

The E. F. Winterson Co. is handling some especially fine Chadwicks this week. In the supply department, they have just opened a big stock of bells, statice and immortelle wreaths, etc. Winding green will begin in a few days.

The A. L. Randall Co. has called its traveling men home to help get out the orders in the supply department, during the holiday rush.

E. Fransen, of Scheiden & Schoos, says they still are receiving orders for field-grown carnation plants, one inquiry, December 4, being for 16,000.

Weiland & Risch again are cutting heavily of Killarney.

Percy Jones denies that there has been a glut of chrysanthemums this year. In spite of the fact that growers have realized lower prices than last year, he asserts that there has been no time when the market was so overloaded as it has been in other seasons.

At J. A. Budlong's they endorse the statement that city trade is not active, but that shipping is fair.

A South Water street authority states that 120 cars of holly were handled on that thoroughfare last Christmas.

1907 as much the biggest year in its history.

Victor Thompson, 60 years old, 108 South Park avenue, Austin, was found dead in bed at his home, Monday morning, November 25. Death is believed to have been caused by heart disease.

TARRYTOWN.

The usual well attended monthly meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held Friday evening, November 29, President Howard Nichols presiding. The monthly prize was won by Mr. Nichols with a fine vase of Golden Gate roses. The essay on outdoor vegetables by Mr. Nichols was considered by all to be a very able paper. James Ballantyne will open a discussion on greenhouse roses at the December meeting. The secretary reported that upwards of $600 in prize money was won at the November exhibition, besides five silver cups, one silver pitcher and a silver medal. Nomination of officers was made for the coming year, to be elected at the December meeting.

D. M.

DALLAS, TEX.—A greenhouse 40x75 will be built in City park, W. R. Tietze, superintendent.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business in this city was not so good as in previous years. From reports, out in the west end they did much better than downtown, while the north end, as reported, did better than down south. From general reports we can safely say that Thanksgiving trade was not up to any of the previous years. In fact, the business for the whole of last week can be called dull in all lines, including social and funeral work.

The wholesalers were not short. November 25 and 26, however, the market was shy of good stock, with quite a demand. Wednesday, November 27, there was plenty of stock shipped in, with few buyers. Had the shippers sent this stock in Monday and Tuesday all could have been sold, but they held it over and plenty of it was left unsold. The trade will not stand for pickled stock. There is also too much of the cheap grade of stock, which has a bad effect on the market and the retail trade. If this stock could be kept out of the market, the shipper and the retailer would obtain better prices.

Chrysanthemums are about over. This should have a good effect on roses and carnations. The prices on these will go up this month. Roses are still arriving in large lots, in all grades. Bride and Maid are most plentiful. Of Richmond and Killarney, there are enough. American Beauties are not overplentiful. Carnations last week had a good call, but the market was heavily stocked with good quality.

Violets started in at $1 per hundred, but dropped to 75 cents for the best, with not any too many. Longiflorums are in plenty; so are Paper Whites. Callas are selling slowly. Romans are not in yet. A few good sweet peas are in. There is plenty of everything in greens.

Various Notes.

W. J. Pilcher, of Kirkwood, was in every day last week, attending the chicken show. His stock took a number of first prizes. Mr. Pilcher has his new Kroeschell boiler in working order and is sending in a fine lot of violets and carnations to the market.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The Thanksgiving business did not occasion abnormal prices, but there was a little pickling. The old menace will not down. There are a few growers still alive who will pickle though the heavens fall. Some day these will be in a pickle themselves and let us hope their descendants may be few.

Most of the stock sent in for Thanksgiving was superb. Beauties, a few of them, touched 40 cents; 30 cents and 35 cents were the general prices. This week Monday, they had retrograded to 25 cents and 30 cents. The tendency, however, will be upward until Christmas. Maid and Bride advanced to 8 cents for the best; a few to 10 cents. This week opens with the best at 8 cents, and this probably will be top for a while. This price also applies to Chatenay and Killarney. Fine Richmond have sold at 12 cents. With fine weather, receipts will increase and these figures may not hold.

Carnations are coming to their own again; 4 cents was the asking price and good stock commanded this figure easily. The variety is now complete and Long Island and other districts are producing grand stock. It cannot be excelled. Every new and valuable variety is here. Never were prices so reasonable when merit is considered. There will be no break for the balance of the year.

There will be an abundance of chrysanthemums for Christmas. Common goods have ceased to arrive. All the stock now arriving brings good prices, with a rising tendency. From 4 cents to 15 cents is a fair quotation. The best will be higher before the week is over.

Orchids are not overabundant and prices are steady. The out-of-town demand is growing. McManus says he already has booked many orders for Christmas.

Violets did not fare very well last week. A few specials touched $1 for the holiday. These are down to 75 cents now. There is no limit to the supply. Quality is at top notch, but they have been cheapened by sidewalk abundance and relegated by society to humbler service by the triumph of the gardenia and orchid.

The market sees an abundance of stevia, mignonette and sweet peas. Lilies and valley are abundant.

Various Notes.

Holly sold fairly well for Thanksgiving, but little of it arrived and good berried stock was not in evidence, nor will it be this season. The reports from the south are far from encouraging. No guarantee of first-class stock is authorized. Lack of berries is general and $5 a case will be the minimum price for anything worth having. Stumpp & Walter Co. and other expert handlers declare that never before has the outlook been so discouraging for first-class holly.

Every industry in our line is up and doing for the Christmas holiday. Cheerfulness again reigns; the people have about decided the end of the world is still a long way off. The plantsmen are disposing of their products rapidly. Soon they will have a central depot in the wholesale district, where samples of their goods will be always on exhibition. Rumor credits them with having secured the immense ground floor of the big building of the Volunteers of America, on west Twenty-eighth street, close to Young & Nugent's and across the street from Walter Sheridan's. Amid so many good influences the venture should be a great success.

A. Herrington and W. Duckham, of Madison, were in the city December 2 and reported a 3-inch fall of snow in the country. They will attend the meeting of the executive committee of the Chrysanthemum Society at Philadelphia on Friday of this week.

Next Monday evening, December 9, the New York Florists' Club will meet at the new rooms, Thirty-fourth street and Third avenue. There will doubtless be a large attendance. No one whose dues are not paid to the end of the year is eligible for the annual election or authorized to vote. With the exhibits and music, the evening should prove a memorable one.

The Dayton Cash Register Co. continues its model florists' store on Broadway. The decorating is done by M. A. Bowe, so the good rule of publicity is working both ways.

Mr. Stumpp and wife have returned from their southern trip, after a most enjoyable visit and tour through the southern states and Mexico.

B. J. Slinn, Jr., is receiving large quantities of the fine single violet, Governor Herrick, daily, that find a ready demand at 75 cents per hundred.

The New York Cut Flower Co. boasts occasionally of its Beauties and its busi-

Thanksgiving Trade.

Reports from both wholesalers and retailers indicate that while there was, everything being considered, a good flower market for Thanksgiving, it did not nearly approximate that of a year ago. The wholesalers sold out much better than the retailers, some of the latter having a good deal of stock left on hand. Prices averaged lower all around than a year ago. In roses, the top price on Beauties was $4 a dozen; best quality Brides and Maids brought $8 to $10, few selling higher. A good many cleared at $4 to $5, the short stems making $1. There were not many Richmond, but some nice Wellesley, Killarney and Chatenay arrived. Prices on these did not advance much. Carnations were in heavy supply and sold at a wide range in prices. A few extra fancies made $5, but as a rule $4 was the top price on scarlets, crimsons and the Enchantress varieties. The ruling price on good stock was $2.50 to $3 per hundred in large lots, a few selling lower.

Violets were of fine quality. A few made $1, but more sold at from 60 cents to 75 cents per hundred. Lily of the valley varied from $1 to $4 per hundred, according to quality, more arriving than the market called for. Easter lilies and callas made $2 per dozen, but were not abundant. Chrysanthemums varied all the way from $4 to $20 per hundred, the higher prices being for best quality Eaton, Maud Dean and Nonin. The top figures reached were $4 per dozen. Some good bouvardia, mignonette and snapdragon were seen. Paper Whites were plentiful, but sold well. Green stock was in moderate request.

The wholesalers attribute lower prices in some part to the action of selling agents, who telephoned buyers in other cities, offering to sell them flowers at certain figures, thus preventing much rise in prices. Although prices were lower all around, flowers cleared out pretty well and business was fully as good as could have been expected.

The market has remained fairly good since Thanksgiving. Roses are a trifle slow, but carnations are holding up well. Very ordinary flowers made $3 per hundred November 30. Violets are also clearing moderately well. Quite a few mums are still arriving, but some have a decidedly ancient and pickled appearance. Prices on these keep fairly firm. Quite a little stevia, Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are coming in. Cypripedium insigne is now becoming quite plentiful. There is no special social activity to stimulate trade, and conditions will probably remain dull until Christmas.

Various Notes.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, are still marketing quantities of chrysanthemums, including some fine Golden Dome. This variety, by the way, grows tall and has too much of a neck to suit commercial growers.

The Gardeners' and Florists' Club landscape classes opened for the winter session December 3, with good attendances. Ladies' night, December 17, at the regular monthly meeting, will attract the largest attendance of the year.

Welch Bros. report a good Thanksgiving trade. Prices ruled lower than in 1906, but there was a good demand. Considering that all other lines of business complain of depressed trade, they are well pleased with their sales.

Do not forget the club field day at Framingham, Saturday, December 14. The journey will be made by Boston and Worcester electrics.

Our first real snow storm of the season arrived December 1, when we got a comfortable coating of the fleecy mantle.

H. M. Robinson & Co. report much heavier cut flower trade for Thanksgiving than a year ago, with lower prices. They are preparing for a heavy holiday trade in evergreen wreathing and other supplies.

W. W. Edgar is reported as critically ill.

S. J. Goddard is somewhat better. He will provide a free electric car to Framingham for the club's field day, December 14.

Boston bulb dealers have been more fortunate than those in some other cities this season. Stocks left over are small.

W. N. CRAIG.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Thanksgiving was truly named, both from a religious and a business standpoint, for the advent of the holiday marked a complete change in the situation in the market.

The volume of business done at Thanksgiving was fully equal to that of any previous year, but it took a great many more flowers to do as much business, prices being in many cases far below previous seasons.

The demand, which started so briskly for Thanksgiving, continued on Friday and Saturday, owing to the Army and Navy football game, and the large number of visitors brought into the city thereby. This week there is enough going on in the social world in this and other cities to keep up a fair degree of activity and to maintain, and, in some cases, increase prices.

Going over the list, it may be said that violets were in exceptionally heavy demand. All really well-grown stock, whether from Hightstown or up the Hudson, sold at good figures, while even the poorer stock brought fair returns. Some fine single violets were more eagerly sought than the doubles. Chrysanthemums, especially those of high grade, sold wonderfully well, $4 and $5 per dozen being obtained for some choice flowers of Golden Chadwick, while other good sorts brought $3 easily. By far the larger portion of the fancy stock did not realize so much, and $1.50 to $2 was a popular price for Jones and Bonnaffon. Pompons, especially those of poorer grade, were far too numerous, the good stock selling well, but the others hanging fire. There were some singles seen, and they have warm friends, but there are not enough of them to fairly test their appreciation in the market.

The feature of the rose market was the supply of American Beauties, the quality being fine. The demand was fully equal to that of previous seasons, but, in face of the enormous supply, prices ruled lower than for any previous year, and for the first week in December the average price on specials is just half that of the corresponding period last year, which was, of course, unusually high. Richmond was in active demand, many buyers preferring this rose to Beauty. In fact, the wholesalers were puzzled by the varying conditions that confronted them. Bride, Bridesmaid and Killarney were in fair demand, good stock moving well at moderate prices. The poor stock is difficult to market.

Carnations advanced in price, fancy flowers of Enchantress, Beacon, and a few other leading sorts, bringing even more than listed quotations. The average stock was in demand, there being little waste. Valley has sold rather poorly, the supply exceeding the demand.

Poinsettias made their appearance and with them stevia. Both are of excellent quality and will be important until the end of the year. Cattleyas are rather scarce, with indications that prices will advance. Cypripediums are plentiful. Romans and Paper Whites are abundant, with only a moderate demand. Gardenias of excellent quality are in fair supply. The feature of the green market is the immense demand for bronze galax leaves, which were sold in large numbers during the last few days, practically every case reaching this market being promptly sent out.

With an Insider.

The street has always asserted that Frank S. Jackson was an insider. When you ask, "What is an insider?" they tell you that an insider is one who has a "pull," and on further inquiry you are told that it does not much matter what an insider grows, he has a "pull" and can sell at good prices anyway. When describing Mr. Jackson's pull the street says that when he happens to be long of any plants or flowers, all he has to do is to take down his telephone and pretend to speak crossly to Henry Bauer or to Frank Gaul and they will at once order all that he wishes them to. Mr. Jackson asserts that this is not so; that he has no pull, and that his stock is sold strictly on its merits. And Mr. Jackson's word is one that can be relied upon. Probably the whole truth is that, all other things being equal, Mr. Bauer or Mr. Gaul would prefer buying his stock to that of anyone else, because Mr. Jackson's cultural skill enables him to produce stock that is superior to that of other growers.

It so happened that a friend and Phil went "a Sabbath day's journey" one bright Sunday to call on an attractive young man. It further transpired that the attractive young man was at church, and the greenhouses presided over by Mr. Jackson being hard by, a call there was a natural sequence.

Frank S. Jackson grows Adiantum Farleyense as few others can grow it, the plants in all sizes being the pictures of health and symmetry. This fern he has made a specialty for some years and has developed an excellent demand for it, both as specimen plants and for cut fronds. A variety of other plants are grown in smaller quantities for green, a bench of peperomias for ferneries being especially noteworthy.

It is in the cutflower line that Mr. Jackson is now blossoming out strongly. He believes that hybrid tea roses are better than the pure tea, and he is pinning his faith on Richmond, which is grown in quantity, and on Killarney. Safrano, Isabella Sprunt and Bon Silene are grown for buds. All are in nice condition, the houses light, airy and neat as wax. Indications point to good crops this season.

The Value of Advertising.

The business men of this city have been pointing with pride to the wonderful courage of John Wanamaker, who has, during the dull period through which we have just passed, advertised with the same freedom and persistency that he exhibited during the time of most buoyant prosperity. Mr. Wanamaker felt that whatever business was going he wanted, and he wanted everybody to know it.

A parallel may be found in the floral world today in the splendid work done in this line by Godfrey Aschmann, who, during the six weeks of depression which has just so happily ended, has advertised with an amount of vim and fearlessness that would put life into the most doubting. His advertisements have attracted considerable notice from their breezy style. Mr. Aschmann has a catchy way of saying things about his plants that appeals to florists all over the country, and on the strength of his Christmas Plants.

A few years ago a difficult problem presented itself to our florists. There were not nearly enough cut flowers and foliage plants to meet the demand at the Christmas holidays. How was this demand to be met? The supply men at once stepped into the breach by offering an endless variety of baskets, pot covers, ferneries, crepe paper, and what not, generally of the cheerful Christmas color always so popular. But this was not enough. The leading plantsmen experimented with certain plants, those they could make fit subjects for forcing into bloom in the short, dark days of December, and the color of whose blooms was sufficiently cheerful. These experiments proved successful, and today we have whole places largely devoted to flowering plants for Christmas.

Robert Craig was a pioneer in this industry, and the company that bears his name has increased the number and quality of the plants flowering for Christmas until it seems hard to see where improvement will be made, as it surely will. Their stock this year is as fine as ever before, and in many cases finer, and their knowledge of the demands of the Christmas buyer enables them to produce what is wanted. A trip through their houses showed a variety of stock in splendid condition, carefully timed for the holidays. There were azaleas, poinsettias, short plants made up with asparagus and Pteris Wilsoni, in pans of various sizes. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, both in soft pink and in the more showy but less lasting bright pink, are a feature, and it is doubtful if they have ever been better grown. Begonia Turnford Hall is also here, for variety's sake, though Mr. Craig says it is not the color for Christmas. Cyclamens, from seed of their own strain, are superb.

Otaheite oranges, dwarf-shaped plants, well filled with fruit, fill a couple of houses.

Among the foliage plants, Ficus pandurata stands out prominently. The larger specimens in branched and single-stemmed plants are magnificent, perfect in every detail. A house of Dracæna terminalis in medium sizes is richly col-

Various Notes.

The Philadelphia Wholesale Florists' Association, embracing nearly all the wholesalers of this city, has organized for the purpose of creating a better understanding among those who distribute our cut flowers, and for the purpose of inaugurating a better system of credits.

Freeman & Co., auctioneers, will dispose of the greenhouses and their contents, also four and a half acres of land, belonging to Colflesh & Note, at Yeadon, Pa., December 9.

Edward J. Fancourt, secretary of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., is showing something exceptionally choice in Christmas red ribbon in the annex over which he presides.

Jacob Becker, Fifty-second and Market streets, has his showhouse filled with well-grown chrysanthemums and foliage plants.

President Loubet has proved a failure as a cut chrysanthemum.

R. G. Palmer, well and favorably known throughout this city, is now with Alfred M. Campbell.

Beech sprays of unusual length are a specialty this season with M. Rice & Co.

All through the recent depression, so happily ended with Thanksgiving day, Charles E. Meehan said to the chorus of croakers who came to him for sympathy: "Never mind, we'll eat three meals a day, anyway."

The steamship Barcelona brought over a special consignment of choice magnolia leaves for H. Bayersdorfer & Co. Appletree street, this firm's rear entranceway, was a sight Monday afternoon, being nearly impassable by reason of the large number of cases ready packed and marked for shipping away.

Some good late mums are seen this week, including Yellow Eaton and Golden Dome.

The attendance at the club meeting Tuesday evening, December 3, was cut down by a snow storm. Mr. Grakelow's paper on the relations of retailers and wholesalers elicited spirited discussion. The wholesalers stated positively that they always favor the retailer as against the faker.

Mrs. Sarah I. Smith, of Secane, disposed of an excellent lot of carnation plants from the field recently. Her single violets are fine.

Charles H. Grakelow had the honor to be the first retailer to appear before the Florists' Club since (I think) Thomas Cartledge read his famous paper on "Easter Plants" some years ago.

Edward A. Stroud had a fine lot of chrysanthemums last week. He had many yellows. That color sold best, especially on Saturday.

The Dingee & Conard Co. is as well to the fore in the production of young roses and other useful stock, under the able management of P. J. Lynch, as under that of Charles Dingee.

The best late chrysanthemums are Jeanne Nonin, Golden Dome, Yellow Eaton, Golden Chadwick, Pink Chadwick, so-called; Golden Wedding, and in the smaller sizes Major Bonnaffon and Mrs. Jerome Jones..

The opening of Congress in Washington last Monday had no appreciable effect on the market in this city.

Mistletoe!

OUR stock of Mistletoe for the holiday trade is extra choice this year, being profusely berried, having perfect foliage and growing in large, beautiful clusters. It is the kind that meets the demands of the best trade. Average weight of clusters, 8 to 10 pounds.

Fancy stock, carefully packed, delivered anywhere by fast express: 25 lbs., $7.50; 50 lbs., $13.50; 100 lbs., $25.00. We use crates holding fifty lbs., net, for all orders for fifty lbs. and over.

We are in position to take care of orders received by telegraph, and can ship out fresh stock promptly.

Supplying florists who want nothing but first-class Mistletoe is our specialty.

OUTDOOR FLOWERS.

I should like to grow outdoor flowers for cutting, for shipment to the Chicago or St. Louis wholesale markets next summer. What should I grow? I have a small piece of ground adjoining the greenhouses and last season grew about one-eighth of an acre of sweet peas, but prices were not profitable, although the quality is good and will ship in excellent condition. What could I grow to get more money? J. J. M.

A grower located where he could ship to either Chicago or St. Louis would necessarily be at a disadvantage competing with the growers of outdoor flowers who are close enough to town so they can personally deliver their stock, fresh, at the wholesale houses each morning. As there are enough such growers who supply either of the markets mentioned, the prospect is not an encouraging one. The only possibility is in producing a superior grade of stock. Outdoor sweet peas ship poorly and it seldom pays to ship asters any distance. Fancy gladioli usually bring fair prices, but it means quite an investment for bulbs. R. F. D.

WATER ANALYSIS.

In the following table I give an analysis of two different samples of water. The water marked "Mine" comes from a soft coal shaft; the water marked "Pump" comes from a drilled well below the coal vein. Which supply of water would be more suitable for plants growing under glass, such as roses, carnations, etc., or would either kind be fit for such use?

Chemical Properties—	Grains Per U.S. Gal. Mine.	Pump.
Silica and silt	1.2	0.7
Alumina and iron	.8	.5
Lime as sulphate	32.0	2.0
Lime as carbonate	None	14.0
Sodium sulphate	8.5	None
Magnesium carbonate	9.2	2.2
Sodium chloride (common salt)	1.2	.6
Total solids	47.9	20.0

Both waters are faintly alkaline. There is no free acid present, all sulphuric acid having been neutralized with lime and soda. J. W.

Neither sample of water, according to the analysis, contains any injurious principle save the common salt, and since the one marked "Pump" contains only a fraction of the amount contained in the other, everything considered, the "Pump" water should be more desirable for greenhouse use. L. C. C.

PIERSON GETS BRITISH AWARD.

F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., sent an exhibit of its new fern Nephrolepis exaltata superbissima to the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society, London, England, November 12, where it gained the highest award, a first-class certificate. It was described as follows by an English authority:

"This is another plumose variety of the well known nephrolepis. The fronds are more plumose and dense than N. todeaoides, each frond being almost like a cushion, several inches in depth. Some of the pinnæ grow upwards, at right angles to the rachis, thus producing the remarkable thickness of the frond. It is a very hard fern, and will probably be capable of withstanding ill-usage better than N. todeaoides, but it is much less beautiful than that variety, being too dense, therefore of heavy appearance."

Todeaoides is an English sport and the Britons are loyal to all things British.

FERNS FOR A COOL HOUSE.

Please let me know what would be the best ferns to grow in a house where the night temperature is about 48 or 50 degrees. J. O. B.

Any of the nephrolepises, such as Bostoniensis, Elegantissima and Whitmani, will do well. Adiantum cuneatum will succeed satisfactorily. Cyrtomium falcatum, Polypodium aureum, many of the pterises, such as Cretica, Wimsetti, tremula, serrulata and argyræa; Aspidium tsussimense, Lastrea opaca and L. aristata, with quite a few of the davallias and aspleniums, may be relied upon. The ferns will require the shady end of the house and prefer a moderately moist atmosphere. C. W.

Vegetable Forcing.

WHERE it is convenient to obtain seaweed it will be found a good covering for asparagus beds. Mixed with stable manure, it may be covered with fine soil.

FREMONT, MICH.—R. L. Chamberlain, of Chamberlain & Bunker, greenhouse lettuce growers here, is secretary and manager of the Dade City Vegetable Co. at Dade City, Fla. This concern is growing large quantities of head lettuce and other salad vegetables and expects to make a specialty of producing cucumbers under canvas. The firm has about six acres under irrigation and cover. Considerable of the product will go to the western markets in car lots.

THE Bureau of Soils of the U. S. Department of Agriculture has materially aided in the development of the early truck and fruit industry in the Atlantic and Gulf Coast states. It has shown that there is a close relationship between the soils of different localities and the character of the truck crops which can be raised. The principal requirements of soils suited to early truck crops have been found to be small clay content, insuring excellent drainage and ease in cultivation and quick response to applications of fertilizers, and nearness to bodies of water, insuring freedom from frost. The soil survey has outlined large areas of land suitable for early truck and has been instrumental in the development of this industry.

BEST EARLY TOMATOES.

I am planning to raise some early tomatoes. I expect to raise the plants in pots. Kindly tell me what varieties will be the best for very early market here, in Indian Territory. W. H.

I consider Burpee's Fordhook First tomato the finest of all early outdoor sorts, and Livingston's Dwarf Stone next. Globe has also been very satisfactory with me. There may be others equally good or possibly better in your climate, but there are many varieties which would be very unsatisfactory anywhere. Perhaps it would be well to inquire of some market gardener in your vicinity. If the weather is bright and warm, the seed should not be sown more than two months earlier than the plants are wanted for the field. I sow the seed in flats and in about a week transplant to other boxes, about three inches apart. Here they remain about a month; then they are separated and potted into 4-inch or 5-inch pots and left about three weeks longer, until well rooted and fine, healthy plants. H. G.

A BED OF MUSHROOMS

Raised from my Spawn, will bear longer and yield better than from any other variety of Spawn. This is proven by facts. Full particulars and information how to succeed in mushroom raising free. We warrant you if using our method of growing mushrooms that all will go well

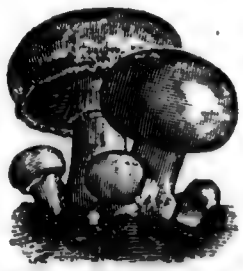
BUFFALO.

The Market.



The first real snow storm fell on Buffalo December 1 and 2. Only light frosts have occurred, and up to this time bulb planting has been done every day.

Thanksgiving day was a little raw, but not too severe for the season. Trade was brisk the whole week, and before the day was over mums were scarce; those who waited till the last for them "got left." Carnations were very scarce and not nearly enough to go around. Violets sold well and brought about the same price as in other years.

As Christmas approaches, everyone is running around to see who has the stock. We find in this section that poinsettias are going to be very scarce. Everybody blames the poor stock, to begin with. Lorraine begonias are not to be found with everyone, but there is plenty to go around. Christmas azaleas are always scarce and the same can be said of this year.

In going around, we find that everyone has received the same word regarding bouquet green; that is, that stock is very short and the dealers are not sure of full orders. It is certainly discouraging, after giving an order one year in advance, to receive this notice at the last minute. The market is cornered somewhere, for each year the market opens up a few days before Christmas with advanced prices.

Jacob Wiese is going to the holly fields to buy his own stock for this season. His business in this line is very large, and in order to buy a good lot he is going direct to the fields. Reports from the south say that holly is to be well berried this year. We hope so, and trust the berries will stay on, at least till it is unpacked.

Various Notes.

Professor Cowell, of the Botanical Gardens, gave a very interesting orchid show last week. The affair was well attended and Mr. Cowell was well pleased with the results.

Paul Milloff, who was in the employ of the Wm. Scott Co. for a number of years, and later was employed by other Buffalo florists, has taken a position in a private institution, as gardener. Mr. Milloff has not been on the place long enough to show results, but he succeeded a good man and was able to show some of the best mums in Buffalo.

Notice was received last week of the death of Charles Havanette, who died early in October. This young man came to this country when he was 17 years old, to learn the practical side of the business. He centered his efforts in Buffalo and made many friends here.

Envious of the record of Mr. Weston, the veteran walker, Dennis O'Connell and Wm. Poore entered the annual cross country run of the Y. M. C. A., on Thanksgiving day. Mr. O'Connell is 49 and the age of Mr. Poore we were not allowed to publish. Both were distanced in the running, but Mr. Poore was the swifter of the two. Owing to the business on that day, there was a very small attendance of the florists to greet them.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

CASS LANNING, nurseryman and florist, at Nowata, Okla., will add a full line of seeds for spring.

NOW that Congress is in session again, we shall have to roll up our sleeves and for the 'steenth time wade into the fight against that free seed appropriation.

BULBS for bedding have moved much better in the last ten days than in the first days of November, and the surpluses are now well cleaned out, making it a satisfactory season on the whole.

THE wholesale prices of lettuce seed December 1 were from ten to twenty-five per cent higher than last year, and some special sorts higher; Grand Rapids fifty per cent above last year.

THE W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, suffered a slight fire loss last week in one of its temporary storage buildings, at Sturgeon Bay, Wis., caused by water, owing to a fire next door.

THE Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., is preparing to move the wholesale department into the new warehouse which has just been completed, on the Frisco tracks. The addition of the warehouse located on the switch will be a convenience in handling business in the future.

THE Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., makes a specialty of poultry food and has just shipped an order of 100 sacks to one farm. Three carloads of seed, including oats, were recently shipped to South Africa. Mr. Nicholson, the manager, reports export trade as steadily increasing.

THE ramifications of the seed trade are becoming more intricate every year. For instance, to place the cantaloupe seed, or at least a part of it, that goes into the ground in Michigan, in Georgia, in Tennessee, in Arizona, and even in Colorado, you have to see a fruit and vegetable commission man in Pittsburg.

THE Maryland Seed Corn Breeders' Association held its annual meeting and exhibition at Baltimore December 3 and 4. J. Bolgiano & Son say it was "the greatest event of its character ever held in the state." They offered a silver cup for the best ten ears of corn in the show. The papers read were by experiment station corn breeders.

GOVERNMENT SEED TESTING.

Address all samples and correspondence concerning seed testing to Seed Laboratory, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C. Samples are often lost and reports delayed on account of improper address.

Accompany all samples with a statement as to the exact purpose for which they are sent: (1) Examination for presence of adulterants or dodder. (2) Test for mechanical purity. (3) Test for germination.

The examination of samples for the presence of adulterants or dodder requires but little time and will be given precedence over all other work. All samples sent for this purpose will be examined at once and reports sent by mail or on special request by telegraph at the expense of the receiver.

Test for mechanical purity requires the separation of the samples into three parts: (1) Pure seed (the kind being examined). (2) Foreign seed (all seeds not of the kind being examined). (3) Sticks, stones, dirt, and chaff, the determination of the weed seeds present, and the percentage by weight of each of the three parts. These tests require considerable time and can only be made by experts. The facilities of this laboratory will not permit more than five such tests to be made for any one firm or individual in any one calendar month. These tests will be made and reports sent as promptly as possible and in the order in which the samples are received.

Test for germination consists in determining the percentage of a sample of seed which will germinate under favorable conditions. These tests of most seeds are easily made by anyone, although some seeds, including many grasses, are somewhat difficult to test, requiring exact conditions. Samples will

THE BLUE KOLB GEM.

The Kolb Gem watermelon, the big blue sort, is getting to be a good crop for east Texas. It goes on the market about July 1, when there is just enough watermelon weather up north, and the farther it goes north the better it is when it gets there. And let me tell you, when you get hold of a big blue Kolb Gem, after it is good and ripe, you have a better melon than most of these new "extra sweet" melons, the flesh of which feels like cotton in your mouth. A great mistake is often made, however, in shipping the Kolb Gem too green, and then there is a light colored variety of the Kolb Gem that never gets good and ripe. Certainly the demand in Texas is increasing for well graded and loaded Kolb Gems for the far northern trade, for the reason that they stand the long haul better than any other variety, and, if of the blue sort, are fine and dandy when they arrive—well, the farther north the better.

Speaking of the Kolb Gem reminds me that the first season or two I grew this melon for shipment I planted the faded out sort, and wondered why they sold as well as they did up north. Some one asked me why I grew them. I answered that it was the only way I could think of to get even with the Yankees for shipping their Ben Davis apples to Texas.

But these east Texas people know a good melon when they get hold of it, and in my neck o' the woods the only melon they prefer to the blue Kolb Gem is the little Chilian variety which I introduced here at Palestine, Tex., from California. If the quality of the latter ever becomes known to the restaurant and hotel trade it should be highly profitable shipped in crates. R. R. CLARIDGE.

SEED WARRANTY.

Referring to the Rural New Yorker's inquiry as to how the seedsmen stand on a warranty of seed of Prizetaker onion, Northrup, King & Co., Minneapolis, say:

"There is no reputable seedsman in the United States who would give positive guarantee of the purity of any seeds he sends out. This would be impossible for the following reasons: In the first place, we do not know of a firm in the regular seed trade that grows its own Prizetaker onion seed. This variety is produced almost entirely in California by those who make it a business to grow such seed. The balance is grown in Europe by other professional seed growers. All seedsmen must purchase their supply through such growers, and, while due precaution is taken after it reaches the seedsman's hands, he cannot guarantee that it is pure seed, because it comes through the hands of another party. Should he attempt to guarantee the purity of the seed, it might possibly become mixed after it leaves the seedsman's hands, but this fact would not be taken into con-

New Close-Clinging Hardy Climber

AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Veitchii.

The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn.

In size the leaves are small, beautifully dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump.

This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

Its Work Affecting Seedsmen.

The introduction of leguminous crops throughout the different farming sections of the country is considered of the highest importance by the U. S. Department of Agriculture. The future maintenance of fertility is based on a wise use of such crops. During the year 1907 extensive work was carried on having in view the extension of alfalfa culture into those portions of the country where it is not now a staple crop. In general, coöperators have shown much enthusiasm in these experiments, and the effect of successful work of this kind in stimulating neighboring farmers to undertake the culture of the crop is especially gratifying.

"The great interest in alfalfa-growing throughout the country has created a much larger demand for alfalfa seed than our farmers have been able to supply," says Secretary Wilson in his annual report, made public November 30. "This has brought about the heavy importation of foreign seed, some of which has been shipped even to the Pacific coast. With the enormous areas devoted to alfalfa in this country we should be exporting seed rather than importing it. Investigations have shown that the yield of seed per acre is partly determined by the cultural methods used and is partly dependent upon varietal characteristics. Both these lines of investigation are being vigorously prosecuted, so as to bring about a great increase in the production of American alfalfa seed."

After relating the work done in improving varieties in other crops, such as corn, cotton, tobacco, etc., including the work of exploration and pathological investigation, the secretary continues:

"The department is making a special effort to educate the farmer in the matter of good seeds. With this end in view many thousands of tests have been made during the year, both for seedsmen and for farmers. The work on seed adulteration has been continued, with gratifying results. Aside from the continued sale of Canada bluegrass seed for Kentucky bluegrass seed, fewer cases of adulteration have been found than in former years. The importation of low-grade red clover seed has continued, some lots containing over 8,000,000 weed seeds per bushel.

"The work of securing, packeting, assembling and mailing the seed for congressional purposes was carried on the same as in past years. This work is now so systematized that it goes along smoothly, despite the large quantities of seed that must be secured and sent out. The total number of packages put up and distributed has remained the same for the last six years. In the annual distribution 6,400,000 packages of miscellaneous vegetable seed are put up and sent out,

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business during Thanksgiving week was satisfactory from almost every point of view. The total sales footed up to last year, and in a few instances exceeded it. Of course, we hear of those who are kicking, but we have plenty to be thankful for. Thanksgiving trade has its peculiarities. Monday and Tuesday brought forth little demand and Wednesday saw great quantities of stock being received by the commission houses. It looked as if there would be a big glut. The retail stores had bought little and were careful what they bought. But of a sudden, orders began to come in, and business took on a holiday rush. This kept up till Thursday noon, when virtually all of the good, salable stock had been sold at good prices. Yellow mums went like hot cakes.

There has been a big let-up in mums since Thanksgiving. It would appear that the market was cleared out of them in a day. Medium sizes are scarce and there are practically no large ones.

Carnations continue scarce and there is little prospect for a crop of them before the holidays. Roses are in good supply and of good quality. Now that the mums are virtually out of the way, roses ought to begin to sell better and the price ought to rise to something near what it ought to be. A strong inclination to boost prices a little can be felt now.

Various Notes.

With the change of political power in the city government January 1, there may probably be a change in the head of the park department. The present superintendent, J. W. Rodgers, is in hopes of retaining his position. Besides him, B. P. Critchell, who was formerly park superintendent, and David Knott, who at present is in charge of the city greenhouses at Eden park, are possibilities. It looks as if political pull will settle who the lucky man will be. The fact that the park department of any city ought not to be in politics goes without saying. It is to be hoped that the Cincinnati park department will soon be run on the merit system, and then may the best men win.

On Wednesday, November 27, Ed Weber and Miss Helen Knoll were married. Mr. Weber is a son of Nick Weber, who for many years has been running a retail store at Mohawk. The wedding was the occasion for a big celebration and several hundred friends of the young couple were present to give congratulations. C. J. Ohmer.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

There is some diversity of opinion as to the amount of profit in Thanksgiving trade. Some retailers claim that the bulk of sales was equal to those of one year ago, while others say that they did not equal them by twenty-five per cent. There were apparently as many sales made but they were for smaller amounts and, although a great deal of stock was handled, it was of a cheaper grade than that usually sold at this season.

Violets and carnations were in the best demand, while fancy roses and big chrysanthemums were not so eagerly bought up. Tons of red berries were handled and they formed a large bulk of the sales with many of the smaller dealers. Although the profits on these are large enough, the sales are usually for small amounts and they take up much time and space in handling.

Valley, narcissi, hyacinths and cyclamens sold fairly well, but not at the prices they should have brought. The growers are stiffening somewhat on the prices of carnations and all good stock is held at 50 cents per dozen. Roses, especially of the light colors, are cheaper in proportion, but they can be expected to advance in price at any moment.

Business outside of the Thanksgiving day trade is fair, especially in the line of funeral orders.

Various Notes.

G. Herrod, of Borchers & Herrod, Hanford, is in town on a short visit. This firm represents the Fancher Creek Nurseries, of Fresno.

The Whittlesey Floral Co., of Los Angeles, is in line with a big stock of cut poinsettias for the holiday trade. This firm makes a specialty of outdoor grown flowers.

E. Lacazette, of Elmhurst, is cutting heavily of Kaiserin roses from his new houses.

A Japanese firm has located in the new post-office building at East Berkeley.

Thomas A. Cox has returned from his trip to New York and other eastern points.

The retailers handling bulbs have found that the demand for tulips has been greater than for any other early planting variety. Hyacinths have usually held the place in former years and as a consequence everyone is practically sold out.

Wm. G. Royce has returned from his trip to the northern part of the state.

James Skinner, of Portland, is in town. Mr. Skinner is heavily interested in the green goods business and will have half a dozen carloads of Christmas trees in town in a few days. He is also one of the largest dealers in Oregon grape.

HOLIDAY PROSPECTS.

In San Francisco and Vicinity.

Now that the first of the season's holidays is over, the dealers can turn their attention to the coming ones. There was some disappointment to the retailers along certain lines, but the growers appear to be more fortunate thus far. Prices are not excessive and there is no superabundance of stock, with the possible exception of outdoor mums and violets. These have been much favored by the weather and of course we do not know how long it will continue, so that we cannot be sure that they will last long in a plentiful condition.

With ordinary climatic conditions we can expect from the growers fully as much stock as there was offered by them one year ago. There is this exception, however, in the case of roses, that not a few growers have turned their houses to carnations and, as there has practically been no building during the past year, the difference will be noticeable.

Practically all the indoor mums are gone. Violets are at the same acreage devoted to them last year, but they are cheaper than a year ago.

Poinsettias in pans and pots look well, and a majority of the available stock is already engaged by the retailers. The prices average about $10 to $12 per dozen for the best stock planted in 6-inch and 7-inch pots.

Cyclamen are in good demand and any first-class stock will be quickly bought up.

Half a dozen growers make a specialty of the various varieties of nephrolepis and these, with well grown pots of adiantum, seem to be by far in the greatest demand. Baskets of the same and Asparagus Sprengeri are another popular article.

In palms, Kentia Belmoreana and K. Forsteriana are the best sale and have practically superseded everything else. Since the advent of their growing by the Japanese nurserymen, they have cheapened in price, but the quality has correspondingly lowered and the results of too much forcing make them unsatisfactory propositions for handling by the ordinary florist, who has no facilities for putting them in the temperature to which they have been accustomed and without which they rapidly lose their color and stability.

Bulbous stock will apparently not be plentiful during the coming season, with the possible exception of valley. Hyacinths have not been heavily planted, and forcing varieties of tulips seem not to be as popular with growers as one might expect at this season. G.

At a recent meeting of the Arkansas Floral Society a report was made on the first annual flower show, held December 14 to 16. It appeared that the receipts from admissions and sales of flowers were $762.75, and the society's income from all sources $1,902.75. The disbursements were $1,117.25, leaving $885.50 out of which to pay $747 premiums. This gives a balance of $138.50 on which to begin work for the show in STORING TREE SEEDS.

Seeds kept through the winter in bottles or jars are often, when spring arrives, found to have been entirely spoiled because the air in these vessels has become contaminated by the exhalations from the seeds and has got into a wet condition from the closely confined moisture they contain. There is no danger of such a result with seeds if they are put away in sand or fairly dry soil and kept in a cool place.

Now, or a little later, is the time to procure seeds of holly, which should, when collected, be mixed with sand or fine loam in a box and put away in some cool place indoors or buried where they will be safe outdoors until spring. Then they may be taken in hand and freed of pulp, and the seeds again mixed with sand and put away as before, until autumn, when they should be sown in the open ground.

There are a great many seeds of trees and shrubs which, unless preventive measures are taken, will be welcome prey for mice and rats. There are many methods that will suggest themselves to whoever is interested in the preservation of seeds, that will avoid their loss in this way. M.

USE OF NITROGEN AND LIME.

Plants derive their nitrogen from ammonia and nitric acid, and though at one time it was supposed that they obtained nitrogen from the atmosphere, it is now universally admitted that the nitrogen of plants is assimilated from the two sources above mentioned.

Estimated by its proportional weight, nitrogen forms only a small part of plants, but it is never entirely absent from any part of them.

If poor growth on trees in a nursery is not the result of neglect in the thorough tillage of the soil for the preservation of the moisture, the soil needs nitrogen, which may be given in the form of nitrate of soda or sulphate of ammonia, at the rate of about 300 pounds to the acre. The application should be made in spring.

Lime acts more by bringing other substances into a proper condition for being absorbed by the roots of plants than by directly affording nourishment of itself. Some soils, especially such as are peaty, become acid or sour because of the presence of vegetable acids. On such soils lime acts in a beneficial and corrective manner, by uniting with and neutralizing the vegetable acids. R. R.

FOLIAGE INJURY.

For a number of years it has been a problem with pathologists to find some successful way of treating the peach with fungicides in order not to injure the foliage. Some of the standard fungicides often cause complete defoliation. For this reason it has been found difficult to control a number of serious diseases affecting the peach by any of the ordinary treatments. This year it was discovered, by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, that a sulphur wash made by combining lime and sulphur, with no other heat than that produced by the slaking of the lime, gave a preparation which was not injurious to peach foliage and which prevented the scab and reduced peach rot to ten per cent on the sprayed trees, whereas unsprayed trees had seventy-five per cent of the disease. This fungicide, further, completely prevented the leaf-spot fungi and produced no injury whatever, either to foliage or fruit. While this preparation has been previously used in winter, when the trees were dormant, this is the first time it has been tried on trees in active growth, with the success as indicated.

BERBERIS THUNBERGII.

The manner in which Berberis Thunbergii thrives when planted in widely varying soils and situations makes its future demand a certainty. For a beautiful, hardy, compact shrub, there is scarcely anything to beat this Japanese barberry. It never seems out of place, either when seen growing singly, in large groups or in hedges. It is equally satisfactory in whichever way used.

This shrub has, of course, for long been used as a shrub for planting as isolated specimens and in grouping, but it is only quite recently it has been to any great extent taken advantage of as a hedge plant. Its hardiness and ornamental character from early spring right through the winter will cause it to take the place of privet to a considerable extent, especially for locations where privet has occasionally proved disappointing in its liability to winter killing.

This plant will not make such an imposing hedge as privet will, but in hardiness, compact growth and—to many—its cheerful nature, it is the more satisfactory plant.

Seeds of Berberis Thunbergii should be gathered now and kept all winter covered with sand in a box outdoors, or in some place such as a cellar indoors. Or the usual method may be adopted, of separating the seeds from the pulp immediately and sowing outdoors if the soil is in condition and free of frost.

FORCING RAMBLERS & HYBRID ROSES

FOR IMMEDIATE SHIPMENT

The right time to buy Roses is when they are fresh and well ripened. Roses potted up in the fall or winter become better established and force better, and are far more satisfactory in every way, and you can retard and force at your leisure. We recommend American-grown Ramblers. Don't attempt to force imported Ramblers; the general experience is that they are a failure.

We offer exceptionally strong two-year-old dormant, low-budded stock (on Manetti), in the following varieties, true to name:

Anne de Diesbach. Bright carmine.
Ball of Snow. Pure white.
Baron de Bonstetten. Dark crimson, shaded.
Baroness Rothschild Satiny pink; extra.
Captain Christy. Delicate flesh-color.
Duke of Edinburgh Bright vermilion; fine.
Fisher Holmes. Dark rich scarlet.
Frau Karl Druschki. The finest white in existence.
General Jacqueminot. Rich velvety crimson.
General Washington. Beautiful red, shaded carmine.
John Hopper. Beautiful rose pink.
Margaret Dickson. White, pale flesh center.
Magna Charta. Clear rosy pink.
Mme. Gabriel Luizet. Light satiny pink.
Mme. Plantier. White.
Mrs. John Laing. Soft pink; most desirable variety.
Paul Neyron. Beautiful dark pink.
Prince Camille de Rohan. Velvety crimson.
Ulrich Brunner. Cherry red.

Prices on Hardy Hybrid Perpetual Roses, 75c for bundle 5. $12.00 per 100; $110.00 per 1000. 25 at 100 rate, 250 at 1000 rate.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are almost a thing of the past for this year, but there were plenty of them for Thanksgiving, as well as of almost everything else. The general trade was better than most of us expected and everything cleaned up nicely. There was not much advance in price. The people wanted flowers, as usual, but were looking for something reasonable in price, and the retailers believed conditions were such that it was not wise to advance prices for one day, so they made it their business to see that they did not pay high prices for stock. No doubt they were wise, but many growers will be disappointed in their returns, although, all things considered, they fared well.

With the disappearance of mums stock was short of the demand at the first of the present week and prices were better. If all reports in our city are true we can look for better things from this time on. Hoo-Hoo.

LANSING, MICH.

The Maplewood Violet and Nursery Co. has done a fine business in nursery stock during this, its first year. Miss Chittenden says that the indications for a fine holiday crop of violets, both single and double, were never better.

W. Krieger believes in doing well what he undertakes, and this was well demonstrated in his fine stock of chrysanthemums.

Gordon Smith has completely remodeled the Riverside Greenhouses, which are now thoroughly modern and up to date.

The Capitol Avenue Greenhouse is doing its usual large business and Mr. Bissinger reports trade first-class during Thanksgiving week.

George Riley has added another house to his range and will cultivate lettuce extensively.

Mr. Bauerle, the North Lansing florist, is contemplating a large addition to his greenhouse next season. C.

State of Trade.

There is no reason to complain about Thanksgiving trade. Everybody was busy and nearly everything salable was disposed of; it is hard to say which was the best seller. Roses were plentiful, except in red. Carnations fell short of the demand. Violets were in fair supply and good demand. Mums were cleaned out and their season is practically ended in this market. Beauties partook of the general call and sold well.

The holiday spirit is now in the air and, while sales fluctuate widely, the average is good. Social events have been numerous this fall and the flower business good in consequence. Country business has been brisk and funeral flowers in great demand.

Various Notes.

The death of three prominent men in one day last week created a great demand for flowers. Holm & Olson had a heavy business at the close of the week, mostly for Masonic designs.

The weather has been ideal for the growers and they are all getting into line for a big crop at Christmas.

O. J. Olson and G. A. Clausen returned from their moose hunting trip a few days since, bringing in one fine buck and some smaller game.

Holm & Olson banqueted their employees Friday evening, November 29. There were twenty-one at the table at the Norden Club, where a fine dinner of seven courses was served. The affair was informal and highly enjoyable. O. J. Olson presided as toastmaster.

Visitor: A. Hans, representing K. J. Kuyk, Ghent, Belgium. X. Y. Z.

WASHINGTON.

There was a decided improvement in business last week.

Some fine late chrysanthemums, such as Nonin and white and yellow Jones, are to be seen in the windows.

Violets were never better and there is a good demand for them.

Gudes' are cutting some exceptionally fine Enchantress carnations.

At the Grant-Root wedding 10,000 gardenias were used, sent from Mexico.

The usual floral display was missed at the opening of Congress. Speaker Cannon issued his orders: "No flowers on the members' desks." When the new buildings, now in course of construction, and the offices for the senators and the representatives are completed, it will be more of a flower show than formerly, as each representative's and senator's office can be decorated and open to the public.

B. Eschner, of Rice & Co., called during the week. O. O.

LLOYD No Gold Brick

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Unrooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. 10 per cent discount for cash with order.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of The Florists' Review.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

NEW ORLEANS.

The Trade in the South.

With the thermometer standing at 70 degrees at night, the craft, who usually have considerable planting to do at this time, are not very jubilant. Walking through the beautiful Audubon park with Superintendent Jules Fonta, I noted scarlet geraniums, poinsettias, jasmines, and the like, in full bloom.

Chrysanthemums are passing. A big exhibition was held in Horticultural hall, and among several varieties that were new to me were Miss Minnie Baisley, Mlle. Marie Liger and Fred Dormay. The latter is of a soft creamy shade.

Among foliage plants Pandanus Sanderi gives much satisfaction, as it holds its color well and is far superior to Veitchii, which bleaches out during the hot months. In cannas, King Humbert is the best yet introduced. The grand specimens of Araucaria Bidwillii and Cedrus Deodara, so much admired, will not be disturbed in the improvements being made.

A wave of rebuilding and overhauling has swept over the city. There is scarcely one member of the craft who has not made some change of late. The trade looks healthy and progressive, from the handsome ranges of glass owned by Harry Papworth and U. J. Virgin to the pansy frames of the more modest craftsmen. They are up to date. Mr. Virgin proved this one evening when he had an immense floral horseshoe to deliver. A band was passing; out to the front went the colored deliveryman, holding aloft the floral piece, amid the cheers of the crowd.

M. Cook's Sons have just completed a forcing house, 16x48, heated with a Hitchings boiler that works like a charm.

Sweet olives, Magnolia fuscata and aspidistras are grown here in quantity. George Thomas says that the Washingtonia Sonora, Phœnix Canariensis and Chamærops macrocarpa are away ahead of any other palm for this climate. Cycas circinalis needs protection. A splendid specimen, with a spread of twenty feet, planted by Superintendent Fonta in Horticultural hall eighteen years ago, has never lost a leaf. W.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Thanksgiving business was good. Most of the stores report their sales as being ahead of last year. About the only flower that went begging was the violet, and this is the growers' own fault. They held back the violets until the day before Thanksgiving, thereby making it appear as if violets would be scarce and scaring the retailers out of taking orders.

This market is well cleaned up at present on all good stock. The chrysanthemum season is rapidly nearing the end, and the chances are that then we will get funeral work with no flowers to make it. The medium grade mums seemed to be in the best demand last week, although all the higher priced stock cleaned up well.

Roses are in good demand and are bringing good prices. The stock on this market is nothing to brag about, but it no doubt compares favorably with stock in other cities. Some good carnations are arriving daily and meet with a ready sale, bringing from 2½ cents to 3 cents. For Thanksgiving they brought as much as 4 cents. To make a long story short, all good stock sells rapidly at a good price. Galax, leucothoe, ferns, smilax, etc., are plentiful.

Various Notes.

A commendable exhibit of pompons in pink, yellow and white was made by Fred Pantke, of Grosse Pointe, at the club's show November 19.

B. Schroeter tells us that orders for Beacon, Winsor and White Enchantress cuttings are coming in with every mail. Many thousand cuttings are in the bench and the first shipment will be made next week. The stock plants at Schoeter's greenhouses look healthy and strong, and are good for many more cuttings. Winsor seems to be the strongest grower of the trio.

J. F. Sullivan displayed a beautiful lot of extra large mums in his window before Thanksgiving, and no doubt this helped him to increase his sales considerably. H. S.

Olean, N. Y.—Mrs. F. H. Johnson says there was more business than money during the last month. Besides some small receptions, there were two or three weddings, for which good decorations were ordered.

Montgomery, Ala. — Robert W. Patterson has added four houses, 30x200 feet, heated by a Kroeschell boiler. This gives him a glass area of 90,000 feet. His stock is in excellent shape. His carnations are the best seen in this section. He is also very successful with Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Rose Kate Moulton is a money maker, as grown here. A recent purchase of fifty acres of rich, loamy land will supply soil for a while.

Bargains Now

Prices reduced to the lowest point to suit the times.

Watch! Prosperity! Look!

MONEY STRINGENCY IS NOW OVER, market revised and the country is now again in normal condition. Great prosperity is now in sight for us all. Why not for you? A little fortune lies in front of your door. Grab it now, while you have a chance, and you can buy good stuff at bargain prices. Waiting means suicide.

We have Araucarias to Beat the Band

and everything else, full and plenty. Please allow me to ask one question. Don't you think a man who imports 10,000 can sell cheaper than one with 100? We just imported a fine consignment which we sell now at a bargain (a few weeks only), planted in 5-in. pots, 3 tiers, beautiful little stock, 40c. You can sell them at once.

Last Spring's Importation

Araucaria Excelsa—3-year-old, 5¼ to 5½-in. pots, 10, 12, 14 inches, 3 tiers, 50c.

Business Good.

Thanksgiving was quite satisfactory. All the florists found themselves pretty well cleaned out after the rush. Yellow chrysanthemums sold at a premium. Although florists replenished their supply of roses from the north, there were still not enough to go around. Beauties are scarce. Violets are arriving in fair quantities, but not enough to supply the market. Potted plants are moving slowly.

Joys Reorganize.

Joy & Son Co. has reorganized under the name of Joy Floral Co., with a capital stock of $40,000. T. S. Joy is retiring from active business. Tom C. Joy is president and treasurer of the new company and Michael Stauch, of late years with J. F. Wilcox, at Council Bluffs, is secretary and general manager. Their place consists of about 125,000 square feet of glass. All is in the best of repair and well stocked with roses and carnations. Enchantress, rose-pink and white, are hard to beat. Aristocrat is also showing up fine. They also grow a large stock of miscellaneous plants.

In connection with the greenhouses, which are located in East Nashville, they run a store at 601 Church street. T. C. Joy has taken the lead at this place, while Mr. Stauch has taken hold at the greenhouse end of the business. The Joy & Son Co. has been one of the most successful places in the south. S.

DENISON, TEX.

The second annual flower show of the Civic Improvement League was held here November 20 to 23, and was so successful as to arouse great enthusiasm, which culminated in the immediate formation of plans for next year's show. The auction sale of blooms, on the closing day, was well patronized and added considerably to the receipts.

Among the few members of the trade who were represented at the show were Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, Mich., whose exhibits were conspicuous for their size and elegance and captured most of the prizes in all the classes in which they were entered.

WITHOUT the REVIEW I should be obliged to go out of business, as I find it is the key to a successful trade.—FRED N. BAER, Kutztown, Pa.

How to Make Money Growing Violets.

By George Saltford. For men and women in towns, villages or on farms. Tells what is the best soil for violets, how to prepare it, planting, watering, cultivation, varieties, heating, fertilizers, insects, diseases, marketing, shipping, etc. Illustrated. 25 cents

Ornamental Gardening for Americans.

By Elias A. Long, landscape architect. A treatise on beautifying homes, rural districts and cemeteries. A plain and practical work with numerous illustrations and instructions so plain that they may be readily followed. Illustrated. Cloth. 390 pages. $1.50

Gardening for Pleasure.

By Peter Henderson. An illustrated guide to the amateur in the fruit, vegetable and flower garden, with full directions for the greenhouse, conservatory and window garden. Technical terms and phrases professional gardeners use in writing or speaking on matters relating to horticulture have been avoided as far as possible. 404 pages. Cloth. $1.50

The Horticulturist's Rule Book.

By L. H. Bailey. In no other volume can there be found such a quantity of valuable information in such a handy form for florists, fruit growers, truck gardeners and others. The chapters on insecticides and fungicides, plant diseases, seed tables and planting tables, cements, glues, etc., will all be found exceedingly valuable. Cloth. 302 pages. 75 cents

Greenhouse Management.

By Prof. L. R. Taft, of Michigan Agricultural College. A manual for florists and flower lovers on the forcing of flowers, vegetables and fruits in greenhouses, and the propagation and care of house plants. It treats of all the plants commonly cultivated by florists and amateurs, and explains in a thorough manner the methods that have been found most successful in growing them. Particular attention is paid to the growing of cut flowers, the growing of fruits under glass, etc. Of special value will be the directions for treating plants when attacked by insects and fungi. The preparation of the soil, the use of various manures, composts and fertilizers, watering, ventilating and heating receive careful and minute attention. Cloth. 400 pages. $1.50

Handbook of Practical Landscape Gardening.

By F. R. Elliott. Designed for city and suburban residences and country schoolhouses, containing designs for lots and grounds, from a lot 30x100 feet to a 40-acre plant. Cloth. $1.50

The History and Culture of Grafted Roses for Forcing.

By Alex. Montgomery, Jr. The most important contribution to the modern literature of the rose. Of much interest to every rose grower and of utmost value to growers of grafted roses. Containing practical description of the process of grafting with full details of planting and culture; also directions for treatment to carry the plants a second year. 25 cents

The Chrysanthemum.

By Arthur Herrington, formerly president of Chrysanthemum Society of America. The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. 50 cents

The Pruning Book.

By L. H. Bailey. This is the first American work exclusively devoted to pruning. It differs from most other treatises on this subject in that the author takes particular pains to explain the principles of each operation in every detail. Specific advice is given on the pruning of the various kinds of fruits and ornamental trees, shrubs and hedges. Considerable space is devoted to the pruning and training of grape vines, both American and foreign. Cloth. 530 pages. Illustrated. $1.50

Henderson's Picturesque Gardens and Ornamental Gardening.

By Charles Henderson. A volume containing half-tone illustrations of the prettiest and most famous gardens and parks of the world, vividly portraying lawn, garden and landscape effects, plant and tree groupings, decorative bedding, herbaceous gardens and borders, formal gardens, lawn gardens, Italian, Japanese and English gardens, rock gardens, wild gardens, bog gardens, subtropical gardens, sunken and terrace gardens, rosariums, hardy ferneries, arches, columns, festoons, etc., picturesquely draped with vines, as well as numerous other garden embellishments. Each illustration is described and explained. Cloth with gold. $2.50

Greenhouse Heating.

ONE BOILER OR TWO?

Is it cheaper to heat two houses, 24x120, with one large boiler or with two smaller ones? If two boilers are used, one could do the work during mild weather. G. N.

In general it is cheaper to run one boiler than two. However, in large plants where reserve power is needed or where there is danger from placing entire dependence on a single boiler, two or more are installed. As a rule, large boilers are more economical of fuel than small ones. The work of firing, the cost of installation and the efficiency in heating must all be considered in planning a heating plant. L. C. C.

WATER UNDER PRESSURE.

We have a greenhouse 32x50 feet and we cannot get the expansion tank as high as I would like it. I am told there is a way to run hot water under pressure. Will you please give me an idea of how it is done? J. W. F.

Water under pressure simply means water conducted in malleable iron, not cast-iron, pipes, under a head produced either by connecting the system with an expansion tank elevated twenty feet or more or by connecting the plant to the standpipe of a large elevated supply tank or city water main. In any case a small pipe, not over ¾-inch, is connected with the source of supply or expansion tank and the main return near the boiler, the weight of the column of water serving to give the pressure on the heating system. Such an arrangement gives hot water under a pressure which depends upon the height of the expansion tank, supply tank or city standpipe and not on the size of the pipe or of the tank. You get the same pressure from a bucket full of water elevated thirty-three feet as from a tank holding 100 barrels, if

State of Trade.

Trade has been good for the last two weeks. Thanksgiving trade was satisfactory all around, from all reports. While roses and carnations moved rather slowly in the early part of the game, there was a good demand at the last hour. But mums held full sway over everything and they are pretty well cleaned out, with the exception of a few late varieties. Roses, carnations and violets are coming on fine and since the bulk of the mums is gone there is hardly enough stock to supply the demand.

The stores are beginning to take on their Christmas garments and there are plenty of paper bells to be seen in the windows at this early date.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday, November 26. The new officers took their chairs, as follows: President, R. A. Currie; vice-president, C. P. Torrey; secretary, James McKellar; treasurer, Jacob Reichert. Messrs. McKellar, Torrey, Metzmaier, Hills and Bauman were appointed to arrange some sort of an entertainment for each meeting and there will be something doing in the near future. After the meeting adjourned the members tried their strong arms at bowling. The high scores were made by Reichert, McKellar, Currie and Metzmaier. The boys are greatly worked up on bowling and there will soon be a good team here.

Sherman Stephens has a nice bunch of Nonin coming on.

The Munk Floral Co. has cleaned up all its mums with the exception of a few Nonin.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. has a fine batch of late Bonnaffon and Nonin which will be just right.

Thanksgiving Trade.

Trade for Thanksgiving was very good. There was a fine supply of flowers on hand. Some nice mums were seen, Jeanne Nonin being fine. A few Bonnaffon were seen. Prices were satisfactory, $2 and $3 per dozen retail being realized for them. Some fine roses were available, $2 per dozen retail being the selling price. Carnations were in fine shape; 75 cents per dozen retail for them. Violets were in big demand on this date; $2 per hundred was the price they brought. The Thanksgiving hop given by the four hundred of this city November 29, called for a large quantity of stock of the first-class variety and at good prices. This, with funeral work, made last week a busy one.

Various Notes.

R. H. Woodhouse reports the mum season the best he ever had. He realized top prices for all through the season. He had fine batches of J. Nonin and Nagoya for Thanksgiving.

Napoleon Lemay met with a serious accident at his greenhouse Wednesday, November 27. While trying to tighten a steam pipe, it burst and scalded him severely. He is now improving.

August Jahn has some fine carnation seedlings. He has a large block of a white, about 10,000 plants, called Lloyd, which fills three large houses. A house containing another seedling, a good Harvard crimson, something like 1,200 plants, is in fine shape. He ships the blooms daily to the Boston market, where they realize a good price.

William Livesey had some nice Jeanne Nonin for Thanksgiving.

Fred C. Coull has left the employ of R. E. Nofftz, and is now with J. H. Cleary.

A HAPPY NEW YEAR

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

PLANT ARRANGEMENTS.

Reasons for Their Popularity.

Christmas is one of the seasons at which the supply man and the plantsman reap their greatest harvests. The retail florist is, of course, the harvest-hand and through him the public's dollars are garnered for the bright men who provide the many accessories which are an essential at this season, and for the careful growers who provide our Christmas plants.

For more than half a dozen years the trend toward plant arrangements at the holidays has been pronounced. First it was in the large cities that these gifts gained popularity, but as the supplies of Christmas plants increased, the business in them grew and broadened until now every florist, even in the little country towns, sells some sort of plant arrangement at Christmas and Easter.

A portion of the popularity of these arrangements is no doubt due to the high prices which cut flowers command at Christmas. But if the supply were equal to the demand, there would be no advance in the price of cut stock. Therefore the plant arrangement has its place as furnishing stock for sales which could not be made if the trade were dependent solely upon cut flowers. Cut flowers cannot be manufactured, but some sort of a plant arrangement can be turned out, no matter how meager the material.

To the retailer who finds it impossible to make his usual margin of profit on cut flower sales at the holidays, the plant arrangement has also the virtue of affording an even better profit than is made at other seasons. Therefore it is but natural that retailers should push the plants, knowing that they can sell without much trouble all the cut flowers the season is likely to produce.

Lorraine Leads.

As a Christmas plant there is nothing which beats the Lorraine begonia when the demand is for nice work and no guarantee of enduring quality is required. It has been the experience of a good many retailers that Lorraine drops its flowers quickly when taken into a dwelling and one leading retail florist, who deals on the plane of strictest truthfulness, for several seasons has instructed his salesmen, when the customer asks of Lorraine, "Will it keep?" to say nothing more than "At least as long as cut flowers."

It will be noted that the Lorraine is part of all the best plant arrangements illustrated in this issue. These are from photographs made at Christmas, 1906, the best of them at the store of W. J. Smyth in Chicago. The smaller pieces were photographed at a store where trade of less expensive tastes is catered to.

Hampers the Most Popular.

Possibly the most popular plant arrangement to sell in a first-class store is the hamper of mixed material. If well done, these sell by the dozens where $5 to $10 is an ordinary price for a customer to spend for a Christmas gift.

The gem of all the arrangements shown in this issue is a square hamper of wide plaits, silvery in hue and lined with tin to prevent the moisture coming through. In this was planted a fine specimen of Lorraine, with supporting stakes removed so that the plant had no unnatural support. The cover of the hamper carried a big bow and was held erect by the strands of ribbon which encompassed the plant and which were tied at the front of the hamper, as shown, in a big loose bow. The ribbon was pale green gauze and the combination of colors of the silvery hamper, the darker green of the foliage, the pink of the flower and the tint of the ribbon was exquisite.

Christmas Basket of Lorraine, Farleyense and Other Plants.

Large Basket Arrangements.

The two large baskets were made to sell at about $15 each. One contained, besides the Lorraines, a small azalea, some cyclamens, a primula or two and a fine plant of Adiantum Farleyense, with some nephrolepis ferns. The basket was red and white, round in shape but planted to make its best appearance from one side.

The other basket was square, with the handles at two diagonally opposite corners, so that the basket really was diamond-shape; the colors, red and white, braided. The variety of stock in this case was even greater, poinsettias and an araucaria being added, and a small kentia at the back, for the basket was arranged to make its best show from the side upon which the Lorraine begonia drooped. Of course, there was a ribbon.

The Large Hamper.

The large hamper shown in this issue was in Christmas red and one of the handsomest things the season produced. The long wicker hamper was in ox-blood red and the color was further heightened by the row of poinsettias planted at the back and by the Jerusalem cherry in each end of the hamper. In the center of the basket there was an azalea, a Lorraine begonia and some primulas, the space at the back between the single stems of poinsettia being occupied by Whitmani ferns, which added much to the effect. The ribbon used, not too profusely, was wide and holly red. The cover was rounded, not flat, and was fastened to lean forward just the least bit.

The Straw Hat.

In a number of stores last Christmas a popular seller was the straw hat shown in another of the illustrations in this issue. It was used as a receptacle for a variety of plants, but for none did it serve as well as for the Lorraine begonia.

There is no high art about this. It was simply a case of taking a small begonia, covering its pan with white crepe paper, setting it in the hat, tying the ribbons to the top of the stake in the begonia, and sending it out on orders. In one store where these were offered at $3 each, hardly anything else was sold until the supply of hats was exhausted.

Boxwood.

It is a long time since any green has been offered which has met with the quick success of boxwood. In its cut state it was regarded as a find by the retailers of keen perception who first got hold of it, and it was only until another season before the wholesalers nearly all were offering it by the pound, or by the case, and it was in general use in floral designs of all sorts.

As a pot plant boxwood has had an equal success for many uses, but in no form does it sell more readily, or bring a better profit, than as a Christmas plant. The green harmonizes splendidly with the holly red which is demanded by most Christmas buyers. A plant which costs from 25 cents to 35 cents, the pot covered with a red Porto Rican mat and tied with a big bow of red ribbon, easily becomes worth $3. In the case of the illustration a scarlet trumpet of red immortelles tied with red cord was added at a cost of 75 cents and hardly seemed to be justified in the minds of the Christmas shoppers.

In this case the mat was red and the ribbon of a darker shade, but an excellent result is secured by planting the boxwood in one of the mat-green, round jars offered by the supply houses and by tying a ribbon in the branches of the plant, but rather low down.

Cheap Christmas Plants.

Without doubt the majority of retail florists, especially those in the country towns who grow their own supplies, find cyclamens and Jerusalem cherries much more salable than the expensive plants handled in the leading city stores. Such stock only needs a pot cover and a band of ribbon with a bow. The combinations which may be made are infinite, but green is the safer color. These plants may be made up to sell for as little as $1 and return an excellent profit where the delivery expense does not have to be considered.

Boxwood in Red Porto Rican Mat.

Single Plants.

Among the leaders for Christmas sales are azaleas, araucarias and, of course, poinsettias. The best poinsettia is the pan of several low plants with wide scarlet bracts. All these need is a pot cover, preferably dark green crepe paper tied with red ribbon. Tall plants, one in a pot, can only be sold to discriminating customers when made up in the rather high priced hampers. Azaleas, too, need only a pot cover. The araucaria sells best with some bows of red ribbon in the branches, or perhaps some little Christmas bells. Low, broad plants of course are best.

Delivery a Big Item.

One of the advantages which the country florist has over his city brother is in the item of delivery. The country customer in many cases takes his purchase with him, but in the city nearly everything must be delivered. One of the leading retailers in Chicago has said that it does not pay him to make a sale at Christmas or any other holiday which does not give him a profit of at least 75 cents. He estimates that the extra expense incidental to the large number of long distance deliveries which must be made within a very few hours on Christmas morning takes away all profit on smaller sales.

On another page in this issue are pictures of some odds and ends which return a good profit to all florists where delivery charges are not an obstacle. One is simply a small Asparagus plumosus in a red straw pot cover with a ribbon looped through the handles. Another is an enameled twig basket with a cocos and some small ferns. Another is a raffia basket, with three or four sprays of holly. A little more pretentious affair is a larger raffia basket with a cover. Almost any small plant could be sold in this. The lichen-covered Dutch shoes and an innumerable list of such oddities may be had of all supply houses and will sell in large numbers.

CHRISTMAS GREENS.

Lycopodium, commonly known as bouquet green or ground pine, used extensively for wreaths and festoons, looked likely to fall shorter this year than at any time in the history of its use as a decoration. Stringent game laws which have taken effect in the northern states since last year—shortening of the hunting season to one month instead of three—threatened not only to reduce the output this year but to do so in future seasons. Reports from the regions in which lycopodium is found told a tale of an unprecedented influx of hunters all through the short open season. Modern firearms and their far-reaching bullets, together with the greatly increased number of sportsmen in the woods coming in conflict with the pickers of lycopodium, at first caused the natives to see the wisdom of staying within their domiciles during the hunting season. These conditions promised to reduce to an alarming degree the supply of ground pine, for weather conditions are seldom favorable for picking after the influx of hunters has ebbed away. It is true that the Indians are less fearful of the hunters' bullets than their white brother, and were it not for their love of lethargy and disinclination to work so long as they have any money whatever, Chicago jobbers could safely depend on them for an adequate lycopodium supply.

A Basket of Christmas Plants Arranged by W. J. Smyth, Chicago.

And in the last fortnight the high price caused by the prospect of scarcity so stimulated the pickers that the result has been unlooked for heavy receipts and a falling market. Green now is abundant.

Holly promises to be in fair supply, though it is reported that many sections in Tennessee and Mississippi are making a poor showing. Growers are fast learning the necessity of shipping only such holly as produces bright red berries, for there is neither demand nor price for the other kind.

While mistletoe is always popular, the demand for this parasitic plant is limited. Dealers have learned by experience that it pays them to practice extreme caution in the purchase of this decoration, and to buy only of experienced and responsible shippers. Poor packing and a lax observance of weather conditions often result in a total loss, and more than once big consignments of mistletoe shipped on speculation have been sold for charges. Only well-berried mistletoe is in demand, and, like holly, this decoration must come up to a high standard of quality to be marketable. Mistletoe is said to be abundant this season.

While a considerable quantity of green sheet moss is used for pot coverings, store windows and hanging baskets, its use as a strictly holiday decoration, like that of the southern, or Florida, gray moss, is not so profuse as the holly and green, and therefore does not play an important part in the jobbing trade about Christmas time.

But chamærops palm crowns and palm leaves have decided advantages over some of the green decorations in that their keeping qualities are superior. The leaves, however, must be placed in water or wet moss to avert wilting. But despite these advantages the demand for palm crowns is almost gone. Their unwieldy qualities, which make them difficult of shipment, have tended to destroy the interest formerly taken in them by jobbers.

Wild smilax is not exactly a Christmas green, nor do magnolia wreaths, or galax, or laurel festooning have a great sale, although each is a factor. For fine trade boxwood wreaths sell well and this is an article likely to stay in the hands of the florists for some time, as the supply is too limited and the price too high to attract the attention of the provision people, whose incursions into the field in recent years have done so much to destroy the profit in Christmas greens, because quality has been a second consideration and cheapness the first thing sought.

FASTENING WALL DECORATIONS.

In decorations where it is desired to fasten smilax or asparagus strings, or ribbons, to walls or ceilings where there is no woodwork, how may this be done without marking or marring the paper or paint? H. F. C.

Such a question as yours often confronts the decorator. I presume you are referring to house decorating. There is in almost every room in a house some woodwork where you can get a hold, although it may be some distance away from where you are decorating. Of course, if there is none at all you will have to get a hold on the wall or ceiling somewhere.

The extreme corners of a room are a good place to fasten a wire or string. A strong pin or tack driven in the corner will leave no noticeable mark when removed, as paper, paint or tapestry usually meets in the corners. Sometimes I have found it necessary to draw a strong wire from the fixture in the center of a room to the side, or rather to the meeting place of the wall and ceiling. From this wire you can suspend green, doves, bells, a canopy, etc.

A picture molding in a room also affords a good place to fasten green. Some time ago I had occasion to decorate a sort of bay window with southern smilax. The window was off a large reception hall and the ceiling of the window was somewhat lower than that of the room proper. As the finest of tapestry was used on the wall and the lady of the house was standing close by, I had to be exceedingly careful. To begin with, I stretched some strong silkaline from the curtain poles in the window to the picture molding running around the room. This gave me something on which to fasten the smilax to form a sort of canopy at the top of the window. Then it was an easy matter to hang the green from the curtain rods down to the floor, forming a background. To fasten some smilax at the side of the room just at the entrance to the window and over the entrance, I drove a few small tacks into the top of the molding and tied the stems of the southern smilax to them; it, being stiff, held itself in place.

Very often one has to go far out of his way to find a place to fasten a thin wire or strong string from which to hang garlands or ribbon.

Push pins with the glass handle are very handy to use in decorating. The hole that they leave when removed is so small as to be almost invisible. You will have to resort to some such scheme if you desire to fasten a few flowers or a bow to the side of a wall, unless you suspend these from the ceiling.

Where a room rounds off instead of coming to a sharp corner where the ceiling and wall meet, it is often a hard matter to find a hold. Usually this curve in the ceiling or wall is set off with a molding and this latter affords a place to fasten something. In a case of this kind, if you want to decorate the ceiling, unless you can drive a tack in each corner and form a sort of network of thin wire, you will have to extend some stiff wire from the chandelier and suspend your decorations from this.

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

The Song of the Violet.

This arrangement was one of the bright ideas of Charles Henry Fox, Philadelphia, whose work at the Sign of the Rose has been appearing in halftone reproduction in the Review for some weeks. The arrangement was to cover a baby grand piano, and was photographed as designed by Mr. Fox for a musicale at a fashionable home where Mme. Nordica sang "The Song of the Violet." The space occupied was six feet long by four feet wide. The hamper in the background was filled solidly with violets. The violin and manuscript of music rested against the hamper, the six favors being large clusters of violets and orchids.

ENGLISH IVY.

English ivy is not perfectly hardy in all sections of this country. This is proved by the fact that during several successive winters many thousands have been killed outright in certain sections of several northeastern states.

One of the Ways Lorraine was Sent Out Last Christmas.

The Song of the Violet.

Notwithstanding such happenings, I do not believe in covering ivy to the extent of excluding the light of day from it absolutely, as is sometimes done by the use of burlap. I rather think that such coddling weakens it, and renders the plants incapable of surviving or of clinging to the wood after the covering is removed and they are exposed to light in early spring. If, instead of being covered so closely, the plants are partially shaded by means of spruce or hemlock branches, and a good, heavy mulching of manure, in a half rotted state, is placed over the roots, there will not be so many dead plants in the spring. A few desirable sorts are: Cypripedium insigne, C. Sallieri, C. Sedenii, C. villosum and C. Harrisianum; Cœlogyne cristata; Dendrobium nobile and D. splendidissimum; Lycaste Skinneri, L. Deppii and L. aromatica; Lælia anceps, L. autumnalis, L. flava, L. acuminata and L. albida; Epidendrum vitellinum majus; Cattleya citrina; Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, O. tigrinum, O. ornithorhynchum and O. incurvum; Zygopetalum Mackaii and Z. crinitum; Sobralia macrantha and S. xantholeuca; Sophronitis grandiflora; Maxillaria picta and M. Harrisoniæ; Cymbidium eburneum, C. Lowianum and C. Mastersii. C. W.

SNAPDRAGONS AND STOCKS.

When is the proper time to sow snapdragons and ten weeks stocks, and what is the proper time to plant them in the bench to bloom for Memorial day? Are these usually profitable? W. C. H.

Snapdragons should be sown without delay, if wanted in flower in good shape for Memorial day. A better plan would be to take cuttings from the sides of the flowering shoots of any plants you may now be growing and root in sand in a moderate bottom heat. A bench which will root carnations will be equally good for antirrhinums. Pot off as soon as rooted and plant in the benches when nicely established in the pots. Adopt the same plan with any seedlings raised.

It is too early to sow seeds of ten weeks stock. The middle to the end of February will be about right, if you use White Column and a good selected strain of ten weeks. Pot off the seedlings as advised for antirrhinums and bench before they become matted in the pots. A certain percentage always come single. Pull them out as soon as they show themselves, as they are of little value.

A temperature of 50 degrees at night is sufficiently high for either of these plants. A warmer house would be unsuitable. As to whether they are profitable crops, much depends on the quality of the stock you grow and your facilities for selling it. If you have a good local trade, you should have no trouble in disposing of them. It will be better to grow separate colors than mixtures. In stocks, white, lavender, pink and flesh are always popular, although for Memorial day scarlet and crimson would take well. In snapdragons, white, yellow, pink and scarlet are suitable.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Bulb Stock.

While a few La Reine and Van Tholl tulips appear on the market at Christmas each year, they are invariably short-stemmed and would have been much better left until a month later. The same holds good of the trumpet narcissi, for while the French Trumpet Major may be had of fair quality, the Dutch stock is too late. We doubt if the forcing of these bulbs for Christmas pays, even at somewhat enhanced prices; better far to have them from the middle of January onwards, when decently long stems are to be had and better prices realized.

For the commercial grower, La Reine is the forcing tulip par excellence and is rarely overdone. Its delicate pink color during the winter months is pleasing, more so than when it later assumes its natural pure white shade. Successional batches of this tulip should be housed every ten days. Do not bring them in unless the plants are well started. Keep them dark for a few days, to assure presentably long stems. It is rather early yet to force Cottage Maid, Keizerskroon, Proserpine, Yellow Prince and other varieties. They also will sell better later in the winter.

Some of the Dutch hyacinths will now be well sprouted and a few can be introduced to heat. Draw them up well before exposing them to the light. While you have them in the dark, be careful not to pour water in the center of the growths or the tender flower spikes may decay.

In addition to Trumpet Major narcissus, Golden Spur should now be ready for housing if placed in flats. Princeps also comes in early, but while cheap, is a rather flimsy flower.

Roman hyacinths want little forcing now. They are better opened in a cool house. One about 50 degrees at night is warm enough. Paper Whites can stand a little more forcing, but should not be kept in a warm house after the flowers start to open.

Weather reports indicate that winter set in over a considerable section of the continent early in December. In the colder states, if the stock of bulbous plants is plunged outdoors and has not yet been protected, no time should be lost in affording the necessary covering. It is true we may have spells of open weather, but do not be lured by these mild intervals.

When the ground is hard frozen is a suitable time to apply a mulching of leaves or coarse strawy manure to bulb beds outdoors. Do not make the covering a heavy one. The mulch is less for protection than it is for preventing the heaving of the ground after thaws.

Azaleas.

Christmas will soon be here and it behooves us to look carefully after our azaleas wanted at that season. Some of the varieties, such as Hexe and Deutsche Perle, will flower without hard forcing, but other sorts will take considerable pushing to time them rightly. Remove to a cooler house any which you are sure will be flowered sufficiently. Give the more backward ones frequent sprayings and a night temperature of 65 degrees.

Poinsettias.

Poinsettias are the most brilliant of Christmas decorative plants. Pans of well grown plants, which should be stocky and furnished with foliage to the ground, are good sellers. If your foliage is not what it might be, mix a few nephrolepis ferns in among the poinsettias, or any other common fern you may have in small pots.

As the bracts should now be pretty well developed, gradually lower the temperature to 52 to 55 degrees at night. This will harden the plants somewhat and they will not mind the change, if not too sudden. Do not give them a lower temperature than this, or a loss of foliage will be the result. Water carefully and especially avoid an oversupply. Try to keep your foliage good, and even if the bracts are not large the plants will sell.

Berried Plants.

Ardisia crenulata is probably the best of the Christmas berried plants. It takes several years to grow a salable plant, so we never find an oversupply in the market. The berries hang on the plant almost a year. The leaves are tough and the ardisia will stand much ill treatment without resenting it. They do well in a cool house now, but can be grown warmer while ripening the berries.

The Jerusalem cherry, as Solanum capsicastrum is called, is an easily grown berried plant which can be sold at a popular price at the holidays. Let the plants have plenty of water and grow them cool. Christmas and Chili peppers have some call at Christmas, but are less desirable than ardisias and solanums, and do not make nearly so good pot plants.

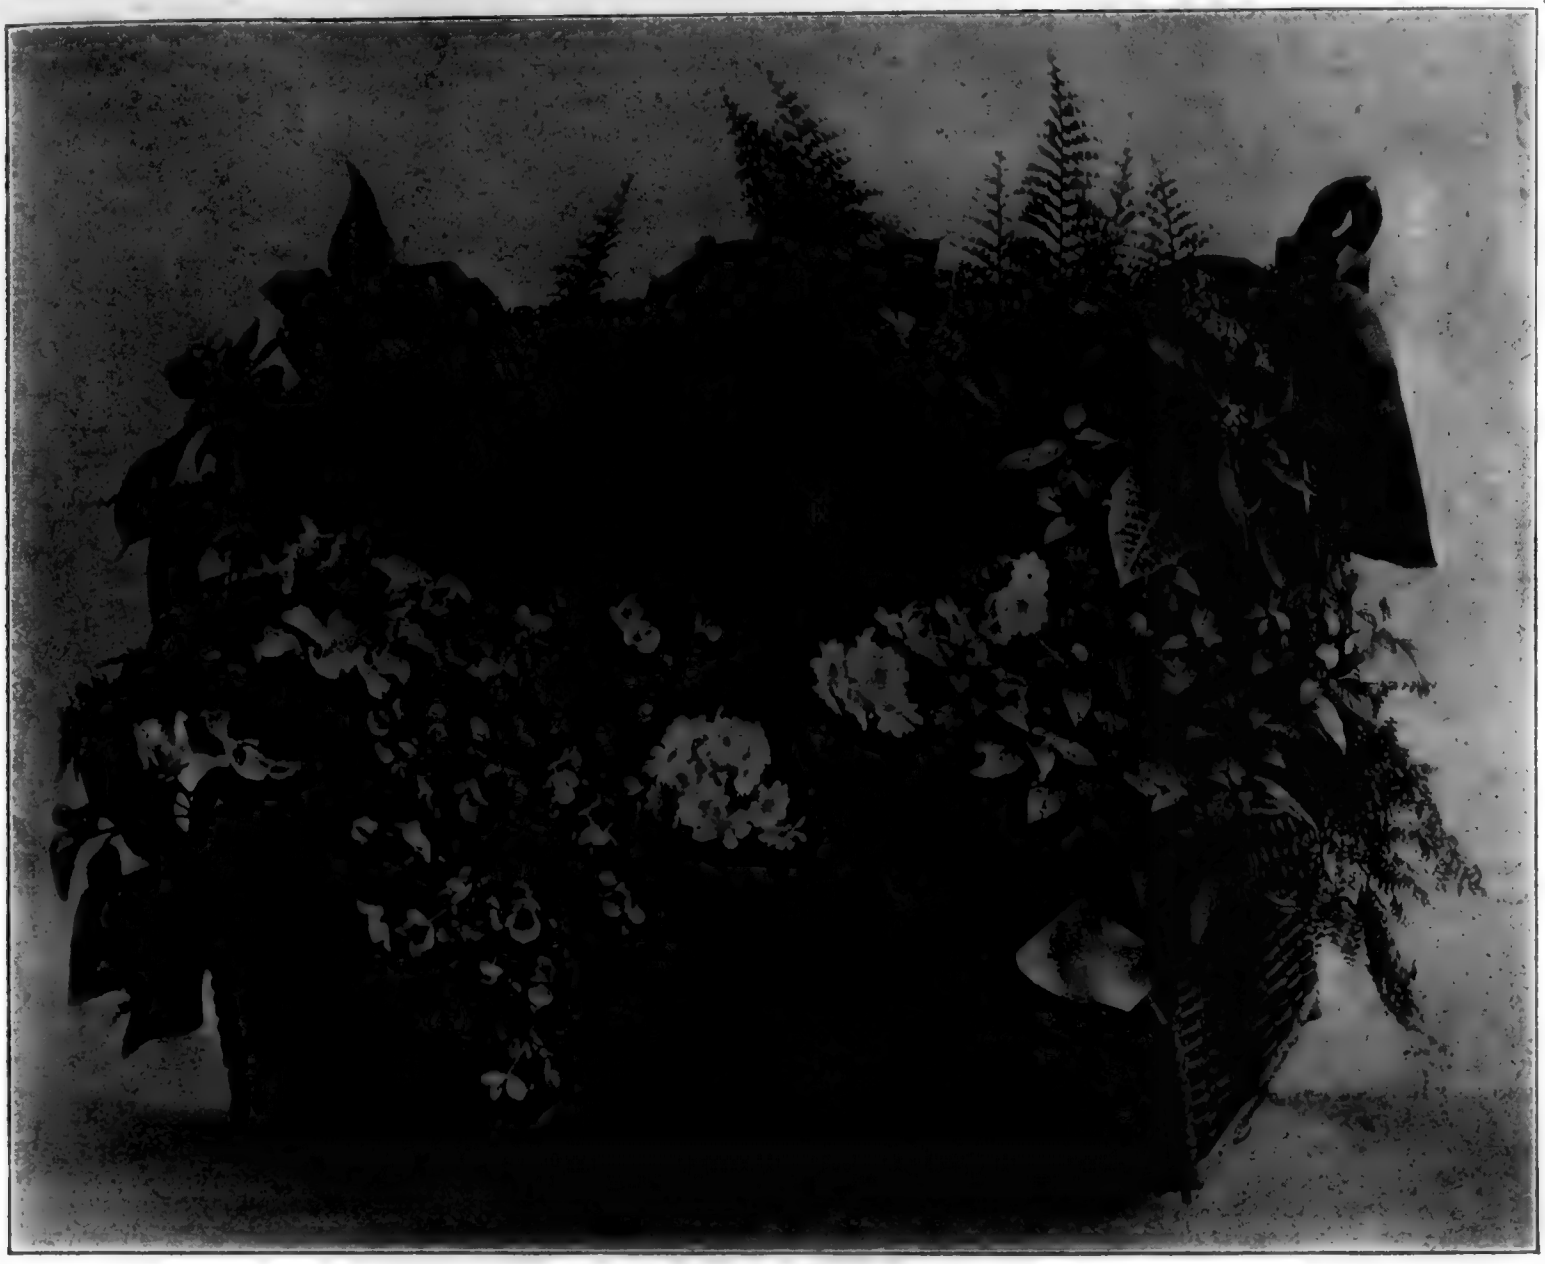
English hollies are now arriving and some of them are finely berried. The best are grown in small tubs, but some are shipped with a ball, and if potted or tubbed at once and kept well watered, will soon look as bright as the established ones. The same applies to Aucuba Japonica, Skimmia Japonica and other berry-bearing shrubs, which are mostly imported at this time and make desirable stock for the festive season. These imported shrubs, if they can be kept in a cold greenhouse a few days before going to the store, will wear better.

Primulas.

Chinese primroses, especially of scarlet and crimson shades, make pretty Christmas plants. They should now be in a light and airy, but not too sunny, house, kept at 45 to 50 degrees at night. A warmer house will draw them too much. These primulas must not be overwatered and should never be sprayed overhead. Primula obconica, apart from its poisonous effects on some people, is a useful, cheap holiday plant. The brighter shades will sell the most freely at this season. Its persistent flowering qualities make it specially valuable as a house plant. We now hear little of the so-called buttercup primrose and the baby primrose, P. Forbesi, has a decreasing band of admirers. The newer P. Kewensis, of a golden yellow color, promises, however, to be a useful winter-flowering plant, although it is not at its best until the end of January. All the primulas need cool, airy treatment and a dry atmosphere.

Cyclamen.

Cyclamens always prove one of the best winter-flowering plants for store sales, and any who have a batch with at least a few flowers open on each for Christmas will easily dispose of them. Like primulas, cyclamens dislike coddling. To keep them stocky grow them cool and airy. The sun we get at this season is beneficial to them. Do not attempt the forcing of backward plants. You will only ruin them.



How are next year's seedlings coming on? Do not allow them to become pot-bound, nor should they be left in their flats too long. They can be grown a few degrees warmer than the flowering size plants.

Lorraine Begonias.

That popular begonia, Lorraine, is now somewhat overdone and does not sell so well as a few years ago. At that time few had mastered the growing of them and, while everyone cannot handle them creditably today, many more growers are able to produce fairly good plants. In common with all flowering stock needed for sales, the temperatures in the houses should be reduced or the plants moved to cooler quarters. Fifty degrees at night is now ample for Lorraines, although 10 to 15 degrees higher suits them better prior to the flowering season. If you have a number of small plants which do not amount to much individually, make them up several together in small pans. Lorraine begonias like full sunshine and should not be sprayed overhead. Fumigation with tobacco stems will ruin them unless lightly done. None of the begonias will stand heavy fumigation without loss of flowers.

A Raffia Hamper and the Leichen Covered Wooden Shoes.

Christmas Hamper in Which a Great Variety of Stock was Used.

Brief Reminders.

Dicentra spectabilis should be potted soon after arrival. Keep in a coldframe for a time.

Move out into a cooler house any of the azaleas being forced for Christmas, as they come into flower.

Get any left over bulbs into the ground at once, before frost seals it up tight.

A little stevia will come in useful now. Keep most of the plants as cool as possible without freezing, and move a few boxes or pots into a warmer house every week.

As the flowers develop on Romans and Paper Whites, move into a cool house. Have you a good batch coming on all right for Christmas?

Keep berried solanums, ardisias and Christmas peppers quite cool. All are very useful Christmas berried plants.

Have plenty of covering ready for outdoor plants needing it. Use it as soon as the ground freezes solid.

Feed the Lorraine begonias. Give a few ties where required. Less heat is needed after the flowers start to open.

VIOLETS FLOWERING POORLY.

I am growing Princess of Wales and California violets, but as yet have been getting few blooms. The plants appear to be in good condition and have plenty of buds scattered, but they are slow to develop. I used one load of rotted manure to four of sod soil. I keep the temperature down to 40 degrees at night, but it runs up pretty high these bright days. What do you think is the trouble?

I figure to grow sweet peas early in the spring in the violet house, planting between the rows. What time should I plant so as not to interfere with the violets and what are the best pinks and whites? E. W. G.

Very likely the trouble with your violets is that they were lifted too early. Many florists and gardeners fail with singles through planting them at the same time as the doubles, which is entirely wrong. They should not be housed until they have had a good freezing and if you leave them out another year until the middle of October, your trouble will probably disappear. Your temperature and treatment are all right. To improve your crop for the balance of the winter, allow the plants to have a good freeze. Never mind if some of the tender leaves are destroyed. Let the temperature go down to 28 degrees. This will help to check leaf growth and promote floriferousness.

The single violet season will be over about April 1. Sow sweet peas early in January. The seed may be placed either in flats of fine, sandy loam or in small pots and later transferred to the beds or benches. This will be found better than sowing directly among the violets. By the time your violets are over, your peas will be starting to yield something, and it may be necessary to remove one row to give them a chance. A temperature of 40 degrees at night is all right for violets, but the peas prefer it 5 to 8 degrees higher, especially as they near the flowering stage. The best forcing varieties are Mont Blanc, pure white, and Earliest of All, or Christmas Pink, pink and white. C. W.

FAILURE WITH SINGLE VIOLETS.

Will you please tell me why my Princess violets do not flower better? I have a bed 6x75. Two-thirds of this is Marie Louise and the other third Princess. Both were housed at the same time, September 15, in well enriched, loose, black soil. The doubles are doing finely, but the singles have very few flowers, and I think too many leaves. The latter look very green and healthy. Is it possible that the soil is too rich? It is my first year with the singles and I supposed they would take the same soil as Marie Louise. A good many of the few flowers that come have very short stems, not more than two inches, though the flower itself is large and of good color. H. A. P.

Your failure with Princess of Wales violets is not at all exceptional. It is due to a cause which some of our best growers have had to learn from experience, namely, too early housing. Double violets require to be lifted early; in fact, many growers keep them under glass all the time, but the singles need radically different treatment. They should never be planted indoors before the early part of October, and from the middle to the latter part of the month is to be preferred. A good freezing is required to stop leaf growth; otherwise you will get an abundance of foliage at the expense of flowers. A temperature of 10 to 12 degrees below freezing will put the necessary check on growth and not in the least injure the plants.

Many people are unaware of how hardy Princess of Wales violets are. Some plants we left out last fall came through the winter without any protection, although exposed to temperatures 10 to 15 degrees below zero. One grower at least, to our knowledge, leaves a large bed out all winter, merely covering with salt hay after the ground freezes, and gets a splendid crop late in the spring.

The only way you can now benefit your single violets will be to allow them to freeze moderately in the house in order to check the leaf growth. A little frost will not hurt your Marie Louise, but no doubt you could place some covering over them to make sure that they are not damaged. Try this plan and you will find you will get more flowers, but not as fine nor as many as if your plants had been left outdoors a month later.

Next season do not house your singles until after a good frost.

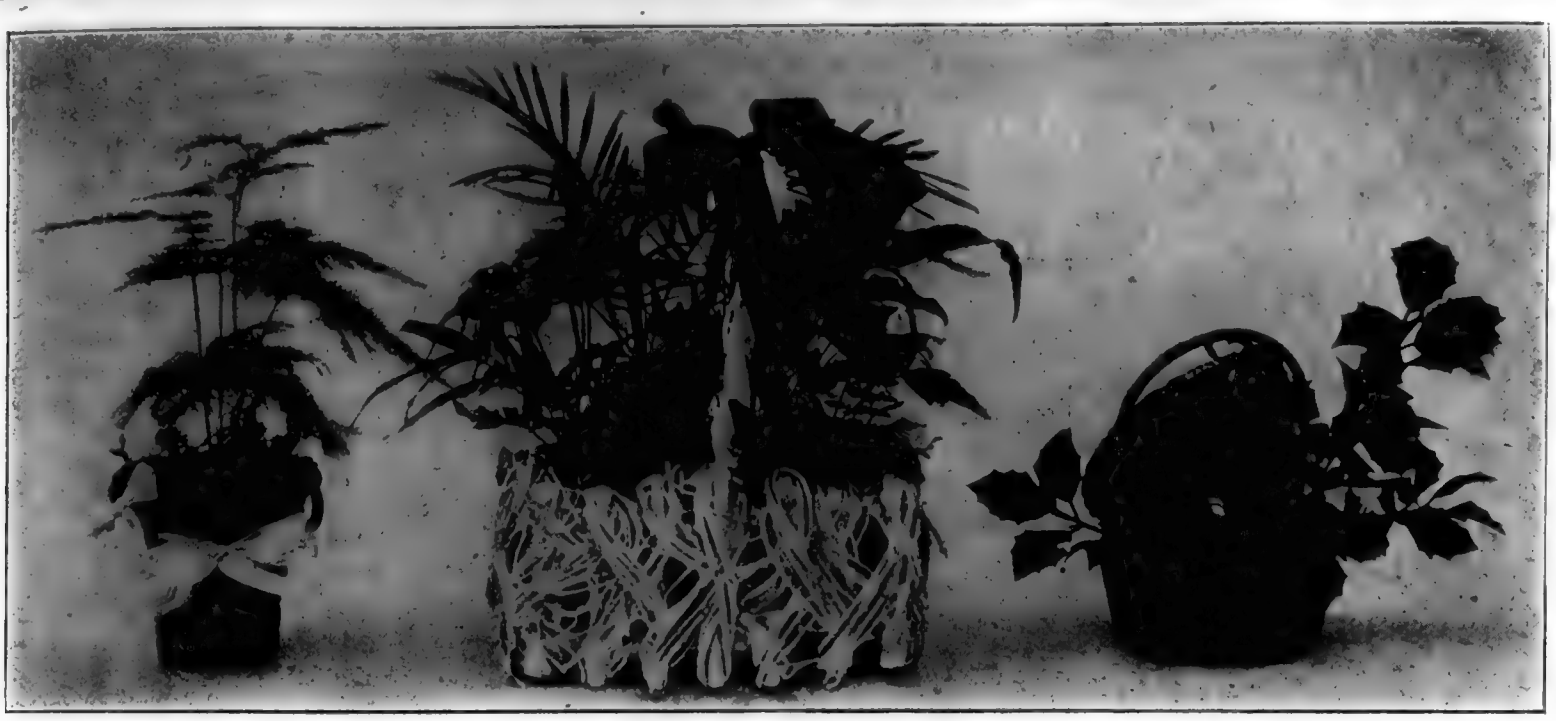
A VISIT TO MADISON, N. J.

Mr. Totty's Place.

C. H. Totty is doing a large and increasing business in chrysanthemums. His trade, in fact, has grown so much of late that he finds he will need to restrict himself to the queen of autumn or build more glass. Many of the best single-stems had been cut for Madison and other shows at the time of my visit, but enough remained to satisfy anyone that the quality would be hard to beat. Among the new varieties I was particularly attracted by Mrs. W. Wells, a bright bronzy-orange flower, similar in form to Old Gold, but a larger and better bloom. Mme. Simon Jossier is a good incurved white, but the gem of this color was W. Moir, with which Mr. Totty won the gold medal at the C. S. A. show in New York for the best novelty. Dubuisson Foubert, tawny yellow, was unique and of a pleasing color. Of the older varieties Mrs. D. V. West seemed to be weak-necked. Miss Miriam Hankey was the best in the pink class. Lady Hopetoun was also good. Dakoma, bronze yellow, had the earmarks of a good commercial variety.

Singles are being brought into prominence at Madison, and Mr. Totty has a fine collection of them. Some of the best were Kitty Bourne, Pretoria, Annie Holden, Kathleen Bunyard, Golden Star and Lily Beard in yellows; Irene Cragg, Gertrude and Nancy Perkins, whites; Nellie Coppard, Mrs. E. Roberts, Ladysmith, Mrs. Untermyer (new) and J. T. Angus, pink; Crown Jewel, bronze; Mrs. T. C. Warden, sulphury white; Miss Baillie, Mary Richardson, salmon red; Hilda, deep orange. All these singles are much better grown undisbudded, and nearly all make excellent pot plants.

Florham Farms.



At Florham Farms we found A. Herrington, who escorted us over his immense department. At the commercial range, the large house, 40x200, of mums was largely cut over, but sufficient remained to show the high quality of the blooms. Roses and carnations looked well in several houses. Cattleyas, Trianæ, labiata, Mossiæ and other standard varieties, filled several large houses. Of Cypripediums Leeanum and insigne, Mr. Herrington has undoubtedly the finest houses in the country. The wonderful vigor of the plants is quite a revelation. As many as 10,000 flowers of C. insigne are cut in a season from one house. Calanthe Veitchii filled a long lean-to house. Bulbs were a foot long in some cases, and spikes of great vigor, as fine as I had ever seen. A span house formerly occupied by Gros Colman grapes is now planted with peas, beans and tomatoes. Colmans at 50 cents per pound at Christmas were not a paying crop; hence the change. Some Muscats still hung in the house devoted to them, and were of a rich amber color. The early grape house will be started about December 1. In nectarines, Early Rivers, Cardinal and Lord Napier are grown.

A drive through the attractive and fertile park brought us to the private block of glass. Here are three divisions of Adiantum Farleyense, much in demand for large table decorations, and splendidly grown. Three houses are devoted to melons, Royal Jubilee being the favorite sort. Gardenias occupy one house, Cattleya Trianæ, newly imported, another; the immense specimens of azaleas some nine to ten feet across still another. In another house some specimen plants of double and single chrysanthemums were in evidence. The roomy palm house contained some superb specimens. A pair of Kentia Belmoreana are probably the finest in the country, and will soon be too large for their present quarters.

The numerous specimen bay trees, Chamærops humilis and other plants used for terrace decoration were being housed at the time of our visit. Considerable changes are in progress in the way of terrace extensions and avenue improvements, which will add to the attractiveness of this fine estate.

At Mr. Duckham's.

At the Mrs. D. Willis James estate, where W. Duckham presides, most of the finest single-stem chrysanthemums had been cut, but the quality of those remaining was first-class. A nice collection of singles were noted in pots. The carnation house contained some really magnificent flowers, Beacon, Robert Craig, Enchantress, Patton, White Perfection and Britannia, the champion new English scarlet, being the varieties grown. Britannia showed up finely. So far it is of dwarfer habit than Beacon and Robert Craig, but it carries an immense scarlet flower and will be heard from. Cosmos Lady Lenox, being extensively shown in the east just now, originated here and is a fine thing. In the orchid house a bank of Dendrobium Phalænopsis was attractive. The cattleyas looked well, some specially good C. gigas being in baskets near the ridge. Other divisions were occupied by roses and various decorative plants.

WATERING AND VENTILATING.

From this time onward we usually experience a good deal of dark, sunless weather, often accompanied by fogs and rain. Greater care is now needed in watering all classes of plants, no matter whether in benches, flats or pots. There are still not a few growers who imagine that a daily dose of aqua pura is needed by every plant. These men are never successful florists. Watering is a good deal of a science and the man who has mastered it can be relied upon to produce good stock. At this season plants dry out much more slowly and the hose in careless hands speedily produces sogginess at the roots, with the inevitable sickly plants as testimony to its abuse. It is much better now, with all plants, to give too little water rather than too much. Little harm will be done by allowing pot plants to become fairly dry before watering them. Hard-wooded stock will not stand absolute dryness, and more careful watering is needed in the case of ericas, acacias, azaleas and others of this class, than with soft-wooded subjects, such as calceolarias, cinerarias, primulas and cyclamens.

We are not advocating anything approaching dusty dryness at the roots, but experience will teach anyone that the plants thrive the best in pots which are never allowed to become wet and slimy on the surface. Overwatering causes sourness and this in turn ruins root action.

In benches, as with pots, too much root moisture must now be avoided. When you water let it not be in driblets, but thoroughly, and until you can see it running through the bottoms of the benches. Do not water again until the surface looks a little dry. If the soil has become baked, give a scratching over before watering again. In syringing choose the mornings of bright days, in order to have the foliage dry before nightfall. Keep some ventilation on the houses on every possible occasion. Avoid anything in the nature of coddling. Do not for one moment imagine that any of your plants will long grow and thrive without some fresh, pure air. As well expect human beings to flourish in a house in which the windows are never opened. In mild weather a little night air should be left on the houses. If you keep a night fireman of ordinary intelligence, he will speedily learn your wishes in this respect.

CARNATION NOTES—EAST.

Cutting the Blooms.

Cutting the blooms may appear to some as a matter easily disposed of or not worthy of much thought, when in reality a great deal depends on its being properly done. It is the starting point of the divine flower's career as a messenger of expression, and as it is a well known fact that many people hesitate to send cut flowers to the sick or convalescent for fear of their fading all too soon, it is decidedly in our interest to spare no effort to send the messenger on its journey equipped to carry the sentiment to be expressed.

We must not only use care in bringing the blooms to the highest quality possible, but so handle them at harvest time that, whatever their mission, it may not be in vain.

As stated in last week's notes, cutting is best done in early morning, before the sun is high enough to affect the inside temperature to any great extent, or late in the afternoon, when similar conditions exist.

In no case should blooms be taken from plants suffering for water. You may reason it out that such will revive after standing in water for a time, and perhaps they will, to a certain extent, but the question is, how will they stand up against the real thing?

While good results may be obtained by breaking in place of cutting the stems, it does not necessarily follow that it is the better method.

At some seasons, under certain conditions, the stems will break like glass and it will be noticed that quite frequently the break comes at a joint, just above the leaves, furnishing a pocket for the lodgment of moisture, but there is no certainty about these matters. By using a sharp knife—be sure it is sharp—you are able to make a smooth, slanting cut at any point, with absolute certainty, and with the assurance, too, that the stem is in better shape to conduct water and the stump to shed it and heal than in the case of its having been broken.

It is advisable to remove the two lower pairs of leaves from the stems, but before doing this, allow them to stand in water for a time, as under no circumstances should there be any unnecessary exposure of freshly cut stem ends to the air.

Provide a generous supply of vases. Use fresh water, about the temperature of the house from which the blooms were cut. Avoid putting too many in a vase. Stand them where the temperature will not vary much from 45 degrees and where they will be out of drafts, but nevertheless where the air is not stagnant. Geo. S. Osborn.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Saving Blooms for Holidays.

You will pardon me if I repeat the old story of pickling the blooms and the consequences thereof. It seems that every year some growers make the same mistake, in spite of repeated warnings and admonitions to send in all blooms which will not keep in first-class condition until they are wanted. That there must be a certain amount of storing up goes without saying, else where would all the extra blooms come from? And if the supply were kept at a normal volume and fifty per cent of the demand had to go unsatisfied the complaining about shortage would be louder even than it is now about pickled stock. This, however, should not be taken as an excuse for carelessness in saving up the blooms.

The grower must discriminate between the varieties which naturally keep well and handle well after being water-soaked. There are a few varieties which can be kept several days and handle as well as when first cut, while some of the most extensively grown varieties are rendered unfit for much handling after standing in water three days. All the Enchantress varieties seem to bruise very easily when water-soaked, while the Lawson varieties and Victory are among the best for holding.

Look over your blooms carefully each day in search of those which fail to draw water properly. There will be a percentage of such blooms, and it will not pay you to mix them with the good ones. By separating them from the good blooms and accepting a fair price for them you will be able to command the top figure for your best stock.

When placing your blooms in water do not crowd too many in a vase and see that the blooms are supported properly. A fairly strong stem will often be found insufficient for holding up a large bloom after it has soaked up water for several days.

This question of caring properly for the blooms is really of more importance than the length of time they are kept. If you are conscientious in sending in only first-class stock, you are not likely to send in any which have been kept too long. This, in short, covers the whole question. If you are a wholesale grower, consult your patrons frequently and keep them advised correctly as to what you will have and deliver when it is wanted. In that way you can realize the greatest gain from your products.

A. F. J. Baur.

BEST CARNATIONS.

Although I do not profess to be an expert carnation grower, I think I have as much right to say my piece as any large grower. First I will say what I think of last year's novelties. I will put White Enchantress ahead of White Perfection, as it has a better stem and is a freer bloomer. Pink Enchantress and Rose-pink Enchantress are good enough for me.

I like Helen Gould very much; it is a good grower and a fancy flower. For one who retails his own stock it sells on sight at 10 cents each or $1 per dozen at times when other stock sells at 4 or 5 cents.

Victory, in red, I cannot say much about. It did not do well with me, but I think I know where my mistake was, as I grew it in the house all summer and fed it highly. I will try it again next year.

The old standard kind, Enchantress, is my standby for light pink. G. Lord is my best pink for cheap flowers. Boston Market is my bread and butter for cheap white.

Next year I will grow Boston Market and White Enchantress for white, Rose-pink Enchantress, G. Lord and Winsor for pink, Enchantress for light pink, Victory and Crane for red. For new kinds I will try Sarah Hill, Lawson-Enchantress and Afterglow. I saw Afterglow grown at its home and liked it.

Perhaps someone may not think I have a good list to grow, but I am growing the kinds that bring me the dollars. I also keep my eyes open to look for others, and when I get a good thing I keep it, no matter whether it is old or new.

I will put up a new house for the Enchantress family next spring.

Simon J. Hider.

FUMIGATING.

Please tell us what is the matter with our Enchantress carnations. The ends of the leaves are turning color. They have a fine growth, some stems being three feet long. They have been kept at a temperature from 50 to 58 degrees, never over or under, with plenty of air both day and night. They were sprayed with Nicoticide, after which they were fumigated with tobacco stems, which might have something to do with it. Any information gladly received.

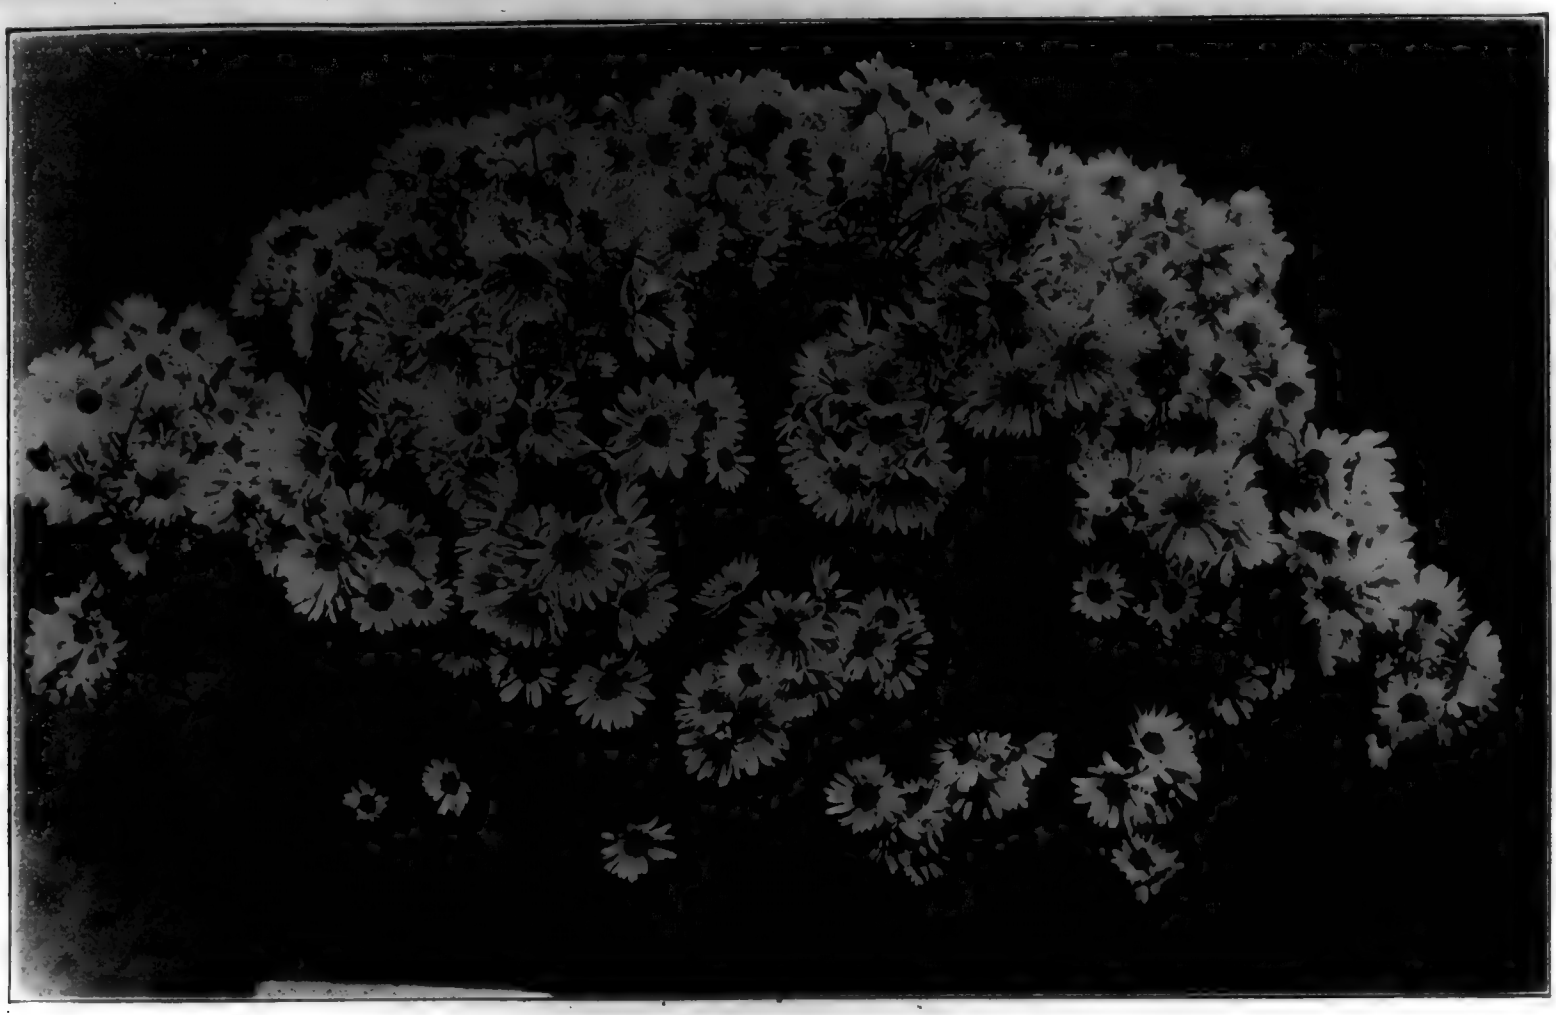
H. P.

It is quite possible that you used the Nicoticide too strong, or that the fumigating was too strong in connection with the spraying. You would have done better to have skipped a day to allow the Nicoticide to spend its strength before fumigating. If the house was too warm the fumigating would have the same effect. A. F. J. B.

DETERIORATION.

I send a few carnation blooms; Glacier is the variety; also a few leaves from Lawson, that appear to have been burned at the tips. There seem to be quite a number of the carnation blooms affected in the same way. The trouble seems to be confined to the one variety. I thought perhaps it was thrips, but I have been unable to discover any of them. We had the same trouble with them last year. Can you tell me the cause for condition of each and what to do for same? R. M.

Your trouble does not seem to be caused by thrips, as the most careful examination fails to disclose any. We have noticed these blooms on some varieties, and at times quite numerous. We cannot account for it, except that it seems to be a weakness in the variety and as the variety gets older and deteriorates, the trouble grows worse. We have had seedlings do the same thing when we were satisfied there were no insects to cause it. There is no help for it and I would advise you to discard the variety and replace it with one of the newer sorts. A. F. J. B.



CHARLES HERR'S PLACE.

The accompanying illustration represents Charles B. Herr's greenhouse establishment. It consists of six houses running from 21x40 to 34x150, the whole comprising about 15,000 square feet of glass.

As compared with greenhouse establishments of mammoth proportions, Mr. Herr's is rather a small place. Nevertheless, what it lacks in size, Carnation-growing Establishment of C. B. Herr, Stroudsburg, Pa.

Single Chrysanthemum Ladysmith, Pink. No Stakes in Plant.

it decidedly gains in many other respects, for neatness, cleanliness, system and order are the dominant features here—and the stock produced is invariably of a high grade, commanding the highest prices in the Philadelphia market.

It may be worthy of note that Mr. Herr is a stanch believer in the gospel of cleanliness. His office is a "thing of beauty"—no rubbish or dust to be seen anywhere; in fact, comparing most favorably with the neat little parlor, the pride of the careful housekeeper. The same rule holds true as regards his greenhouses, the results proving beyond the shadow of a doubt that plants thrive best where the environments are favorable.

Carnations are Mr. Herr's specialty, and the best varieties are grown, as a matter of course. I need hardly add that Mr. Herr has no blooms for the rubbish heap. S.

LILIES FROM SEED.

If I plant hardy lilies of various kinds in Ohio, can I cross them? I have never seen any lilies form seed in Ohio, but I do not know whether it is the climate or what that prevents them. I am desirous of doing some experimenting along this line and should be pleased to have some information as to what varieties would be the most appropriate to use for the work and also any details as to the way to succeed. How long does lily seed require to germinate and to flower? W. D.

Many of the varieties of hardy lilies rarely or never produce seeds in America, including speciosum in variety, candidum, tigrinum, Brownii, excelsum, Chalcedonicum and some others. L. auratum seeds freely, but the seeds do not, as a rule, germinate until the second season. L. Henryi seeds with great freedom, and if crossed with some of the speciosum varieties might give interesting results. It has remarkable vigor, and its entire freedom from disease commends it as a seed-bearing parent. L. tenuifolium will germinate the first year and occasionally flower the second summer. The bulk, however, of the hardy lilies require from four to six years to produce blooming size bulbs.

Some of the forcing lilies may be raised more quickly. L. Harrisii and longiflorum can be flowered in from one to two years and L. Philippense in as short a time as nine months from seed.

Unless you have infinite patience you will find lily hybridization most tedious. Stock may be increased more speedily by means of scales or offsets, these latter being produced freely from the stems of some species. Seed can be sown either outdoors or in a frame or cold greenhouse, preferably the latter. Well drained pans containing light, sandy soil are suitable for seed sowing. They should be mulched with moss or some other covering until the seeds germinate. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

SINGLE-FLOWERING MUMS.

The Vogue of the Singles.

For decorative effect in pots, the single-flowering chrysanthemums, which have attained wide popularity in Europe during the last two or three years, are much superior to the double varieties. The craze for big blooms, which is now subsiding to some extent, led many growers, on both private and commercial establishments, to utterly ignore the pompon, anemone and single classes, and even now in many places they are given little attention. The C. S. A. has—somewhat tardily, it is true—realized at last the fact that the smaller flowered sections demand recognition and there is little doubt but that in the next few years they are destined to displace, to a considerable extent, the specimen blooms, which even now are less interesting and attractive to many visitors at our exhibitions than the singles and pompons. The big blooms are declining in popularity both here and in Europe, as reports of nearly all exhibitions testify. There is no lessening in the public's regard for the queen of autumn, however, as the growing interest in singles shows.

Practically all the singles make good pot plants, having, as a rule, a bushy habit and, owing to the light weight of the flowers, needing much less staking than the doubles. In fact, some sorts, like the old Mizpah and Zeroff, need no supports at all, unless grown into large plants, in which case a few short stakes only are needed. Mizpah, rosy pink, and Zeroff, yellow, make beautiful bush plants, with foliage right down to the pots. Cuttings rooted in April make fine plants in 8-inch pots, and, rooted as late as July 1, make pretty little bushes in 5-inch or 6-inch pots.

Of Simple Culture.

The newer English varieties give us a wealth of material to choose from, of almost every imaginable color. Cuttings of any of these, inserted late in March or April, potted off into 3-inch pots, shifted later to 5-inch and 7-inch or 8-inch and kept pinched until the middle of August, will make very salable stock. Of course, bigger plants may be grown if desired for exhibitions, in which case a start could be made a month earlier. The plants may be grown either out of doors after June until September 1, or under glass. The latter system will give the best foliage. Cuttings put in as late even as August 1 and potted along will make nice little plants for window boxes or for finishing off the edges of groups. I have not tried them planted outdoors and lifted, but think pot culture is to be preferred.

Grown in boxes or benches, the singles produce splendid sprays for cutting. In water these keep better than the double varieties, while for table decorations they are vastly superior. A great mistake made by some growers is in disbudding the flowers. This should never be done, as it utterly ruins their character and beauty.

Some Good Varieties.

Some of the more desirable sorts to grow are: Ladysmith, light pink; this makes a very bushy plant, which needs but little staking; Nancy Perkins, a good early white, flowers rather small; Annie Holden, yellow; Edith Pagram, light pink, center of flower almost white, one of the best for pot plants and cutting; Pretoria, yellow; Kathleen Bunyard, pink; Gertrude, white; Stella, white; Mrs. E. Roberts, soft pink; Irene Cragg, white; Miss T. C. Warden, sulphur yellow; Kitty Bourne, yellow; Mrs. Baillie, red; and Mary Richardson, deep orange, shaded with red, a beautiful color under artificial light. There are a host of other sorts, but the foregoing comprise some of the best.

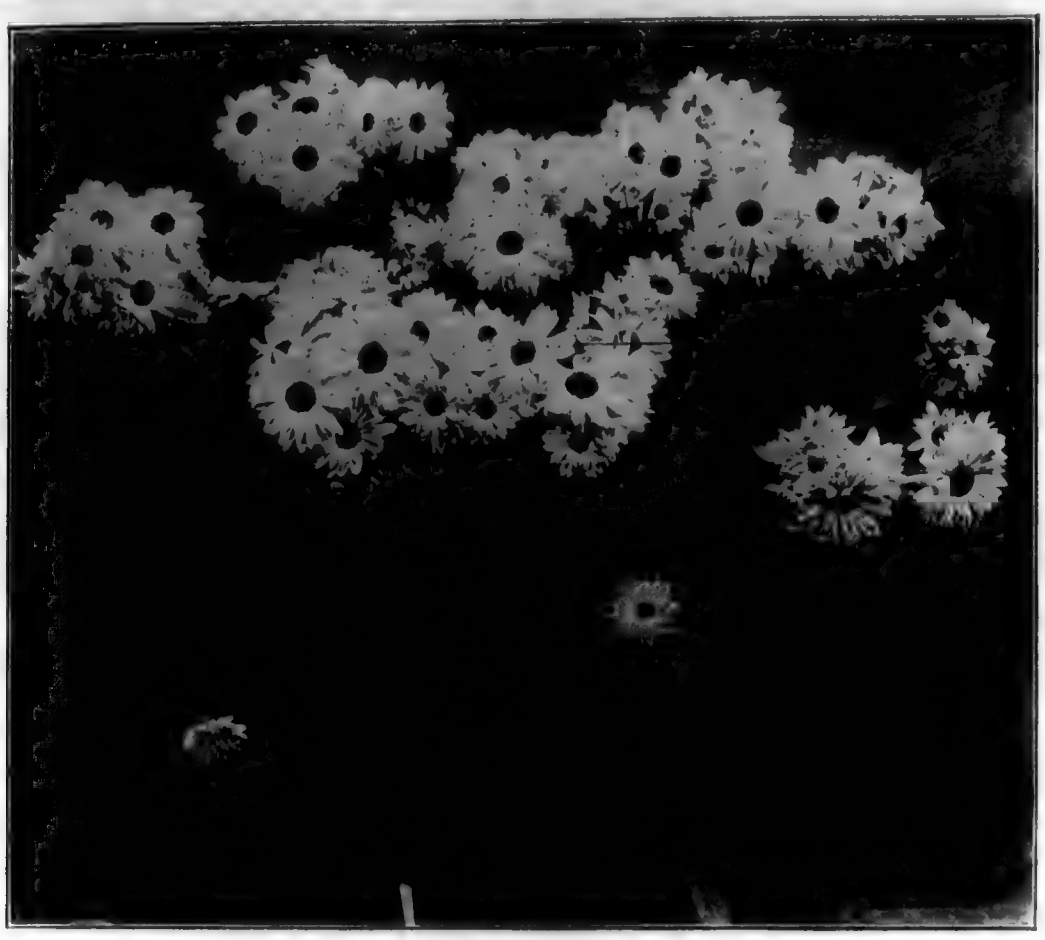
SINGLE CHRYSANTHEMUMS.

Many of the newer varieties of the single-flowered chrysanthemums are passing into the stage when size becomes a noticeable feature. The coloring in many has of late years been intensified, and the singles are certainly charming flowers for decorative work. In build there seems to be a tendency to encourage a light, long floret, instead of a short, stiff, flat one which characterized many of the earlier introductions. One of the most popular varieties is Ladysmith.

"There are so many now in cultivation," says C. Harman Payne, "that I can only mention a few of the most recent or the most attractive of those already known, which I have seen in good form this season. Blushing Beauty is a wonderful bloomer; the flowers are large and colored a delicate rosy blush, with a yellow center. Miss E. Partridge is a neatly-built bloom of almost the same color as Ladysmith; the florets are flat. Derrydown has broad, flat florets, and in color is a reddish shade of terra cotta, with a yellow center. White Duchess is a free-flowering, pure white variety; the blooms are large and the florets flat and stiff. Progress is a striking variety, of terra cotta color passing to golden yellow at the base of the florets. Florence Adams has long florets folded over; they are white, shaded blush toward the extremities. Mrs. E. Allen has large flowers of rosy-amaranth shade and long, stiff florets. J. Fergusson is a sport from Mary Anderson; the flowers are pale pink, with white base and yellow center. Mary Richardson has rich golden flowers, colored a warm shade of terra cotta, with yellow center. Emile has medium-sized flowers of a pale shade of rosy mauve, with yellow center; the florets are narrow. Bessie Payne has a high center and flat florets of a pretty shade of pinkish mauve. The variety is free, and the flowers are effective. Among others noted in good form are Edith Pagram, Emily Clibran, Merstham White, Acme, Ideal, Golden Fleece, Pink Beauty, Miss Mary Anderson and Miss Annie Holden."

THE POPULARITY OF MUMS.



William Duckham, of Madison, N. J., maintains that the great popularity of the chrysanthemum is due to the huge exhibition varieties. In support of that opinion Mr. Duckham spoke as follows, in the introductory part of his address before the Chrysanthemum Society of America, at New York, November 6:

"The chrysanthemum continues its prosperous and undisturbed march down the wide avenue of popularity. We are a year older; the chrysanthemum also has added another year to its career, but it is not a year older; it is more youthful and full of vitality and capable of new and fresher development than it was a year ago. We are distinctly older, and may have some passing twinges in the bones to remind us of that very disturbing fact. The chrysanthemum is fresher and more beautiful and more varied and even a little larger than ever.

"Wherever flowers are grown the chrysanthemum now has its place and its honor. Its forms seem almost endless and its varieties are bewildering. I am, however, inclined to think that some excellent people entirely miss the real explanation of the great popularity which the flower now enjoys. Permit me to say, with all conviction and earnestness, that the popularity is entirely due to the growing of exhibition varieties. I am convinced that if you were to secure all the flower shop windows on Broadway and fill them with pompons, and with every other variety that grows and flowers at this season, and omit entirely the exhibition varieties—I am convinced, I say, that they would attract no popular attention whatever. I grant that flower-lovers of the old-fashioned variety, who worship constantly at Flora's shrine, no matter what she has to display, would view them with pleasure; but the greater public, the Press Society, and even 'the man in the street,' would pass them unnoticed.

"The splendid position in popular and social esteem now held by the flower is due to that wonderful development from the tiny little parent flower to these massive blooms that now entrance every beholder. If we had here before us the blooms that were exhibited even ten or twelve years ago, even we who know the history of the flower would be dumfounded at the progress, and I make bold to say that the end is not yet. The flowers which only the few could produce when the shows first began are now produced by the many, and the leaders are more closely pushed by their followers year by year. And, as the blooms increase in size, in finish, in brilliance of color, in decorative quality, so also does the popularity of the chrysanthemum increase. The growing of larger, nobler, more stately flowers, and in greater abundance—this is one sure way of holding the popular favor."

ADRIAN, MICH.—Nathan Smith & Son report a good season on mums.

COMMERCIAL FERNS.

The list of ferns suitable for retail sales is not very extensive, but there are several varieties which are not generally known to the average grower who makes ferns a side line and not a specialty. Beyond ferns of the nephrolepis varieties, comparatively few are sold in large numbers in pots, although quite a variety may be suggested. The saying that a good article usually sells itself is equally applicable to florists' products, and a clean grown, bushy fern should not ordinarily be difficult to sell.

Those florists who have used Polystichum tsussimense for dishes know how well such a dish looks, particularly with a cocos in the center, or a graceful Geonoma gracilis. Another useful fern of a similar texture in the frond, dwarf and tough, besides being variegated, Polystichum aristatum variegatum, is to be recommended.

The tinted ferns present an assortment which, to those who demand something choice, cannot be surpassed. Adiantum macrophyllum, A. rhodophyllum and Doodia aspera multifida are three of the best, inasmuch as they are dwarf in habit.

Among the variegated varieties Pteris Victoriæ, P. albo-lineata and P. Mayii are good and, for dishes entirely of green, among the most common may be mentioned Cyrtomium falcatum, Asplenium biforme, Pteris serrulata, P. serrulata cristata, P. nobilis, P. Wimsetti, P. cristata, Blechnum occidentale, Lomaria Spicant, and numerous others.

The selaginellas are worthy of consideration. Selaginella Kraussiana, usually called Lycopodium denticulatum, is frequently used for dishes, but the variety aurea and variegata make a pleasant change, although the true glaucous tint of Selaginella cæsia (S. uncinata cæsia) is quite unsurpassed and it is a good seller because of its pretty, unique appearance.

Among the davallia some of the best known are Davallia dissecta, D. Tyermanni, D. bullata, D. Canariensis and D. Fijensis, the first three varieties being suitable for dish work. Davallia dissecta is easily raised from spores, besides having dense foliage, and is especially recommended.

Beyond the nephrolepis group perhaps Cibotium Schiedei is the only fern usually seen in 6-inch pots. I maintain that a well grown Asplenium biforme grown in a 6-inch pot is a worthy rival to either of these two. With its dark green, shiny fronds it makes a graceful and durable plant, and, indeed, Pteris major of the Drinkwaterii type, when grown nearly a yard through, besides being clean and of dense foliage, always proves a choice subject.

I might go on ad infinitum, but the subject is too comprehensive to be dealt with in all its phases. From the commercial point of view the ferns mentioned are all well tried and are profitable to grow when done properly. The culture is not difficult except in a few cases. Keep the foliage dry over night, give plenty of room and light, with an occasional pinch of manure when well rooted, and attention to the watering, and one cannot go far wrong. And variety in the stock is desirable.

THE WYNDMOOR ROSE.

With all the excitement about the new roses which are to be disseminated next spring, it is worth while to keep in mind that there are candidates already in sight for 1909. One of these is the cheerful pink rose, Wyndmoor, a house of which is shown in the accompanying illustration. This is from a photograph taken September 22, at the establishment of Myers & Samtman, Wyndmoor, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. After being cut off entirely August 22, the cut from September 11 to September 30 was 6,630 salable buds from 1,560 plants and the house was in full crop again October 1. At the meeting of the American Rose Society at Washington last March the rose scored 83 points and was granted a certificate of merit. Growers visiting the establishment of the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., will find Wyndmoor blooming there this winter.

MANCHESTER, MASS.

December 6 the North Shore Horticultural Society had the pleasure of listening to a lecture on the subject of "Landscape Architecture" by J. Woodward Manning, of Reading. Mr. Manning covered the subject as fully as was possible in the time, commencing with the landscape architect and classing some of the requirements necessary for success as being "some college education or training, extensive travel, knowledge of building architecture, engineering, soil and soil requirements, plants and plant requirements; he must be well read, a good draughtsman and above all he must possess good taste." The formal and informal style of landscape architecture have each enjoyed alternate periods of popular favor. The speaker, not being a faddist, did not advocate either to the exclusion of the other, but rather that natural existing conditions must be taken advantage of and improved upon, retaining everything of beauty, broadening or creating vistas and bringing the whole estate into complete harmony and restfulness to the vision and the senses.

Mr. Manning referred to the great achievements of the late Frederic Law Olmsted, and how much the present generation owes to his genius and skill. Continuing, the speaker briefly touched on road, or drive-making to suit different conditions, bridges, catch-basins, gutters, the making of lawns, the various styles of gardens; formal, herbaceous, rock and wild flower gardens with reference to plants suitable for each; the fruit and vegetable garden, shrub beds, plantations to cover unsightly objects, hedges for boundaries, and trees for individual planting for shade or ornamental purposes.

In the discussion which followed Mr. Manning deplored the needless friction which has too often occurred between the landscape architect and the gardener. He stated that the ultimate success of the architect's efforts rested with the gardener. His position on that matter was that after the engineering problems were overcome and the final plans were accepted, they should be turned over to the gardener and that he should complete the work or at least he should be consulted on all matters, especially the selection of shrubs and flowering plants, as he knows the requirements of the place and is the one looked to for after results.

A vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Manning by a large and appreciative audience, after which the refreshment committee took charge and provided their share of the evening's entertainment.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Trade was quiet last week, there being no particular rush for any kind of stock. Carnations continue short in supply, but there are enough to fill all orders. Violets and valley have moved slowly, having to be forced on the buyer, which means low prices. Romans, Paper Whites and lilies have been coming in quite heavily, but the scarcity of funeral work has made them a drug, also.

Various Notes.

The James Eadie Co. has been cutting a fine lot of late mums since Thanksgiving.

W. A. Calhoun has completed his new houses at East Cleveland and now has a strictly up-to-date retail establishment.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. is in its new quarters at 231-235 High street, where it has double the space formerly occupied. The firm now has 5,000 square feet of floor space, in a new concrete building constructed especially for the wholesale trade.

Smith & Fetters had a beautiful window decoration December 7, composed of novelties in decorated boxes.

C. A. Bramley has been busy with large orders for Christmas wreaths.

HOW IS BUSINESS AND WHAT PROMISE DOES 1908 HOLD OUT FOR YOU?

Alabama.

MONTGOMERY.—Business is running ahead of any previous year. Collections have been slow, on account of so much cotton, our staple crop, being unsold. For the same reason, and because it will bring a higher price when sold, the prospect for 1908 is good.—W. B. PATTERSON.

Arkansas.

EUREKA SPRINGS.—Chrysanthemum blooms have sold well here this year and we confidently expect a much better trade next year.—C. S. BARNETT.

California.

LOS ANGELES.—Business has been very good, as good as last year, if not better. Next year cannot help but go ahead of 1907 here, as the growth of Los Angeles is phenomenal. Besides, a presidential year, with political obligations, helps the florist, however it may affect other lines of business.—F. EDWARD GRAY.

LOOMIS.—Orders are commencing to come in and no doubt we soon will all be doing a good business. Everyone is getting ready for it.—H. S. MCGOWAN.

Colorado.

COLORADO SPRINGS.—Business to date has been equal to that of last year. Commercial interests throughout the country seem to be sound, and any existing trouble has the earmarks of quick recuperation.—PIKES PEAK FLORAL CO.

Connecticut.

NEW HAVEN.—Business has been far in excess of last year. We have had ready sales and good prices. Stock in general was never better. The prospects for a busy Christmas are good.—CHARLES MUNRO.

Florida.

NEPTUNE.—I find that there is an increasing demand for my specialty, Asparagus plumosus nanus sprays, and 1908 promises to be a good business year with me.—HERBERT A. PENNOCK.

Illinois.

DANVILLE.—I am looking forward to a larger business than ever in 1908.—B. E. WADSWORTH.

ROCK ISLAND.—Business has been booming and I expect it to be good in 1908.—L. STAPP.

Indiana.

ANDERSON.—Our business is good. We have no kick coming.—STUART & HAUGH.

Kansas.

HUTCHINSON.—Business was a little quiet in October and November, but December started in good. Crops in this country are good and we expect trade to improve.—JOHN STAMM.

Kentucky.

DANVILLE.—In spite of the financial flurry, which cut down our November sales somewhat, we think we will come out equal to, if not ahead, of 1906. As for 1908, crops of all kinds have been good, and prices good, and I can see nothing but prosperity for the coming year.—S. M. HARBISON.

Maryland.

HAGERSTOWN.—The year 1908 holds out to me the brightest prospects.—A. P. STAUFFER.

Massachusetts.

BROCKTON.—There is no reason that I can see why business should not be as good as last year, if not better.—W. W. HATHAWAY.

Minnesota.

OWATONNA.—Though business has been a trifle slack, it is now resuming its normal condition and we are looking forward to a good Christmas trade. There will certainly be no surplus of good stock.—CLINTON FALLS NURSERY CO.

Montana.

LIVINGSTON.—Business is good, and if 1908 brings forth what I expect, it will be even more prosperous than 1907.—E. F. KIRKLAND.

Nebraska.

HASTINGS.—Business is good. Nearly everybody is prosperous and has money, and conditions are favorable for another good year.—CHARLES W. WINKLER.

HOLDREGE.—Our sales for November ran about fifteen per cent above those of the same month last year. We are now better equipped than before to meet all possible demand and we expect 1908 to far exceed the present year.—DAVIDSON FLORAL CO.

GRAND ISLAND.—The year 1908 ought to be a banner year. We have had good crops for several years, and consequently the people are prosperous.—BREWSTER & WILLIAMS.

North Dakota.

VALLEY CITY.—Business is improving again and we are looking forward to a prosperous year, for this country will be in a splendid condition as soon as the crops can be marketed.—CHARLES E. MOORE.

Ohio.

KINSMAN.—My business is growing steadily every year. If my life and health are spared, I have no reason to expect anything different for the coming year.—FRANK BANNING.

MALTA.—This has been the most prosperous year in my business and I do not see any decrease in the demand.—W. C. SCOVELL.

HILLSBORO.—I am entirely sold out and orders still coming by every mail. I received four orders today and it breaks my heart to return the currency, which I have to do. I came to the conclusion that with right stock, in right season, at right prices, and a little "ad" in the REVIEW, you will have nothing but empty houses to look into in the fall of 1908. You will surely hear from me whenever I have any surplus stock.—SIMON J. HIDER.

Oklahoma.

NOWATA.—Everything looks bright here, in our new state, and I am making arrangements to enlarge my business next year. There is no place under the shining sun where there are better opportunities than here.—CASS LANNING.

Oregon.

SALEM.—Business with us is fair, considering that we are young in the trade. With the recently completed electric connection with Portland, the metropolis of the state, the prospect looks brighter for the coming year.—MASON BROS.

Texas.

SAN ANGELO.—The promises for 1908 are good. The city is growing tremendously and the country is filling up with settlers. Another railroad from Kansas City will be running by the first of the year, which will give us an increased out-of-town market. The southwest is prosperous, in spite of the overspeculation north and east, and when people are prosperous they will buy flowers.—J. J. NUSSBAUMER.

South Carolina.

CHARLESTON.—We cannot complain. During the last month we have done better than in any month of November in years. December has not started quite so well.—CAROLINA FLORAL CO.

South Dakota.

PIERRE.—We look for a gradual increase in our business for 1908. Our town is growing and we think the growth will continue. The development of towns to the west of us will undoubtedly add to the volume of business.—ENOE & BARNEY.

SIOUX FALLS.—Business has been very good; fine demand for flowers all fall.—JOS. TOSINI.

ABERDEEN.—With me business has been very satisfactory all through 1907. There has been an average increase of twenty-five per cent over 1906. I look forward to 1908 with the expectation of a still greater increase.—R. STROHMEIER.

DEADWOOD.—Business has been good this year and is growing steadily. I intend to build another house in the spring.—ANDREW DANIELS.

Vermont.

WEST DERBY.—During the last six months we have had larger sales here than in any corresponding months of previous years. November sales were double those of last November. Money is plentiful and people are buying freely, so I say the outlook is good for 1908.—H. J. BALL.

West Virginia.

FAIRMONT.—My sales this fall have been larger than in previous years. Everything in my greenhouse is in first-class condition. My business prospects for 1908 are better than ever before.—H. GLENN FLEMING.

Wisconsin.

OCONTO.—We have been kept very busy packing during the last few weeks and are much pleased with the way the orders have been coming in.—JOSEPH SYLVESTER.

WAUKESHA.—Judging from the way business has started this fall, we think 1908 will be a very prosperous year.—SCHNECK & BLIESE.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Indications all point to better business than we had last week. People seem to be getting a little more confidence. The market remains well cleaned up of all good stock. The few Beauties on this market seldom go begging. There is a good demand for roses, the price ranging from 3 cents to 8 cents. Chrysanthemums are a back number. There are still a few to be seen, but there is little or no call for them. Carnations meet with a good demand. Green stock of all kinds is plentiful. The first holly arrived in town December 9.

Club Meeting.

But a small percentage of the members turned out for the meeting December 4. Probably they are still resting up after the strenuous times of the dance. T. G. Phillips was unanimously elected a member. Mr. Phillips is engaged in the landscape gardening business in this city.

Albert Pochelon, of the exhibition committee, reported that the last club show cost the club only about $30. The expenses of the hall, lunch, printing, etc., were just about met by the funds secured through selling the exhibition flowers. Several kicked about selling the flowers, but there is no reason why they should, as the grower is benefited by these local shows just as much as the retail man. One retail man showed a lot of mums from his own greenhouses and bought all his own stock back at a good price and never said a word about it. This is the right spirit.

Herman Knope spoke about the Toledo show. He made special note of Mr. Bayer's fine lot of mums. He stated that despite the fact that the florists lost a little money, they were well pleased and are already planning a more elaborate show for next year. The outside growers did much toward making the Toledo show a success.

Several of our members are enthusiastic about a show in February. The idea is to have it one afternoon and evening, devoting the afternoon to viewing the exhibits and the reading of some good papers, and in the evening have the show open to an invited public. This will be further discussed the evening of the next meeting, December 18.

A resolution was adopted to convey the sympathy of the members to Mrs. Hauswirth and a telegraph message dispatched.

The outlook for Christmas was discussed. The members were bound to take an optimistic view of the situation, despite the fact that business at present is not rushing. Some even thought business would be ahead of last year, as many people will buy a plant of flowers instead of jewelry or other expensive presents. Business seems to have picked up the last few days and the writer is of the opinion that we will have a good Christmas.

At the request of Wm. Dilger our president gave a very amusing rehearsal of his talk before the Twentieth Century Club. Both he and the secretary seem to have had quite a struggle with themselves to keep from running away.

Various Notes.

Fred Pantke is sending in some fine sweet peas. He expects to have a good crop of red Mrs. Wirtz sweet peas for Christmas.

The Detroit Cut Flower Exchange is handling some fine Brides and Maids.

H. S.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Recent wintry conditions have shortened supplies somewhat, but trade is not so brisk as it might be. Chrysanthemums are nearly over, although some will be in evidence until Christmas. Bonnaffon, Nonin, Maud Dean and Golden Dome are the varieties mostly seen. These sell quite well at present. Roses are not in heavy crop, but are ample for all requirements. Beauties are fine, while no better Killarneys were ever seen in the market. Brides and Maids now have stems of something like winter length. There is no special change in prices on roses.

We take pleasure in saying the readers of

are quick to see the merits of a new idea. Our advertisement of Sunlight double-glass sash for hotbeds and coldframes has brought us inquiries from florists all over the country and we already have you to thank for many sales of trial lots. We rely on the merit of our sash to bring larger orders next year.

SUNLIGHT DOUBLE-GLASS SASH CO.

Louisville, Ky.

December 5, 1907.

Carnations remain much the same. The finest quality bring $4 per hundred, while common grades bring as low as $1.50. Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Helen Goddard, Victory, Beacon, White Perfection and Winsor are all good, the last named being, however, rather short-stemmed. Violets are doing a little better, quite a few making $1. There are plenty of Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths coming in and an abundance of stevia.

Lilies and callas are not abundant. Some nice mignonette, bouvardia and poinsettias are seen. There is a fair call for green stock. The near approach of Christmas is attested by quantities of laurel and other wreaths and an abundance of other evergreen decorative material at the commission houses. The flower markets do not handle much of this trade.

Horticultural Society.

At a meeting of the board of trustees December 7 the following, among other new committees for 1908, were appointed: Prizes and Exhibitors—J. K. M. L. Farquhar, chairman; General F. H. Appleton, W. J. Stewart, Peter Fisher, W. N. Craig, Edward MacMulkin. Plants and Flowers—T. D. Hatfield, chairman; Duncan Finlayson, Thomas Roland, Emil Johansson, Joseph Clark. Fruits—Wilfrid Wheeler, chairman; William Thatcher, Edward B. Wilder. Vegetables—J. B. Shurtleff, chairman; George D. Moore, J. W. Duncan. Gardens—C. W. Parker, chairman; S. M. Weld, J. H. Bowditch, F. L. Olmsted, A. H. Fewkes, W. P. Rich, Julius Heurlin, Robert Cameron, T. H. Westwood. Children's Exhibits—Mrs. R. G. Shaw, chairman; Miss Rose Hollingsworth, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Miss Helen Callamore.

A motion was unanimously adopted recommending the appropriation of $50 for an affiliation fee with the Chrysanthemum Society of America. The finance committee approved the recommendation. A motion was also carried, to the effect that the schedule for 1909 be printed not later than May 1, 1908.

Club Notes.

A special electric car, kindly furnished by S. J. Goddard, will leave Park square at noon, December 14, to carry club members and friends to the Framingham field day. J. T. Butterworth will be first visited, next S. J. Goddard's and the afternoon will close at William Nicholson's, from which place the special car will carry the party direct to Boston. A large delegation is already assured.

In lieu of holding ladies' night December 17, as at first planned, this event has been postponed. W. J. Stewart will read a paper on "The Innocents Abroad" and there will be other interesting features. The exhibit tables promise to be unusually attractive.

The landscape gardening classes in charge of B. K. Howard and Daniel A. Clark are being well attended. Half a dozen more students only can be accommodated.

Various Notes.

W. W. Edgar remains in a critical condition and his illness arouses much sympathetic comment among his many friends. Mr. Edgar's sons, Robert S. and Frank, are doing yeoman work during their father's illness, being ably helped by H. H. Bartsch, their popular salesman.

The Haskell Seed and Implement Co. has opened for business at 21 South Market street, occupying the building recently vacated by A. D. Bramer. Messrs. L. B. Haskell and Webster are members of the firm, which will do a general business in garden and farm seeds, implements, etc. The location is a central one, between the firms of Farquhar & Co. and Schlegel & Fottler Co.

Houghton & Clark are displaying some fine specimen plants of Adiantum Farleyense. They have, as usual, a good show of seasonable orchids. A large bowl of orange calendulas last week was quite effective.

Galvin is showing some extra good azaleas, Lorraine begonias and poinsettias. His orchid display is always interesting.

H. M. Robinson & Co. have received large consignments of boxwood, holly, laurel and other Christmas greens and will need to work long days with a large force until after the holidays.

Waban Conservatories are sending in some splendid Killarney roses, with stems two to three feet long. They hope to have a heavy cut of all roses for Christmas.

H. E. Fiske & Co. are making a specialty of dwarfed Japanese evergreens, of which they have a fine assortment, for the holidays.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Trade is moving along nicely. Every one is busy getting things in shape for Christmas. As far as business is concerned, there is nothing pushing and not much trouble getting all the stock that is needed.

Various Notes.

The club held its regular meeting December 3 and the most important thing done was arranging for a rose night, when it is proposed to award prizes for the stock exhibited. A committee was appointed to provide the same. This show will be in connection with the regular meeting and a large attendance is looked for.

Notice of the death of Robert Faulk will be found in the obituary column on another page of this issue. Hoo-Hoo.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

While business is fair, there is nothing extraordinary doing and no one is rushed. Several good decorations used up a lot of flowers and there was a good deal of funeral work as well, but had it not been for that there would have been a glut of roses. As it is, this flower is just about able to maintain the advance in price made at Thanksgiving. A good many are being received by the wholesale houses every day and it is about all they can do to make them move at the quoted prices. As is usually the case in this market, however, there are none too many red roses and Beauties. The latter rose was called for quite frequently and many more could have been sold than were received.

Carnations are still the scarce article and there is every prospect that they will remain so until after the holidays at least. Wm. Murphy, in speaking of the supply, said that there were not enough being cut out of the many plants at Murphyville to pay the coal bill and that it would be along in February before there would be anything like a good crop in. He said that the plants were looking fine and appeared to be growing well, but all were late and no one had been able to get a crop except those who had housed very early. It appears that there is a slow increase in the cut, and if only a good crop will be in by Christmas it will do a whole lot toward making up for the scarcity this fall.

A few good mums are still to be had and they are mighty good property, as they always are at this time of the year. What few come sell out at sight and bring top prices; in fact, better than at any time during the season. G. Brunner's Sons have a large lot of late ones that will be in fine shape for the holidays and they will easily realize 25 cents each for them.

Violets are in good demand, and both double and single are selling well. The New York violets are fine this year and those from Virginia are up to their usual standard. The singles grown in this locality are fine and they bring the highest price of all.

The market is well supplied with green goods. Bronze galax leaves were scarce for a while, but plenty of green were on hand. Boxwood is selling well and large quantities of it are being handled by the wholesale houses. From all indications, good holly will be a scarce article this year. At the present time it is almost impossible to obtain any that will pass muster. We suppose that at the last moment there will be plenty of it to be had, but at present the prospects are none of the best and the reports from the woods are not very encouraging.

Various Notes.

Richard Witterstaetter reports a good lot of seedlings this year. He is one of the lucky ones and has been having a good cut of carnations all the fall. At present he is slightly off crop, but hopes to make it for Christmas.

C. P. Dieterich & Bro., of Maysville, Ky., have just finished remodeling their retail store. A new front was put in and the entire store painted and put into the best possible shape. This firm does a large florists' business and also goes heavily in for nursery stock.

I regret to report the death of Mr. Roll, father-in-law of James Allan. Mr. Roll was quite an elderly man, but his death, which was sudden, was nevertheless a great blow.

The news of the death of P. J. Hauswirth was sadly received by his many friends in this city.

C. W. Ward, of Queens, Long Island, accompanied by Mr. Potter, stopped over in this city long enough to make a few calls upon friends. They were on their way to Virginia to attend an important board meeting.

B. P. Critchell was attacked by a dog and his right hand was severely bitten. The wounded member is doing nicely and it is to be hoped that nothing serious will result. C. J. OHMER.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The week after Thanksgiving, trade was fairly good, but far from satisfactory when taken as a whole. The weather has been pleasant; in fact, too nice for good trade. It will take cold weather to create a good demand. This alone will stimulate the trade for the coming holidays and make it satisfactory to us all. Some of our uptown florists have been quite busy with wedding and reception decorations, while the downtown florists had funeral work. The north end and south end florists say that trade is not at all steady in any one line. We cannot say that stock at the four wholesale houses was overplentiful last week. Shipping trade aided greatly in using up the surplus.

Chrysanthemums are over for this season. Last week a few Jerome Jones and Chadwick came in, but this week none are to be had. This, of course, makes a better demand for roses, which are selling well and are of good quality. Chatenay, Killarney, Richmond, with Bride and Maid, are plentiful. Long Beauties are limited, with plenty of shorts. Carnations are a little scarce at present. Enchantress, White Perfection, Lawson,

DETROIT.

The Market.

Indications all point to better business than we had last week. People seem to be getting a little more confidence. The market remains well cleaned up of all good stock. The few Beauties on this market seldom go begging. There is a good demand for roses, the price ranging from 3 cents to 8 cents. Chrysanthemums are a back number. There are still a few to be seen, but there is little or no call for them. Carnations meet with a good demand. Green stock of all kinds is plentiful. The first holly arrived in town December 9.

Club Meeting.

But a small percentage of the members turned out for the meeting December 4. Probably they are still resting up after the strenuous times of the dance. T. G. Phillips was unanimously elected a member. Mr. Phillips is engaged in the landscape gardening business in this city.

Albert Pochelon, of the exhibition committee, reported that the last club show cost the club only about $30. The expenses of the hall, lunch, printing, etc., were just about met by the funds secured through selling the exhibition flowers. Several kicked about selling the flowers, but there is no reason why they should, as the grower is benefited by these local shows just as much as the retail man. One retail man showed a lot of mums from his own greenhouses and bought all his own stock back at a good price and never said a word about it. This is the right spirit.

Herman Knope spoke about the Toledo show. He made special note of Mr. Bayer's fine lot of mums. He stated that despite the fact that the florists lost a little money, they were well pleased and are already planning a more elaborate show for next year. The outside growers did much toward making the Toledo show a success.

Several of our members are enthusiastic about a show in February. The idea is to have it one afternoon and evening, devoting the afternoon to viewing the exhibits and the reading of some good papers, and in the evening have the show open to an invited public. This will be further discussed the evening of the next meeting, December 18.

A resolution was adopted to convey the sympathy of the members to Mrs. Hauswirth and a telegraph message dispatched.

The outlook for Christmas was discussed. The members were bound to take an optimistic view of the situation, despite the fact that business at present is not rushing. Some even thought business would be ahead of last year, as many people will buy a plant of flowers instead of jewelry or other expensive presents. Business seems to have picked up the last few days and the writer is of the opinion that we will have a good Christmas.

At the request of Wm. Dilger our president gave a very amusing rehearsal of his talk before the Twentieth Century Club. Both he and the secretary seem to have had quite a struggle with themselves to keep from running away.

Various Notes.

Fred Pantke is sending in some fine sweet peas. He expects to have a good crop of red Mrs. Wirtz sweet peas for Christmas.

The Detroit Cut Flower Exchange is handling some fine Brides and Maids.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Recent wintry conditions have shortened supplies somewhat, but trade is not so brisk as it might be. Chrysanthemums are nearly over, although some will be in evidence until Christmas. Bonnaffon, Nonin, Maud Dean and Golden Dome are the varieties mostly seen. These sell quite well at present. Roses are not in heavy crop, but are ample for all requirements. Beauties are fine, while no better Killarneys were ever seen in the market. Brides and Maids now have stems of something like winter length. There is no special change in prices on roses.

We take pleasure in saying the readers of

are quick to see the merits of a new idea. Our advertisement of Sunlight double-glass sash for hotbeds and coldframes has brought us inquiries from florists all over the country and we already have you to thank for many sales of trial lots. We rely on the merit of our sash to bring larger orders next year.

SUNLIGHT DOUBLE-GLASS SASH CO.

Carnations remain much the same. The finest quality bring $4 per hundred, while common grades bring as low as $1.50. Enchantress, Rose-pink Enchantress, Helen Goddard, Victory, Beacon, White Perfection and Winsor are all good, the last named being, however, rather short-stemmed. Violets are doing a little better, quite a few making $1. There are plenty of Paper Whites and Roman hyacinths coming in and an abundance of stevia.

Lilies and callas are not abundant. Some nice mignonette, bouvardia and poinsettias are seen. There is a fair call for green stock. The near approach of Christmas is attested by quantities of laurel and other wreaths and an abundance of other evergreen decorative material at the commission houses. The flower markets do not handle much of this trade.

Horticultural Society.

At a meeting of the board of trustees December 7 the following, among other new committees for 1908, were appointed: Prizes and Exhibitors—J. K. M. L. Farquhar, chairman; General F. H. Appleton, W. J. Stewart, Peter Fisher, W. N. Craig, Edward MacMulkin. Plants and Flowers—T. D. Hatfield, chairman; Duncan Finlayson, Thomas Roland, Emil Johansson, Joseph Clark. Fruits—Wilfrid Wheeler, chairman; William Thatcher, Edward B. Wilder. Vegetables—J. B. Shurtleff, chairman; George D. Moore, J. W. Duncan. Gardens—C. W. Parker, chairman; S. M. Weld, J. H. Bowditch, F. L. Olmsted, A. H. Fewkes, W. P. Rich, Julius Heurlin, Robert Cameron, T. H. Westwood. Children's Exhibits—Mrs. R. G. Shaw, chairman; Miss Rose Hollingsworth, Mrs. E. M. Gill, Miss Helen Callamore.

A motion was unanimously adopted recommending the appropriation of $50 for an affiliation fee with the Chrysanthemum Society of America. The finance committee approved the recommendation. A motion was also carried, to the effect that the schedule for 1909 be printed not later than May 1, 1908.

Club Notes.

A special electric car, kindly furnished by S. J. Goddard, will leave Park square at noon, December 14, to carry club members and friends to the Framingham field day. J. T. Butterworth will be first visited, next S. J. Goddard's and the afternoon will close at William Nicholson's, from which place the special car will carry the party direct to Boston. A large delegation is already assured.

In lieu of holding ladies' night December 17, as at first planned, this event has been postponed. W. J. Stewart will read a paper on "The Innocents Abroad" and there will be other interesting features. The exhibit tables promise to be unusually attractive.

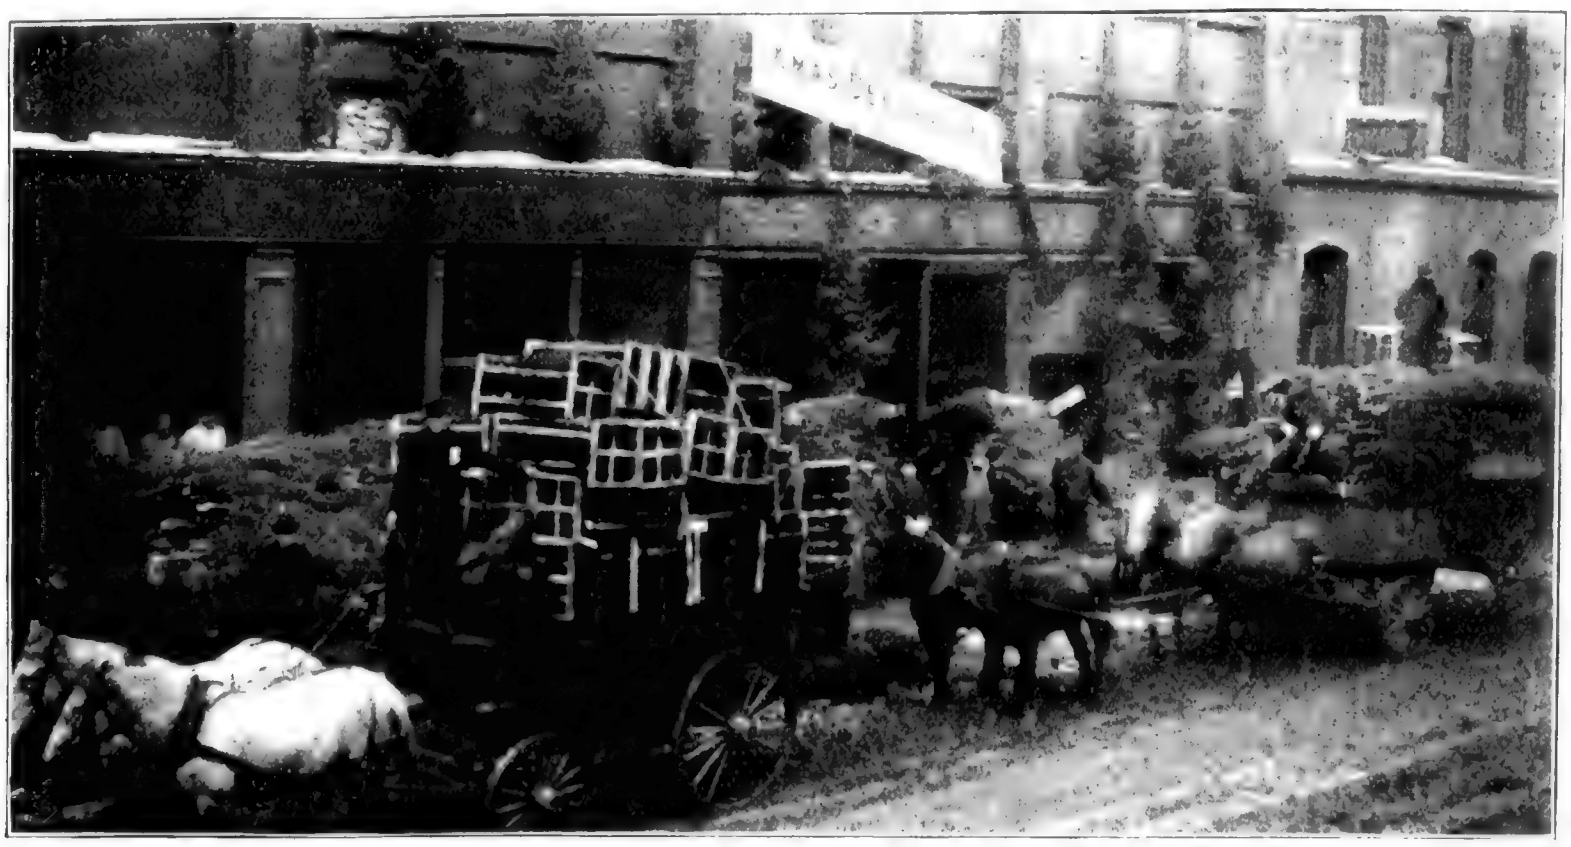
The landscape gardening classes in charge of B. K. Howard and Daniel A. Clark are being well attended. Half a dozen more students only can be accommodated.

Various Notes.

W. W. Edgar remains in a critical condition and his illness arouses much sympathetic comment among his many friends. Mr. Edgar's sons, Robert S. and Frank, are doing yeoman work during their father's illness, being ably helped by H. H. Bartsch, their popular salesman.

The Haskell Seed and Implement Co. has opened for business at 21 South Market street, occupying the building recently vacated by A. D. Bramer. Messrs. L. B. Haskell and Webster are members of the firm, which will do a general business in garden and farm seeds, implements, etc. The location is a central one, between the firms of Farquhar & Co. and Schlegel & Fottler Co.

Houghton & Clark are displaying some fine specimen plants of Adiantum Farleyense. They have, as usual, a good show of seasonable orchids. A large bowl of orange calendulas last week was quite effective.



Galvin is showing some extra good azaleas, Lorraine begonias and poinsettias. His orchid display is always interesting.

H. M. Robinson & Co. have received large consignments of boxwood, holly, laurel and other Christmas greens and will need to work long days with a large force until after the holidays.

Waban Conservatories are sending in some splendid Killarney roses, with stems two to three feet long. They hope to have a heavy cut of all roses for Christmas.

H. E. Fiske & Co. are making a specialty of dwarfed Japanese evergreens, of which they have a fine assortment, for the holidays.

The Market.

Trade is moving along nicely. Every one is busy getting things in shape for Christmas. As far as business is concerned, there is nothing pushing and not much trouble getting all the stock that is needed.

Various Notes.

The club held its regular meeting December 3 and the most important thing done was arranging for a rose night, when it is proposed to award prizes for the stock exhibited. A committee was appointed to provide the same. This show will be in connection with the regular meeting and a large attendance is looked for.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

While business is fair, there is nothing extraordinary doing and no one is rushed. Several good decorations used up a lot of flowers and there was a good deal of funeral work as well, but had it not been for that there would have been a glut of roses. As it is, this flower is just about able to maintain the advance in price made at Thanksgiving. A good many are being received by the wholesale houses every day and it is about all they can do to make them move at the quoted prices. As is usually the case in this market, however, there are none too many red roses and Beauties. The latter rose was called for quite frequently and many more could have been sold than were received.

Carnations are still the scarce article and there is every prospect that they will remain so until after the holidays at least. Wm. Murphy, in speaking of the supply, said that there were not enough being cut out of the many plants at Murphyville to pay the coal bill and that it would be along in February before there would be anything like a good crop in. He said that the plants were looking fine and appeared to be growing well, but all were late and no one had been able to get a crop except those who had housed very early. It appears that there is a slow increase in the cut, and if only a good crop will be in by Christmas it will do a whole lot toward making up for the scarcity this fall.

A few good mums are still to be had and they are mighty good property, as they always are at this time of the year. What few come sell out at sight and bring top prices; in fact, better than at any time during the season. G. Brunner's Sons have a large lot of late ones that will be in fine shape for the holidays and they will easily realize 25 cents each for them.

Violets are in good demand, and both double and single are selling well. The New York violets are fine this year and those from Virginia are up to their usual standard. The singles grown in this locality are fine and they bring the highest price of all.

The market is well supplied with green goods. Bronze galax leaves were scarce for a while, but plenty of green were on hand. Boxwood is selling well and large quantities of it are being handled by the wholesale houses. From all indications, good holly will be a scarce article this year. At the present time it is almost impossible to obtain any that will pass muster. We suppose that at the last moment there will be plenty of it to be had, but at present the prospects are none of the best and the reports from the woods are not very encouraging.

Fisher and Aristocrat are selling at top prices. Violets are down to 50 cents for choice and are abundant. Valley, Romans, Paper Whites and callas had extra good call last week.

Smilax sells well, also asparagus and galax. Lycopodium is $6 per hundred pounds and holly is $4.50 per case.

Various Notes.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its monthly meeting Monday night, December 9, in the Central High School building, at which there was a large attendance. Dr. J. Arthur Harris, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, read a paper on "The Fertility of the Soil and Other Plant-food Problems," which was listened to with great interest. Superintendent H. C. Irish and all the students of the Missouri Botanical Garden were in attendance.

E. W. Guy, of Belleville, was in the city last week and reported a good Thanksgiving trade. He purchased a new rubber bowling ball for his Belleville team.

The Review brought the first news of the sad ending of our friend, Phil J. Hauswirth, in Chicago, which was a great shock to his many friends in the trade here. Both the St. Louis Florists' Club and the St. Louis Horticultural Society sent floral tributes of sympathy to the bereaved family.

Harry Young, in company with his brother Charlie, spent last week on a hunting trip in Arkansas. Both are great marksmen and returned home with a big load of game.

William Bouche, the landscape gardener, has finished up Park View place and it is one of the finest laid out places in the city.

C. Young & Sons Co. is displaying some fine blooming plants in the big show windows. The firm has had an excellent run in bulbs this fall.

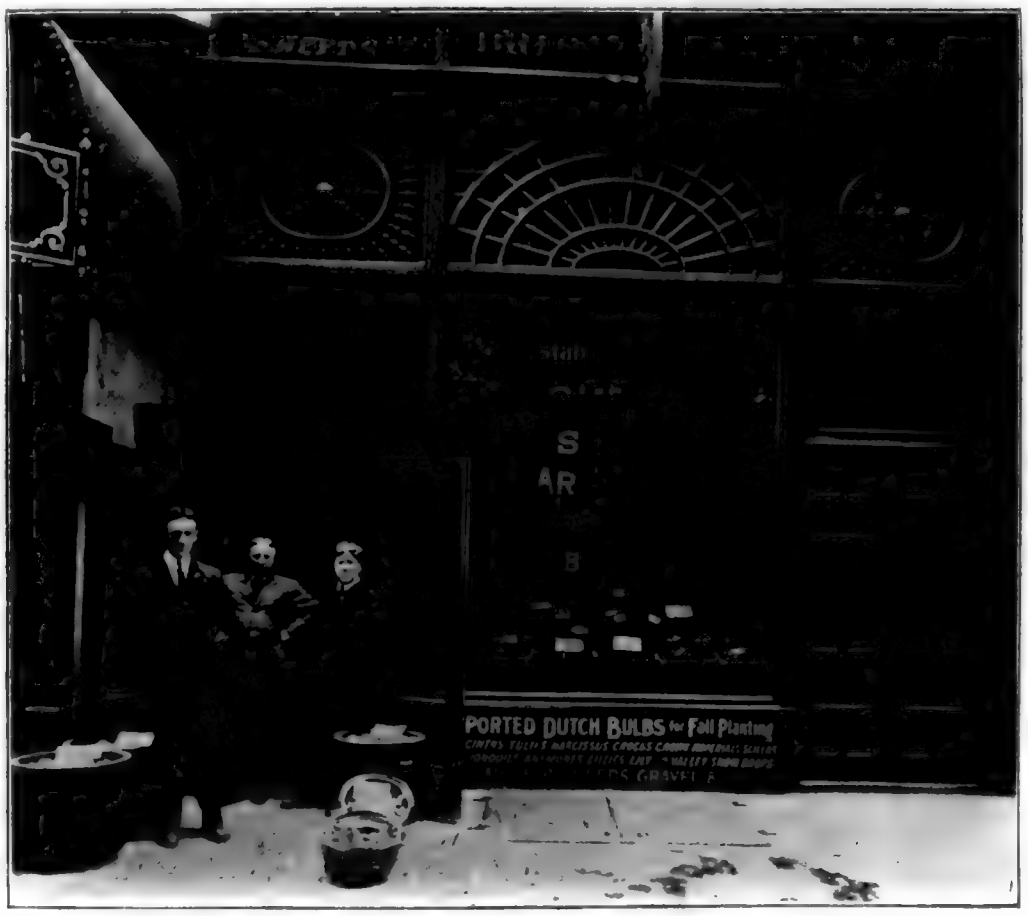
John Connon, of Webster Groves, is enjoying a good run of trade and is using up most of his stock. His Thanksgiving trade was very good. His new houses are producing a good quality of stock in roses, carnations and bulbous stuff.

W. C. Smith & Co. are now making their own wire work, having bought out John Seckter. The wire department has been placed in the rear of the store. They are receiving daily a fine supply of carnations and California violets.

C. A. Kuehn is having a good run on holiday supplies, both local and outside the city. The cut flower and wire departments are also kept busy.

George Angermueller reports some large shipping orders last week in both cut flowers and supplies.

Kelley & Petschonek, who recently bought out the Eggeling branch, on Kings highway, report an excellent trade in decorations for dinners and receptions. Thanksgiving trade was satisfactory.



Frank Fillmore reports that he will give up his Meramec street store after the first of the year and do all the retail work at the Nebraska avenue place. He has given up growing roses and has everything planted in carnations.

Henry Berning's consignments of California violets and carnations from Kirkwood are large and of extra good quality. Winter's and Ude's stock is much looked after by the local buyers.

Miss Theresa Badaracco had a good run on funeral work last week, in large designs and bunches. Miss Badaracco is a clever artist in this line. She was much taken with the paper by Charles H. Grakelow, "The Retailers' Position," in the last issue of the Review, and said, "He voices my sentiments."

Holly and lycopodium wreathing have made their appearance and our large business houses are already decorating their fronts in holiday attire. A great many orders for this wreathing have been booked among the retailers and a good demand is looked for this year. The stores all want to put their best foot forward, after trade.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The gulf stream must have gone astray. The weather December 9 was like a day in June. It's a wonderful climate. The birds and beavers have become unreliable. We can't have "a long, cold winter," as the prophets say, unless it begins quickly. It is only two weeks to Christmas. Leap year and April 19 (Easter) are very near. But Christmas, now, is the vital question. What will it evolve for the florist? If the clear, fine, warm weather continues it will mean a shortening of supply. Several of the growers from Rhinebeck and Madison and intervening centers were in the city during last week and seem to agree as to the supply. Some have ventured to even predict the prices. Long Beauties, they say, will be worth 50 cents and upward; carnations up to 10 cents; Brides and Maids to 25 cents; and violets to $1. Compared with other years these are encouraging figures for the retailer and if there is no pickling everybody will be satisfied to do business on so fair a basis. The outlook for Christmas is encouraging.

Prices this week are holding up fairly well. There probably will be no change until a few days before Christmas. Business generally is growing normal. There are many weddings and dinners and December promises to be a record month in the marrying department, judging by the florists' bookings. The two big opera houses and a hundred theaters are in full swing, the sailings to Europe on the big new floating palaces are abnormal, accommodation for all who desire to go impossible. There has been an abundance of funeral work and no reduction in size and value of the emblems of sympathy that have kept the retailers exceedingly busy. Altogether, there is much to be thankful for, and there is no reason for distrust and pessimism.

The chrysanthemum supply continues abundant. Even up to Christmas growers promise shipments. Beauties sell at from 30 cents down and Maids and Brides at from 8 cents. These rates cover all roses at present, and 4 cents is top for carnations. John Young had a window of Alma Ward that was the talk of the town. Violets do not rise above the 75-cent crest, and then only for the cream of the specials; 50 cents would be a fairer quotation. Lilies have advanced and 12 cents is readily obtained. The orchid supply now includes all the popular varieties for which McManus is famous, and the orders for Christmas exceed those of any other season; they come from every large city in the country.

The green goods men are busy day and night, with increased forces, and wreathing, holly wreaths, and all the accessories that go to make Christmas a decorative season are already in evidence everywhere. Trees from the mountains and from Canada are already arriving, and soon the aroma of evergreens will fill the downtown air.

Club Meeting.

The final meeting of the year was held December 9, President Totty in the chair. About seventy-five members were present, notwithstanding the rain. The report of the committee on closer relations with the Horticultural Society of New York was presented by Mr. O'Mara and an interesting discussion was participated in by Messrs. Totty, Stewart, Marshall, Nash, Barron, Jaenecke, Lenker and Nugent. The proposition for affiliation involves associate membership and the payment of $1 for each member of the Florists' Club, but carries no voting power. A decision will be arrived at at the annual meeting in May.

The Quartet of Sons of S. Jacobs, Who are Pushing the Greenhouse Material Business.

Mr. Manda read the report of the awards committee, which visited, December 6, the plant of Robert Scott & Son to pass upon the merits of the rose Mrs. Jardine, giving it high commendation and a first-class certificate.

Alfred E. Wheeler, Shunzaburo Suzuki and Samuel A. Woodrow were nominated for membership, and F. W. Wagenfohr, of Woodside, was elected.

Several declinations were read from those nominated for office, and the election resulted as follows: President, Charles Weathered; vice-president, W. E. Marshall; secretary, John Young; treasurer, J. K. Allen; trustees, E. V. Hallock, A. Rickards, W. B. DuRie.

The exhibits of J. E. Haines received the thanks of the club. The sweet peas, white and lavender, shown by A. C. Zvolanek, of Boundbrook, N. J., received preliminary certificates. Mr. Pye, of Nyack, also brought two handsome red and pink seedling carnations.

Messrs. O'Mara, Shaw and Miller were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on account of the death of Mrs. A. M. Henshaw. A unanimous vote of sympathy was ordered sent to the family of P. J. Hauswirth, Chicago.

Messrs. Nugent, Rickards and Schultz dispensed roast turkey and other viands with true holiday liberality. So ended the reign of President Totty in harmony and enthusiasm, after one of the most interesting and successful years in the club's history.

Various Notes.

The New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers opened its wholesale market at 43 West Twenty-seventh street, December 7, with a large stock and an encouraging attendance. The experiment, for this its members declare it to be, may be, if the ambition of its promoters is fulfilled, the nucleus of a great plant and cut flower market that will include every branch of the floricultural industry, in a building commensurate with the importance of the trade in this community. The membership includes Messrs. Schultheis, Roehrs, Scott, Dreyer, Manker, Schmutz, Lehnig & Winnefeld, The Hinode Co., Pankok & Schumacher, Zeller, Wagner, Steinhoff, Schoeltzel, Dupey, Miller, Maenner, Marquardt, Dresel, Darlington and Bobbink & Atkins. These names should be a guarantee of the success of the association.

The Engineers' Club gave a great banquet this week to Andrew Carnegie. The building, costing a million and a half, was the gift of the great Scotsman. The decoration by Bowe was unique, the tables showing quantities of heather, Richmond roses and Scotch thistles, in keeping with the occasion.

James H. Blauvelt is now associated with Charles Millang as manager.

D. Smith & Co. is the name of a new wholesale cut flower firm, located at 111 West Twenty-eighth street.

The betrothal is announced of Miss Anna Brenner and Al Furdeman, for nine years associated with Gunther Bros.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., was in the city last week and very optimistic as to Christmas prospects.

Henry E. Mengham and Mackenzie Westwood, both for several years with Thorley, have opened a retail store at 422 Columbus avenue, a splendid location.

Moore, Hentz & Nash are receiving from Ed. H. Behre, of the old Burnett place at Madison, as fine Maids and Brides as ever reach the wholesale market.

Messrs. Hoffmeyer, Pye, Turner, Totty, Duckham and Manda visited Philadelphia last week and interviewed Mrs. Jardine, a rose worthy, in their estimation, of ninety-two points.

Mr. Grant, lately of Chicago and Philadelphia, is now in the service of Harry Hoffmeyer, at Broadway and Eighty-second street. Mr. Hoffmeyer's store is one of the most artistic on the avenue.

W. H. Elliott, of Brighton, Mass., was in the city December 7.

Cut dracænas and calabash baskets were among the Christmas novelties in Traendly & Schenck's windows last week.

December 7 the funeral services on account of the death of Mrs. A. M. Henshaw were held at the family residence in Brooklyn. Many of the florist friends of Mr. and Mrs. Henshaw attended, and the rooms were filled with flowers.

Siebrecht & Son will be fully established in their new store for Christmas.

It is Christmas already at the big store of David Clarke's Sons on upper Broadway, where the firm is celebrating its fifty-eighth anniversary. They have no fault to find with the year's business, and are expecting as large a holiday as they ever enjoyed.

The new plant market meets with Charles Millang's approval. He says it will add to his plant sales rather than diminish. Greenhouse accommodation makes the preservation of the stock easy. This difficulty will be one of the problems with which the new association will have to wrestle.

Twelve months ago Ford Bros. said the year had been double any in their experience, but now they say 1907 puts the last one in the shade. They have some splendid growers on their staff.

A. L. Young & Co. are unique and original advertisers. A handsome mirror is this season's contribution to the holiday.

The enlargement of the business secured by H. E. Froment, a couple of years ago, goes on steadily at 57 West Twenty-eighth street. L. B. Coddington, one of Mr. Froment's largest growers, is now on the ocean, returning from his European trip. James Coyle still holds the reins as manager.

Sixteen months ago the Rickards brothers took over the old-established Bridgeman's Seed Warehouse, on East Nineteenth street. Their progress has been constant.

W. H. Donohoe centers his Christmas at one store this year, the new one at 17 East Twenty-eighth street, roomy enough for a big business, decorated with rare taste, and in a splendid section of the city.

With Cotsonas & Co. the demand for Christmas wreathing keeps a big force at work day and night.

A. J. Guttman has had a record breaking year and the big store is always an interesting scene of hustle and bustle and progress.

Samuel A. Woodrow has just returned from a successful trip through New England. His sales of plants for the holiday trade are large and the shipping demand is far greater than he expected.

Alexander McConnell's big arcade establishment on Fifth avenue is a thing of beauty and the memory of its Christmas decoration should be a joy forever.

J. B. Nugent's window, on West Twenty-eighth street, sets the pace for retailer and wholesaler, as usual.

John King Duer, with the management of J. J. Coan, has built up a fine trade in a year. The store is especially attractive for Christmas.

Myer has some brilliant windows at 609 Madison avenue and every prospect and merit for a merry Christmas.

The auction season draws to a close.

This week Friday will see its finish. Cleary's Horticultural Co., with Ambrose T. Cleary as manager, continues its daily sales at retail to a growing patronage and will handle everything decorative for Christmas, including importations of yew and holly.

Lord & Burnham Co. says the business outlook for 1908 is good. Just now the company is especially gratified at the sash sales, which show a considerable increase over last year.

John E. Haines, of Bethlehem, Pa., was a visitor December 9.

Charles Hunt, of Port Richmond, Staten Island, has a house of over 3,000 poinsettias for Christmas, which will be handled by J. K. Allen.

Jos. Fenrich has recovered from a severe attack of the prevailing influenza.

Lecakes & Co. have a large wreathing manufactory in full blast and the four partners and John Foley, the manager, are sleeping only occasionally.

Reed & Keller report the usual volume of Christmas orders.

Frank Millang, Bonnot Bros., Will H. Siebrecht and C. Smith, in the Coogan building, each declares the year to have been the best to date.

Frank S. Hicks & Co. are now well established at 52 West Twenty-eighth street.

John Seligman & Co. report a satisfactory year.

Russin & Hanfling are doing an excellent business.

John P. Scherer has a large trade and both at Union Hill and his New York store a large force is constantly busy.

The Geller Supply Co. is exceedingly busy.

The artistic window display of Thos. Young, Jr., at Fifth avenue and Fourth street, never fails to attract the appreciation of the 400.

George Saltford, with his son, Clarence, as lieutenant, manages to keep Twenty-ninth street an integral part of the wholesale district.

Walter F. Sheridan was at the club meeting on Monday evening and received a royal welcome after his appendicitis experience of a month ago.

John Young looks for a big Christmas.

B. S. Slinn continues to make violets his specialty.

James Hart is busy every day with his chain of hotels and their decoration.

Perkins & Nelson are doing well in the Coogan building.

Gunther Bros. are enjoying their first Christmas in their new store, on Twenty-eighth street. Business has grown rapidly since their removal.

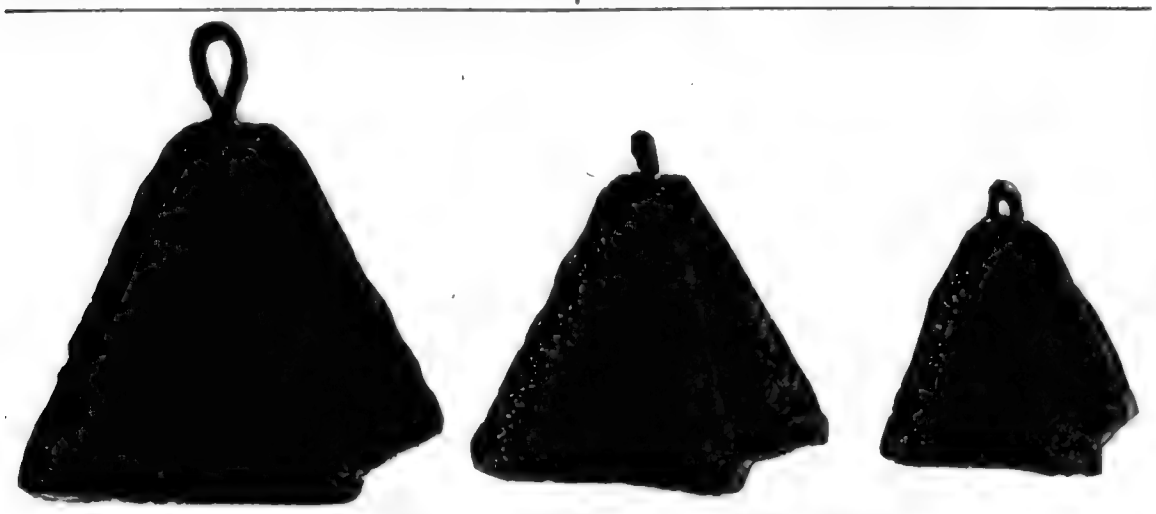
Brooklyn.

S. Jacobs & Sons, with their new factory and greatly increased facilities, look for a big season in 1908. The four sons complete a practical quartet that bespeaks many years of prosperity.

Robert G. Wilson was never as ready for Christmas as now. The beautiful store at Greene and Fulton streets is perfectly decorated, the conservatory filled with selected plants and the big greenhouse branch on Greene avenue, with its concrete benches and ample space, a great help and convenience in the big trade Mr. Wilson controls in the City of Churches.

Down town S. Masur has an excellent business. On the Heights and among the veterans of Brooklyn, Phillips, Weir and Mallon are household words.

Harry Crawbuck looks after the wholesale green goods demand of the city and carries a large stock.



Among the wholesalers Bonnet & Blake, now both fully recovered from illness, find their business constantly growing and their stock from the Jersey experts locally appreciated. W. H. Kuebler only kicks on limited space and has made excellent progress during the year.

RICE AND THE KOW BELL.

This is a season of tremendous activity with the florists' supply dealers. Each Christmas for many years has seen a marked increase in the use of the accessories which add so much to the salability of plants and cut flowers, but it is a characteristic of human nature that a large proportion of the buyers will put off purchasing these necessities until the eleventh hour approaches. The result is that the supply establishments are now hives of activity, the sight of which would cause heartburn to a king of a closed down copper industry.

When M. Rice was in Europe last summer he knew he could count with certainty upon this late demand for supplies and he arranged for fresh shipments to arrive at this season and so systematized the work that the large volume of business is handled without delay and without great apparent effort. M. Rice & Co. say this season is by far the largest in their history and the visitor who sees the great variety of up-to-date novelties gathered from the four corners of Europe in their modern building, will see that they are taking good advantage of the possibilities presented by the ever-widening market for their line of merchandise. While the stock is still complete, one of their best sellers this season has been the bell shown in the accompanying illustration. Characteristically, they list it in their kat-a-log as a kow bell.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Trade last week was fair, funeral work being the most called for. As many cut flowers were on the market, the trade used a large quantity. Last Saturday brought out many more and they sold slowly. Roses are abundant. Carnations are arriving nicely. Paper White narcissi are beginning to come in regularly and sell slowly. Chrysanthemums are still dragging on and the stock looks as though their time was past. Christmas is near at hand and the trade is looking forward to making up the quantity of goods we usually have calls for.

Flower and Corn Show.

The tenth annual meeting and show of the Maryland Horticultural Society, combined with the Maryland Corn Breeders' Association, was opened at the Fifth Regiment Armory Tuesday, December 3, and continued for three days, ending with two separate banquets. The show was one of the most successful yet held. The exhibits were far greater than at any previous show. There were visitors from far and near. Quite a few out-of-town florists were there. The Horticultural Society had 1,500 exhibitors and the Maryland Corn Breeders' Association had 207 corn exhibitors. The armory has a floor space of 60,000 square feet, which was transformed into a bit of Arcadia. The city parks made a remarkable showing of plants. Clifton park had a solid bed of chrysanthemums at the entrance of the large hall. Many of the nurserymen made a fine showing of their nursery stock. The private gardeners also made a demonstration of their skill with beautiful roses, extra fine mums and various kinds of pot plants.

The commercial growers had wagon-loads of plants and cut flowers. John Cook's new unnamed rose was highly admired. It was given a silver medal as the best American seedling. F. H. Kramer, Washington, had his new rose, Queen Beatrice, on exhibition, and won a silver medal and diploma. On Thursday evening an auction was held. The cut flowers, some plants and fruits were sold.

C. L. Seybold, Baltimore, was elected president of the society. R. Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md., was elected county vice-president.

Among the trade exhibitors were: Lord & Burnham, New York, greenhouse supplies; Thomson Chemical Co., insecticides; Griffith & Turner Co., spray pumps and florists' supplies. J. Bolgiano & Son offered a loving cup for the best ten ears of corn and it was won by N. O. Collier, Easton, Md. They also had an exhibit of bulbs and florists' supplies. Henry F. Michell Co., Philadelphia, Pa., florists' supplies and bulbs; Henry A. Dreer, Philadelphia, Pa., a collection of plants and new ferns; Herendeen Mfg. Co., several Furman boilers; I. H. Moss, nursery stock and cut flowers; Henry Fischer, collection of ferns, the new begonia, Fireball, and mums; Franklin Davis Nursery Co., nursery stock; Harrison Nurseries, Berlin, Md., nursery stock; R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md., collection of dahlia roots, cannas, madeira vine roots, caladium bulbs and a monster root of Ipomœa Horsfalliæ; George Morrison, Uplands, collection of plants and cut flowers; A. J. Towney, foliage plants; Edwin Bishop, chrysanthemums; H. Weber & Sons Co., carnations; Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., carnations; Stevenson Bros., collection of roses and carnations; F. C. Bauer, cut flowers and plants; John Cook, plants and cut flowers; Chas. Rhodes, carnations and mignonette; W. J. Hannigan, cut flowers and plants; A. Anderson, American Beauty roses; T. N. Gray, Paper White narcissi; Pimlico Greenhouses, chrysanthemums.

Various Notes.

G. A. Lotze, Glen Burnie, Md., is erecting a new house, 25x100, for his Easter stock.

C. E. Cook, Catonsville, who has been on the sick list, has recovered and is again attending to his usual duties.

J. B. Clarke, Ellicott City, won the Prairie State baby grand incubator offered by Griffith & Turner Co., at the corn and poultry show held in Ellicott City.

Mrs. F. Seidelich, Jr., Catonsville, has been suffering with a heavy cold, but has nearly recovered.

G. H. Rhodes, Arlington, Md., is cutting some extra fine mignonette and Robert Craig carnations.

As usual, J. Donn is offering a choice lot of decorative plants in market.

T. H. Vincent, North Charles street, supplied the Maryland Corn Breeders' banquet with the decorations.

Current Comment.

Trade has been quiet; almost no business at all, except for funeral work, which has been quite good. Carnations are now bringing from 50 cents to 60 cents per dozen retail; roses $1.50 to $2 per dozen retail; violets $1.50 per hundred retail. A few mums are still to be seen, but of poor quality, and carnations have full sway once more.

R. H. Woodhouse will have a grand lot of plants, such as begonias, primulas, cyclamens, etc., for the holiday trade.

H. A. Jahn is cutting some fine flowers from his new white seedling carnation, Lloyd, which he is placing on the market. This promises to be a good variety. Mr. Jahn devotes all of his time to his carnations, having given up his store last July.

William Mosher is cutting some nice violets at his new place on North street.

Peddlers of greens have made their appearance. A large business is done in wreaths, etc., for the Christmas trade.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Bedford Horticultural Society was held December 9, ladies invited. The topic for the evening was an address on "Christmas Decorations," by David McIntosh, secretary of Newport Horticultural Society. Light refreshments were served. Frank C. Barrows presided.

W. L.

DAYTON, O.—The Florists' Club met December 2 at the store of J. F. Young. Holiday trade was the subject for discussion. Every indication points to a greater demand.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—The Lakeview Rose Gardens have been incorporated with $50,000 capital stock, by Almet N. Broadhead, M. A. Broadhead, and William A. Bradshaw, all of Jamestown.

THE DEATH ROLL.

Mrs. C. W. Pike.

Mrs. C. W. Pike died at her home at Racine, Wis., December 7, after a week's illness with pneumonia. Mrs. Pike had been in the retail flower business at Racine for fifteen years. She was a particularly skilful decorator and worker with cut flowers and did a large and prosperous business. She was widely known and respected by all in the trade. One of the things for which Mrs. Pike's name will be remembered for many years is the Clara cemetery vase, which was her invention and patent, although marketed by others.

Mrs. Pike left one sister, her husband having died a number of years ago. There were no children. The funeral was held on the morning of Wednesday, December 11, the remains being taken to Mrs. Pike's former home at Oshkosh, Wis., for interment.

Samuel H. Walker.

Samuel H. Walker, for quite a number of years in the florists' business in Taunton, Mass., died suddenly of heart failure at his home on Somerset avenue, Taunton, December 3. The deceased was born in Dighton, May 14, 1838, and first entered the tack business with his brother. He was later identified with a prominent firm of coal merchants, afterwards engaging extensively in shipping, being agent of a fleet of vessels, thirteen in number. Upon retiring from the shipping business, Mr. Walker, who had a great love for flowers, engaged in the florists' business, building a number of greenhouses on Weir street. Those, which he managed successfully for years, are now occupied by Willard & Williams and are known as the Taunton Greenhouses.

The deceased was a much respected citizen of Taunton, where he had always resided, and his entire business life was marked by square methods of dealing. The deceased is survived by one daughter.

Robert Faulk.

Robert Faulk, probably one of the most popular and best known men in Pittsburg in connection with the bedding plant trade, died suddenly Thursday, December 5. Mr. Faulk had been in bad health for a year, but was seemingly better and his death came as a shock to his many friends. He leaves a wife, two daughters and three sons, two of whom, Frank and Walter, are in the cut flower business in the Allegheny market. Mr. Faulk was a G. A. R. man, besides being a member of several other orders, and his funeral was largely attended.

George D. Kelley.

George D. Kelley, 30 years old, a florist employed by H. F. Lange, was found in Hotel Warren, Worcester, Mass., December 5, with a bullet wound in his head. He registered at the hotel under the name of Burns, of Boston, and committed suicide during the night. He left a note saying he had seen both sides of life and there was nothing in it.

Luke M. Deeds.

Luke M. Deeds, superintendent of the Deeds Floral Co., at Shillington, Pa., was found dead on the floor of the greenhouse office, Sunday morning, December 1. On Saturday evening he had gone to Reading to attend to some business. On returning home, probably about midnight, he went to the greenhouse to attend to the fires and, it is presumed, was overcome by coal gas, with which the place was still filled some hours later. It is supposed that he had fallen asleep while waiting for the fires to burn up, and that when he awoke he was too much overpowered by the gas to be able to reach the door. The position of his body, when discovered, indicated that he had been trying to crawl outdoors into the fresh air on hands and knees.

Mr. Deeds was 33 years old and was the only child of Owen and Mary Deeds, of Shillington. Besides conducting his floral business, he had given much attention, from early youth, to the training of horses, and had become remarkably proficient in managing them. He is survived by his wife, his parents and his two daughters, Mabel and Alice.

P. J. Hauswirth.

To sweetly solemn music and with the burial rites of the Elks and the Red Men, six florists, in the presence of a large concourse of sorrowing friends, laid away all that was mortal of P. J. Hauswirth beneath a bank of flowers at Rosehill cemetery, Chicago, December 6.

Private services over the remains of Mr. Hauswirth were held at the family home at 1 o'clock and an hour later the public ceremony took place in the chapel at Rosehill, the Elks burial ritual being spoken with only a small part of the large number of persons in attendance able to gain access to the chapel. The floral decorations were among the most elaborate seen at any florist's burial in many years, and a conspicuous piece was a large standing wreath from the Society of American Florists. At the grave the Red Men had charge. The pall-bearers were Leonard Kill, W. N. Rudd, E. Wienhoeber, H. N. Bruns, J. C. Vaughan and Joseph Curran. The trade turned out almost to a man and there were present a considerable number of florists from other cities, who had come to pay their last respects to one of the most popular of men.

The REVIEW has received dozens of letters deploring the death of Mr. Hauswirth, so many that space forbids the publication of all the references to that sad event. From many, the following from the secretary of the American Rose Society, has been selected as representative of the general sentiment:

When I opened the REVIEW, and by chance it proved to be the page bearing Phil Hauswirth's picture, I was struck with surprise and sorrow at the news of his death, and cannot refrain from expressing in a few words what probably hundreds of others will also think and feel, the deepest regret at the occurrence and the most profound sympathy for all the members of his family. Mr. Hauswirth I had met for several years in connection with the S. A. F. and the American Rose Society, and always had found him a man of courteous intelligence, such a one as it was "safe to tie to." Whatever may have been his affliction in body, or anxiety in regard to any business care, his end was sad. Fellow men, when care comes, when pain strikes hard, look up—and wait.

MERRY Christmas!

THEY all read the REVIEW.

Results bring advertising.
The REVIEW brings results.

THE Jamestown Exposition Co., after an unsuccessful season, has passed into the hands of receivers.

A PRINTED letter-head is as necessary for a business man as a presentable suit of clothes is to a traveling salesman.

CUT boxwood and red immortelles make far handsomer wreaths and balls for Christmas sales than can be made from poor holly.

THE demand for sheep manure as a florists' fertilizer has outgrown the supply and many growers are experimenting with shredded cattle manure as an abundant and cheaper substitute.

THE man who refuses credit to the irresponsible and who demands prompt settlement when bills are due may not have the largest business, but it is safe to say he lives as well and sleeps as soundly as his less conservative competitor.

THE market for bouquet green has broken to lower levels than was thought possible early in the season. The high prices then offered have apparently stimulated the people in the big woods to unusual effort, and green has become abundant.

THERE are few sections of this country where hybrid rhododendrons do not need winter protection. Spruce or hemlock branches, kept up over the plants by means of some structural contrivance, will be found to be the most effective method of protecting groups of these plants. Single specimens are much easier to handle and means for their protection readily suggest themselves. All hardy rhododendrons and azaleas will be much the better if protected at the roots with a covering of some such material as litter or leaves.

FIBROTTA ware, the indurated fiber goods used by almost every florist, received a medal and diploma at the Jamestown exposition.

THERE are still plenty of openings for capable greenhouse employees, but until spring opens the recent rule of two jobs for every man will not be in force.

THE only way in which business can be handled satisfactorily is to have a system that brings up every detail in sufficient season so that each one may receive attention without haste. Haste makes waste.

ADVERTISING men of wide experience, who come in contact with all classes of business men, say that the florists have passed through the autumn period of financial excitement with less loss of business than almost any other line. They say the flower business has been much more active than such necessary lines as the metal trade, which has suffered most of all, building materials and staple merchandise being next lowest. In these lines it appears to have been merely a case of suspended animation.

National Flower Show Premiums.

The premium list for the national flower show, to be held in Chicago in the fall of 1908, is now undergoing final revision. Suggestions regarding the same, as to premiums to be offered, rules and regulations to be adopted, and other matters of the kind, are requested. Such suggestions, however, should reach the undersigned at Morgan Park, Ill., within ten days from this date in order to be considered. W. N. RUDD, Chairman.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The first week in December was not as active as had been hoped. Demand was light, both locally and shipping, and the volume of sales was not up to the same week in recent years, in the experience of most wholesalers and growers. The most that could be said for the business was that it was fair, and this week does not start in much better. It always is the case that just before Christmas there is a quiet spell and this year it seems to be likely to be just a little more quiet than usual.

There have been no particularly large supplies of stock. We have had considerable dark weather, which has operated to hold back the crops, but there has been a sufficient supply in all departments, with the usual exception that now and then an order would be received after the stock had been moved. Prices generally had averaged low.

Long Beauties are more abundant and promise to be in fine shape for Christmas. Other roses are not now in the heaviest crop, but quality has been fine and there is every reason to anticipate a large supply of splendid stock for Christmas if the weather is at all favorable in the next ten days. Red promises to be scarce, for none of the growers appears to have a big crop of Richmond and stock will be of extra good quality. We have a large cut of Roses of all lengths of stem; fine heads. Maids, Brides, Killarney and Chatenay. The special call for red stock will make Richmond scarce; we shall have a fair supply.

CARNATIONS

If there is any item we are stronger on than on other stock, it is on Carnations. We will be in full crop and the best stock we ever shipped; our Enchantress have been the finest in town all fall, and we shall have them still better for Christmas. Also large lots of fine white and pink.

VIOLETS

We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. We shall have a larger supply than at any previous Christmas.

Also large supplies of Poinsettias, Valley, Sweet Peas, Bouvardia, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Stevia, etc. Plenty Green Goods, as always. An extra fine crop of Smilax now ready.

We urge early correspondence; give us your order for what you are sure to need and when you find yourself running short write or wire additional orders; if seasonable flowers are to be had in Chicago, they are to be had at Amling's.

just now. Killarney is probably the favorite of the other varieties and will be in strong demand for Christmas.

Carnations have not come in heavily, but the supply has been erratic, some days large and some days light, so that it has been a problem to supply and satisfy one's customers and make any sort of a showing to the growers. Carnations have not come on as expected. The growers say the plants are full of buds and they anticipate big crops for Christmas, but the plants seem almost to stand still and receipts do not increase as one would look for them to do.

The violet market has had a relapse. At Thanksgiving, and just after it, there was a good market, but it was not long before prices went back to the old level, which is on what the growers say is an unprofitable basis. Opinions vary as to the Christmas supply. Some houses look for exceptionally heavy receipts and others expect nothing beyond the ordinary. The retailers freely predict they will not have to pay as much for violets this Christmas as last. The receipts are wanted on December 24, which is Tuesday, a day on which comparatively few Rhinebeck violets reach this market. It is up to the growers to make special arrangements to get their shipments here as wanted. Wednesday will be too late.

Chrysanthemums are now down to a few late whites, but some good stock still is to be had. Callas and Harrisii are abundant and Paper Whites and Romans are a glut. Stevia is everywhere and mignonette is plentiful. All green goods are abundant. Good holly is to be had in spite of the predictions that there would be few berries on it and bouquet green is offered at cheap prices.

Christmas Prospects.

It is the consensus of opinion that with bright weather we shall have a considerably larger Christmas supply than ever before. The same factor will make quality fine. But the growers must not hold back for the advanced prices at Christmas, or they will defeat themselves. The man who will make the best average will be the one who keeps his stock coming in steadily as cut December 18 to 23. There is a justification for trying to make the Christmas crop as large as possible, but you can lay odds that the market December 20 and 21 will be stronger than it will be December 24. The morning of December 23 is when the bulk of the stuff should reach this market. Everything received in good condition that day is sure of a good sale, for the Christmas business will be heavy and possibly the best on record.

Some veteran wholesalers who have passed through several hard-times Christmases say that, while preceded and followed by quiet business, those Christmases have been invariably good. They explain it by saying that the men who bought diamonds for their wives when they were flush bought flowers at other times.

A Good Book by Wire.

In newspaper circles there is an old story of how a reporter got a scoop by beating the other reporters to the only telegraph wire and, after he had sent his story, holding the wire by giving the operator a copy of the Bible with instructions to telegraph Genesis until 12 o'clock.

Last week W. J. Smyth received a book by wire, from Gude Bros. Co., Washington, together with several other big designs. These were ordered of Gude's by government officials and departments, to be sent to the funeral of Gen. Palmer, formerly Public Printer. The book was on a four-foot frame, the right page made of dendrobiums, cattleyas and valley. On the left page was the inscription, "From Government Printing Office, Washington, D. C." The other designs were equally elaborate. The Gudes executed the orders on short notice by means of precise telegraphic instructions to Mr. Smyth.

Various Notes.

The shipping demand for Rhinebeck violets is steadily increasing. Having come a thousand miles to Chicago, they lose nothing by another night's travel, and many out-of-town retailers are buying thousand lots.

The A. L. Randall Co. figured on placing a car of holly, but when the car arrived December 9 it was found the orders necessitated picking up another car.

Bassett & Washburn are congratulating themselves that they will have an exceptionally heavy crop of Killarney in the next fortnight.

A vase of Fritz Bahr's white seedling of Prosperity has been on exhibition at the store of the E. F. Winterson Co. for several days. The flowers are of enormous size.

Frederick Sperry has been on the sick list for several days.

dressograph and a mimeograph as a means of quick communication with their customers.

E. C. Amling says he has not the slightest doubt of the Christmas demand taking up every good rose and carnation, but says the success of Christmas will depend upon the way the Paper Whites, Romans and such items clean up, and there is never any call for these while other stock is available.

E. H. Hunt reports that H. W. Buckbee has assured them of an especially fine lot of poinsettias for the approaching holiday.

Scheiden & Schoos say they will have a good crop of their red seedling carnation for Christmas.

Wietor Bros. say that the large quantities of stock called for on the early orders from their regular buyers indicate that the Christmas demand will be heavier than usual.

Zech & Mann are congratulating themselves that one of their rose growers will hit Christmas with his heaviest crop of Richmond.

C. W. McKellar says the leading retailers already are anxious to insure their supplies for cattleyas, dendrobiums and gardenias for Christmas.

At J. A. Budlong's the Robert Craig carnation promises to justify their faith in it at Christmas.

The Benthey-Coatsworth Co. reports the rose crop at New Castle as not especially heavy and thinks the Christmas demand will take up everything. They say the inquiries are for larger lots than usual.

The Little Rock silverware arrived December 7. The package for Poehlmann Bros. Co. had three fine cups in it, and the one for Peter Reinberg contained the Mrs. Marshall Field cup.

E. E. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., says he feels assured that all stock will be abundant for Christmas and prices more reasonable than in other years.

The local demand for orchids is good and takes all George Reinberg is cutting.

The Poehlmann Bros. Co. reports having already booked a number of orders for Christmas for its extra special grade of roses at from $35 to $50 per hundred. Last year they sold several hundred Richmond and Killarney at 50 cents each.

Mrs. P. J. Hauswirth and her son, J. Edwin Hauswirth, are continuing the business at 232 Michigan avenue and all Mr. Hauswirth's friends are turning over to them any business which they can influence.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 2, 1907.
GEO. B. HART.
Dear Sir:—Hart's Handy Handle makes a basket out of a flower pot without having to transfer the plant to a basket. We used a lot of them last Easter on azaleas and other blooming plants, and decorated the pots and handles, and the effect was the same as a basket, and sold well, as the expense was much less than using baskets and the effect was just as good. They are good any time of year and, unlike baskets, they don't get shopworn. Yours truly, SALTER BROTHERS, Florists.

Christmas

We shall have the finest stock of choice American Beauty Roses that have ever been offered in Philadelphia. Also splendidly grown Richmonds, Brides and Bridesmaids, in quantity.

Our Carnations promise to be in heavy crop. Their quality is as fine as anything we have ever handled.

In Orchids we shall have an abundance of Cattleyas and Cypripediums of high grade.

All other flowers in quantity.

can handle them, as they are not cheap.

After January 1, E. S. Thompson, of the Michigan Seed Co., South Haven, Mich., will have a stand in the Flower Growers' market, where he will sell seeds and bulbs in winter and cut flowers in summer.

The A. Dietsch Co. says 1907 has been much the best year in its history. November was a little light, but December starts in with an unusually large number of inquiries for estimates on 1908 buildings.

Leonard Kill will not deny that Rosehill, where the Reinberg plant is located, got its name because of the fame of the product of the establishment.

Sam Graff has opened a flower store at 1515 Pike place, Seattle, Wash.

J. E. Jensen, of Jensen & Dekema, says that if they were to judge simply by the volume of their own business, they would not be able to find any evidence of a dull market. They have no difficulty in disposing of all the output of their houses at good prices. There is an especially good and steadily growing demand for their new scarlet, Defiance. Their stock is all in fine shape, including several benches of cuttings.

H. N. Bruns now has as large and fine a stock of valley pips as he has ever been able to secure. He has just received several shipments from his brother at Hamburg.

O. P. Bassett started December 11 for a sojourn at Pasadena, Cal., where he will be joined a little later by Mrs. Bassett.

Among those in the trade from outside Chicago who attended the funeral of P. J. Hauswirth, December 6, were: C. C. Pollworth, F. H. Holton and Nick Zweifel, Milwaukee; Theo. A. Dorner, Lafayette, Ind.; Albert P. Hey, Springfield, Ill.

The Florists' Club meets at Handel hall tonight, December 12. The nominating committee will report. It will be rose night and a number of exhibits are expected.

G. Klopfer, of Nelson & Klopfer, Peoria, Ill., was a visitor December 10, and Mr. Kalisch, Jr., of St. Louis, has been in town looking up Christmas supplies.

NEPHROLEPIS AMERPOHLII

The most beautiful as well as the most useful Fern ever offered. It is suitable both for specimen pot plants and for using as a cut frond. Well grown stock ready now. 2¼-inch, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100; $200.00 per 1000. 4-inch, $10.00 per doz.; $75.00 per 100. Specimens in pans, $2.00, $3.00 and $5.00 each.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Conditions from December 5 to December 11 were somewhat of an anomaly. The demand has undoubtedly improved, but so has the supply, and there is not enough business to consume all the flowers that come into the market, at remunerative figures, even with the aid of extraordinary effort. Prices continue low, remarkably low for the season. Christmas is now but two weeks off, and with the moderation in weather, it seems doubtful when the long-expected advance will really come.

Carnations are the strongest feature of a not too strong market. The quality is excellent in the fancy and select grades, and most of the desirable stock sells readily. Roses are by no means in so happy a state. Richmond is the strongest, with prices higher than a week ago, even the shorter grades being in demand. Bride and Bridesmaid sell fairly until it comes to the ordinary stock. Killarney is more popular than Maid, possibly owing to the limited supply. Strenuous efforts have been made to advance the price of American Beauty, but the conditions of supply and demand will not warrant it, and we are confronted by October prices in the second week in December, an unheard of thing.

Cattleyas have shortened sufficiently to advance. Violets have fallen back since last report, despite extremely fine quality. Chrysanthemums are by no means over, Jeanne Nonin being a feature of the market. The quality is all that could be desired. It is only regretted sometimes that there is no yellow to go with this superb white. Some good medium Bonnaffons are the nearest approach, but they belong in the class below. Mrs. Jerome Jones fills the third class, with a few Minnie Bailey, Dorothy Faust and one or two others, with representatives in both the select and ordinary classes. Mignonette is fine. Bouvardia is improving. Stevia was never better, but is in oversupply. Paper Whites are almost a drug, as Romans would be were they more plentiful. Poinsettia is only cut on orders. Valley is in slight favor. Christmas greens are already becoming an important feature.

Beauties at Christmas.

The consensus of opinion among expert judges is that the price of American Beauty roses at Christmas will not equal that of the last few years. While it is possible for unfavorable weather conditions, or heavy demand, to upset this opinion, the chances are that it will be verified. The supply is much larger this year than ever before. The demand appears to have temporarily weakened, and while there will undoubtedly be a good demand at Christmas, it is questionable whether it will be sufficient to warrant the usual fancy prices at the holidays. In view of these conditions it seems reasonably safe for intending buyers to figure on being able to secure whatever stock they may require at from one-fifth to one-third less than last season.

George Burton's.

I think it was in 1901 that two decisions were reached, both of which have a bearing on the flower market in this city today. One was John Burton's conclusion that the time had come when he could establish a new place for his son on which to grow Beauties. The other was Leo Niessen's determination that he must have good Beauties all the year around to satisfy the increasing demands of his business. The result is that George Burton has been growing Beauties for the last six years, almost to the exclusion of everything else, and growing them with an ability and precision that has practically kept him in the market from July to June of each year. The rapid rise of George Burton is coincident with the immense increase in the territory covered by the Leo Niessen Co., the cut flower business now having risen to a point where the choicest roses may be required at any moment in some section of this territory.

George Burton added another range to his plant early last spring. It was completed and planted with Beauties in time to cut during the summer. The plants grew well, producing quantities of good flowers, which were marketed when good flowers were scarce. This range, while producing good stock now, is not expected to do much more until early in the spring, the later planted houses, which have been held back, being depended upon to produce the crops during the winter months.

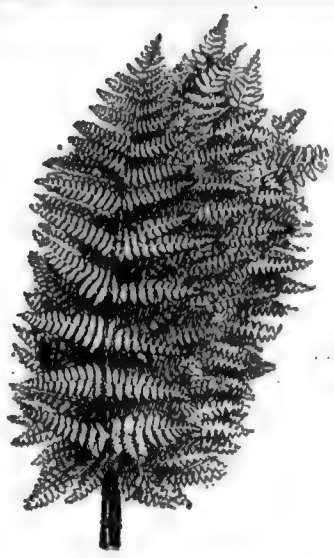
While the place is practically devoted to Beauties, which are in splendid condition, one house is still planted with Golden Gate, now in its third year, a rose that has proved most prolific with Mr. Burton. It produces strong canes, and usually comes in heavily in the dark winter months, when other roses are scarce and the demand heavy.

W. W. Coles, of Kokomo, Ind., who was formerly a member of the firm of Coles & Whitely, of Landsdowne, says that in all his travels he has never found a soil so well adapted for Beauty growing as they have at Chestnut Hill. Be this as it may, the Chestnut-Hillers understand how to use that good soil to secure results.

The December Debate.

The meeting of the Florists' Club, briefly covered by last week's report in this column, saw one of the most notable discussions ever held at a gathering of the kind. Mr. Grakelow's paper was delivered with great fervor, his Shakespearean quotation bordering on the dramatic. The debate which followed was well maintained throughout, entirely free from acrimony. The strongest point brought out by Mr. Grakelow in his argument was that if the wholesalers would devote more attention to the regulation of their credits the carfare charges on small orders would not require consideration, he believing that their practice of extending credit to those with little or no capital was pernicious. Mr. Grakelow stoutly maintained his position that were the retailers given the same opportunity as the fakers for buying flowers at low figures, they would make larger window displays, but the leading wholesalers as stoutly contended this was not the case, one of them offering to show his books in proof that the retailers always had the preference at the same figures, while another said that the fakers were shown scant courtesy, simply being given stock for which there was no demand after the possibility of other sales had ceased.

While the discussion brought the matter no nearer to a conclusion than before the debate started, much valuable information was brought out and a better understanding established of the other fellow's position. Any club might be proud of the ability and good feeling displayed by those who spoke.



Various Notes.

NASHVILLE, TENN.

Joe Browne, the genial manager of the Lischey Greenhouses, is much pleased with the new Moninger house, just finished.

The Joy Floral Co. has secured a valuable acquisition in the new member of the firm, who will take hold of the growing end. Tom Joy will handle the store in town.

Geny Bros. are doing a good business. They handle a large quantity of stock, all at retail.

McIntyre Bros. handed me a bullet. Some folks hand out lemons, but this was a genuine bullet. The plant stands on an old battlefield and numbers of bullets are occasionally turned up when plowing.

Jos. Grudy, Dreer's representative, was a caller, returning from a southern trip. He reported business good. W.

PLANTING BULBS DEEPLY.

The deep planting of bulbs in outside beds can be recommended as sound practice in the great majority of cases. When planted deeply, the root system develops enormously before the green shoot shows its nose above the soil, and the latter has plenty of support behind it should it encounter inclement weather. Again, a deeply-planted bulb is longer in pushing its growing point through the soil, and this delay often means much in an unfavorable season, one of mild weather followed by a freeze. When dealing with bulbs in pots, we take care to ensure root production before top growth by covering the pots with ashes; by deep planting we do the same for our outdoor bulbs.

The Florists' Manual

We note your advertisement in a recent number of the REVIEW of the second edition of Scott's Florists' Manual, and request that you enter our order for a copy of this valuable book. The writer is thoroughly acquainted with the first edition of this work, having often had occasion to use it for reference while a student at the Michigan Agricultural College. Please rush this order, for we feel, with Mark Twain, that we "would rather not use violence."

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

THE Haskell Seed and Implement Co. has opened at 21 South Market street, Boston.

THE Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, do a large business in birds and goldfish, and supplies, both wholesale and retail, and find a good margin of profit in it.

BOLGIANO & SON, Baltimore, are seeking to extend their trade with southern trucking sections by getting commission merchants at the big markets to represent them in securing orders on a commission basis.

SALES of Country Gentleman sweet corn at $7 per bushel are reported and $8 has been asked, but no record of a sale at this price is on file. Evergreen is probably worth as much as Country Gentleman, but the holders of it have not yet got their proper quota of nerve and $5 for it is the maximum figure so far asked.

THE flurry in canners' peas continues, but, like the financial flurry, it is being kept well in hand. There has been no complaint that any canner has been unable to get what peas he has needed where he was willing to pay the price, and an odd car may yet be secured by anyone who needs it badly. Aside from the canners' favorite sorts, there will probably be enough peas to go around, but in all cases it is thought that prices will be higher than those ruling last season.

THE sweet-corn growers seem to be having their own troubles now. In addition to the bad drying weather, many of the farmers with whom they have contracts are selling the corn to outsiders. This is unfortunate, of course, but the sweet corn people are not the only ones who have these things confronting them. The pea and bean growers are making the same complaint, and it seems to be a case of just taking the medicine.

ONION sets at the present time are not giving anyone worry, except that the whites in storage continue to fall away owing to the dry rot. Yellows and reds are keeping fairly well. When the January shipments begin to go out, conditions may change materially and by February the situation will be known. The January shipments are the ones that have the most bearing on the market, as by that time the keeping quality of the crop can be determined and if there is a weak spot anywhere it has usually shown itself.

THE first of the 1908 general retail catalogues to reach the REVIEW is that of A. T. Boddington, New York, with a cosmos cover in pink and green designed by H. A. Bunyard. The book is handsomely printed and splendidly illus-

A SPECIAL LIGHT MIXTURE

...OF...

GLADIOLI FOR FLORISTS

What do You Think of This Unparalleled Offer?

You cannot duplicate the quality for several times the price.

There are varieties in this mixture you would not sell for $15.00 per 100.

The vitality and power of multiplication is exceptional.

.....F. O. B. Berlin, N. Y.

This order is given by me—us and taken by you with the understanding that if given proper soil and cultivation, we can, after blooming this season (1908), conscientiously say we have not received full value I—we can, at harvest time, return the stock, together with its increase in bulbs and cormels to you via freight—express and you will refund the above amount paid.

If returned freight—express charges will be paid by me—us.

This order has been accepted and entered under the above conditions.

Berlin, N. Y.....190..

For forcing I can recommend it as being almost equal to the best named varieties generally used for that purpose.

It contains named novelties of merit and hybrids bred especially to supply the needs of Florists requiring light colors.

Having for many years experimented extensively to the end of supplying a White and Light Mixture especially adapted to the Florists' trade, for Funeral and Decorative work where light colors alone would be appropriate, I am now prepared to furnish my Meadowvale Florists' Light Mixture, which I can guarantee to contain the best quality obtainable in the world at the price. There is such a variation in Florists' Mixtures, as generally offered, that I do not wonder at the frequent disgust of the purchaser, and in my preparation of this stock I have endeavored to eliminate every variety with which the most critical florist could find fault.

This Mixture was offered in Spring of 1906 for the first time and over 500,000 were placed and not one complaint received, a sure indication that it was favorably received by the Florists. For this season, 1908, it will be sold only by me and in lots of not less than 1000 or more. Price, $15.00 per 1000, F. O. B. Berlin, N. Y., each with order, and will be sold subject to the conditions on above order blank.

This offer will hold good as long as the stock lasts and orders will be entered in their turn, although shipment may not be required until later. When the stock is all sold, this offer will be withdrawn, without further notice, therefore do not delay and miss it. May I not have the opportunity of demonstrating that I have a Mixture which, after growing one season, you would not part with for double the price paid? If so, fill out the order blank and send to me with remittance and I will sign and return duplicate to you.

Illustrated Catalogue of Other Collections, Mixtures and Named Varieties will be Mailed upon Application.

THE general retail seed catalogue of the Barteldes Seed Co., Lawrence, Kas., arrived December 11. It quotes Southport White Globe at $3.50; Red Globe, $2.50; Yellow Globe, $2.50; Yellow Danvers, $2.25, and most other sorts $2.

THE first general retail seed catalogue for 1908 to come to hand, that of A. T. Boddington, New York, quotes onion as follows: Southport White Globe, $3.50 lb.; Yellow Globe Danvers, $2.50; Red Wethersfield, $2; Southport Red Globe, $2.50.

A NEW cantaloupe region in the vicinity of Phoenix, Ariz., is rapidly being developed and it is said the acreage will be largely increased in 1908. Heretofore two shipping associations have handled the output, but next season there will be three and perhaps more.

M. CRAWFORD has returned to Cuyahoga Falls, O., after a summer spent in experimental work at Shiocton, Wis. His work is said not to have wholly confirmed the high opinion of its property for market garden purposes held by the Shiocton Gardens Lands Co., and Mr. Crawford has shipped back to Ohio his stock of gladiolus bulbs.

BEANS, notwithstanding the unfavorable reports some time ago, will be plentiful enough for all legitimate demand, in the opinion of most of the growers. Deliveries are now coming in from the farmers and they are panning out better than was anticipated. The milling and hand picking may change the situation some, but it is not thought that any variety will be scarce enough to cause trouble.

CRUTCHFIELD & WOOLFOLK, of Pittsburg, are large handlers of cantaloupes in the various markets and act as distributing agents for several associations of growers. For several reasons they have this season become large buyers of Rocky

AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Veitchii.

The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn.

In size the leaves are small, beautifully dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump.

This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

quantities of special seeds now required in these sections is beyond the wildest imaginings of a half dozen years ago.

Montgomery Ward & Co., Chicago, are at work on their third annual special seed catalogue.

Carrot seed will be scarce, from all indications. The foreign growers are cutting heavily on Danvers and other standard sorts and last year's crops were pretty generally disposed of, so that little carrot seed is being carried.

The Children's School Farm, a New York institution organized for the purpose of creating an interest in gardening among school children, was awarded a gold medal at the Jamestown exposition. The seed used was supplied by J. M. Thorburn & Co.

The lithographed cover of the Barteldes Seed Co. catalogue for 1908 shows a prosperous looking farmer sowing seeds on a globe and bears the inscription, "Western Seeds to All the World." Manager C. R. Root says they think it the best thing they have yet had.

ONION SEED.

The onion seed situation has not cleared any. It is the opinion of many of those who want to buy that there is plenty of seed stowed away somewhere and that it will be offered at lower prices later on. What these prospective purchasers base their idea that there is plenty of seed on, is a conundrum, as there seems to be no good reason for it. It is a certainty that the flat sorts of red and yellow are scarce and that the onion-set growers will not find enough of American grown seed to plant more than half of the acreage they contemplate sowing. It may be that there will be enough foreign seed to make up the deficiency, but even so the price is bound to be higher than usual. As has been stated frequently in this column, there is no scarcity of the varieties that are usually sown for the market onions, except the White Globe. It is the onion-set producers who will find it hard to get a supply of the seed that will be safe for an onion-set crop.

under the above heading on pages 46 and 47 of the issue of the REVIEW for November 14, in regard to my first report on natural grass seeds this season. In the first place I wish to point out that there was a lapse of over five weeks between the date on which my first report was issued (September 16) and the date of the "large exporter's" "correction" (October 22).

Moreover, my first report on the crop of natural grass seeds was issued several weeks before that of any other German seed house, and by the time others, including the gentleman at Aschaffenburg, were ready to make a report on the crop, I had already kept my friends posted on the situation of foxtail and all other grasses. Owing to unsually heavy pressure of business, it had been overlooked to follow up my first report by others for publication in the REVIEW.

The above will no doubt suffice to prove that it is a very bold undertaking to correct a report, which was quite correctly describing the situation at the time.

As to the "correction," which is more misleading than anything I have read so far, all I have to say is that I am not aware that as much as 100 marks had been paid for rough seed, as the correspondent at Aschaffenburg says, neither now nor any time before since the beginning of this season. SEED WARRANTY.

Referring to the statements of leading seedsmen in the matter of non-warranty of Prizetaker onion, the editor of the Rural New Yorker says:

"Under the circumstances they take a sensible position, for anyone who knows about seed growing will understand how many chances there are for a mix-up. In some cases, however, the mistakes of a seedsman are serious, and lead to great trouble and loss. One case now up for adjustment is a typical one. An onion grower of long experience has developed a good trade for a white onion. He bought seed, as he supposed, of this variety last spring from a prominent seedsman. The package was marked properly, but bore the usual statement about a seedsman's guarantee. You can't tell one variety of onion seed from another, and this seed was all planted and well cared for. A large proportion of it turned out to be an inferior yellow onion. Thus the grower not only lost several hundred dollars on his crops, but his special market for white onions was injured, since he could not supply his regular customers. He claims, and with reason, that some one in the seedsman's employ made a mistake and gave him seed of yellow onions in place of white. This seems evident, for the seedsman says no one else has complained. The grower therefore claims that the seedsman should make good the loss on the crop, and his demand seems a reasonable one. It would be no redress for the seedsman to say he will send more seed—for he

IN AID OF THE FARMER.

The report of the appointment clerk of the U. S. Department of Agriculture for 1907 shows that there were on the rolls of the department at the close of the fiscal year 9,107 employees. Of the entire force 1,972 were employed in the District of Columbia and 7,135 outside of the District.

The following figures are sufficient to show the growth of the department during the last forty years: In 1867 the total number of persons employed was 99; in 1877 the total number was 77; in 1887 there were 328 employees; by 1897 the number had increased to 2,444, and on July 1, 1907, the total number of persons employed had reached 9,107.

The results of the investigations conducted by the department are made known and become available for the use of the people by the means of publications, of which 1,415 were issued during the year, 596 being new and 819 reprints. These publications comprised 52,363 printed pages, and the total number of copies aggregated 16,746,910, an increase of 3,258,889 copies over last year. But, says Secretary Wilson in his annual report, "the publication work of the department has assumed such magnitude that only by the most careful editorial supervision, and by the enforcement of the most rigid economy in the printing, and by the exercise of constant discretion in the distribution of documents, has it been possible to accomplish the results attained with the present appropriation."

"For the prosecution of the various activities of the Department of Agriculture during the year ending June 30, 1907, including the permanent appropriation of $3,000,000 for meat inspection and other special appropriations, Congress appropriated the sum of $11,557,691.36, this amount being $4,382,001.36 in excess of that similarly appropriated for the preceding year."

A good many people, at first thought, might be inclined to question if the benefits resulting from the "activities" of the department are worth the very considerable sum of over eleven millions of dollars, but when it is realized that the expenditure per capita of the population is less than 15 cents, there can be no doubt that we get big value for our money.

Holly! Holly!

We have personally selected a magnificent lot of well berried holly that is equal, if not superior, to anything ever seen in the Philadelphia market. Price, $4.00 per case; specially selected cases, $5.00 each.

HOLLY WREATHS, very fine, $12.50 per 100; extra heavy and well berried, $15.00 per 100.

PACIFIC COAST.

SANTA CRUZ, CAL.—Dr. J. P. Parker, the orchid grower, has bought an interest in the Leedham Bulb Co. and is vice-president and a director of the company.

EXPERIMENTS for the control of peach blight in California have shown that the disease can be completely controlled by the use of standard Bordeaux mixture, or lime and sulphur wash, applied early in the fall, about the time of the first rains. The methods recommended by the U. S. Department of Agriculture were widely used in California last season, with complete success, and it is stated that the treatment has meant many millions of dollars to the peach industry of that state.

PORTLAND, ORE.

It sounds good to hear such favorable reports of the business being done by the local florists. November made a good record, with a great demand for funeral work. Thanksgiving and the annual football game on that day proved a grand finale to the month's business, with a tremendous sale of chrysanthemums. While there were as many fine blooms sold as last year, yet we were obliged to shave the price. Everybody says that the financial situation is improving, but we are still transacting business with stage money. A few of us got hit for small amounts when the banks closed, but no knockout blows were reported.

The growers are busy people right now, and never have we seen stock so plentiful or looking finer during the short days. Harrisii lilies grown from cold storage bulbs made their appearance three weeks ago and offered a variety to the regular line of material. Paper Whites and Romans are recent arrivals and we will use them in large quantities the next two months.

The rainy season is with us now, though there are occasionally intervals of a bright day or two, and things might look a great deal worse.

H. J. M.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Business is quiet enough at present to suit anyone. There is almost nothing doing in the floral line, with the exception of a little funeral work, and that seems to be confined principally to sprays and bunches. The expected rainfall has arrived, but only a slight shower to lay the city's dust. We have had practically no frost thus far this season and, taking it as a whole, the weather is the best that could be imagined for all kinds of stock. This is particularly noticeable with violets and it has been very favorable also for the chrysanthemum growers.

Roses are a little scarcer than they were a few days ago, but there is plenty of short-stemmed stock of all kinds. Fancy Beauties do not come to town in anything but very small packages.

Carnations have not advanced any in price since before Thanksgiving and they are in ample supply for the trade.

Quite a few poinsettias are being sent here from the south. The crop is in good shape so far, and unless unforeseen circumstances occur there will be plenty to go around.

Narcissi, Roman hyacinths and valley move slowly. Smilax and other kinds of green stuff are very plentiful. Stevia is being used largely for mixing with sprays and bunches and will last until after the holidays.

Various Notes.

Joseph R. Jacques has opened with a large and complete assortment of florists' supplies at 1339 Bush street.

Geo. Grainger has gone on a visit to Los Angeles and San Diego. He will return home in about two weeks.

Joseph A. Furtado has leased the nurseries formerly owned by the Realty Syndicate of Oakland and will operate them in future.

C. C. Morse & Co. are receiving large consignments of Japanese stock at this time for their winter trade. They have made large improvements at their Glen Echo nurseries.

The Union Florists, on Sixteenth and Mission streets, have made a splendid showing of holiday goods and have one of the best establishments in their part of town.

The Rosarie, on California street, reports a good Thanksgiving trade and several big decorations on hand for Christmas.

Vegetable Forcing.

E. C. STAMMERJOHN, Boonville, Mo., grows lettuces, radishes and onions in hotbeds south of his greenhouses and finds them a decidedly profitable winter crop.

THE low prices at which lettuce has sold at Chicago thus far this season have put a stop, at least for the time being, to talk of increasing glass areas for next year.

As indicating the great expansion which took place in the vegetable forcing industry in 1907, Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago, says that twenty per cent of its sales of greenhouse boilers this year have been to vegetable growers.

IT is reported that Searles Bros., Toledo, O., who two years ago built what is said to be the largest range of vegetable houses ever erected at one time in this country, ten houses 15x750, and who last season added five more such structures, are planning to this season increase the plant by erecting eleven additional houses of the same dimensions.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Dec. 10.—Cucumbers, 60c to 80c doz.; lettuce, 10c to 15c case; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches.

BOSTON, Dec. 9.—Tomatoes, 12c to 15c lb.; cucumbers, $6 to $8 box; romaine, 75c doz.; escarolle, 75c doz.; lettuce, 25c to 50c box; parsley, 50c to $1 box; radishes, $1 to $1.50 box; mushrooms, 50c to 60c lb.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—No. 1 cucumbers, 75c to $1 doz.; No. 2, $2 to $3 box; lettuce, 50c to $1 per strap of 3 doz.; mushrooms, 15c to 50c lb.; mint, 25c to 40c doz. bunches; radishes, $1.50 to $3 per 100 bunches; tomatoes, 10c to 20c lb.

THE PROSPECT.

Referring to the prospect for 1908 as it appears to the Ohio lettuce growers, E. A. Dunbar, sales manager for the Ashtabula Lettuce Growers' Association, Ashtabula, O., writes as follows: "December finds the winter vegetable business just about on a par basis. The staple products are moving at fair average prices, with enough stock to supply all demands. It will require good crops and good management to pay dividends in 1908, which means, eventually, the survival of the fittest. The year 1908 will bring more conservative business management, decreased demand and lower prices."

MILDEW ON CUCUMBERS.

The cucumber is a tender plant and will not endure some of the severe methods employed for combating aphis and mildew on other plants. The careful spraying of cucumbers with ammoniacal carbonate of copper solution, which is made by dissolving five ounces of carbonate of copper in three pints of strong ammonia (26 degree) is recommended. This stock solution should be diluted to forty-five gallons when used—that is, one pint of the solution will make fifteen gallons of the spraying mixture. This should be applied with a strong force pump through either a Vermorel or a similar nozzle and should keep the house free from mildew.

A BED OF MUSHROOMS

Raised from our Spawn, will bear longer and yield better than from any other variety of Spawn. This is proven by facts. Full particulars and information how to succeed in mushroom raising free. We warrant you if using our method of growing mushrooms that all will go well.

An additional safeguard is to keep the heating pipes at all times covered with sulphur. When it is not desirable to moisten the foliage of the plants with a spray the distillation of sulphur is effective. This is accompanied by some danger, however, and the novice should carefully observe and carry out every detail.

TOMATOES.

It is generally conceded that the single-stem system is the most practicable for the commercial grower, the plants being set from twelve to fourteen inches apart, according to variety and width of bench. One stake only is necessary for each plant, but this should be a strong one and should have the support of at least one wire; if two, all the better. Where one only is used it should be near the top of the stakes, to which these should be firmly attached. Another wire about half way up the stakes will help to stiffen and strengthen the whole thing.

The plants should be supported as soon as planted by being loosely tied to the stakes. Loosely means that the string is tied so as to allow for the swelling of the stem; otherwise it will become girdled as growth proceeds. To make sure that the string will stay in place it should be wrapped around the stake first, then around the stake and stem together and securely tied. Raffia is the best and cheapest material to use. As growth proceeds tying should be frequently attended to, as the points will draw over to the light and become bent if tying is too long delayed.

All the pinching that is necessary is to keep all side growths taken out as they appear, and after the plants have reached the top of the stakes to pinch out the points and stop their skyward journey. We also find that quite frequently growths appear on the ends of the bunches of fruit, especially when the plants are growing strong. As these are a decided detriment to the development of the fruit, they should be pinched out as they appear.

We sometimes have found it necessary to cut away part of the leaves of some varieties to admit the light and prevent crowding, but as a rule varieties that make such heavy foliage as to make this necessary are not the most profitable ones to grow. Though they are generally the producers of the heaviest fruit, they will not produce so much weight or fruit per plant as some of the less rampant growers. W. S.

PIERRE, S. D.—Enoe & Barney have just completed a well built new house, 20x90, and expect now to produce most of their own stock. They have also installed a new Kroeschell boiler, capable of taking care of 8,000 square feet of glass.

PLEASE allow me to tell you how much I have enjoyed the REVIEW this year. I know that I never spent a dollar in my life that brought me more pleasure or profit. I have especially enjoyed the chrysanthemum notes; they tell me just what I want to know.—C. S. BARNETT, Eureka Springs, Ark.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.
Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

FRUIT trees should not be pruned while the wood is in a frozen condition.

GIFFORD PINCHOT, who has charge of the government's forest service, is a millionaire and sticks to his job because he likes the work rather than for the $5,000 a year it pays him.

INVESTIGATIONS of the apple soils of California have shown that there is a close relationship between the keeping qualities of the apples and the various kinds of soils on which they are grown.

A GOOD many nurseries find themselves in a position where they don't care so very much what spring brings forth; the long and busy fall season has cleaned them up closer than they ever were at this date.

THE Sheridan-Oest Co., New York, has been incorporated with $100,000 authorized capital stock. The directors are Rudolph J. Bodmer, Mount Vernon; Lester S. Abberly and Royal B. Cushing, New York city. A general nursery business will be done.

APPLE trees live longest and produce the heaviest crops where the soil is fairly heavy and of a substantial, loamy character. The pear will thrive in soil suitable for the apple, only the roots of the pear stock will find their way into the hard subsoil sooner than those of the apple.

IT is extremely hazardous to attempt the moving of very large and valuable specimen evergreens when there is a probability of all the soil falling away from the roots. In winter, when the ground is hardened by frost, such trees can be moved without the least likelihood of failure. All that is necessary to move them successfully is the equipment for the conveyance of large balls to the destination of the trees.

CUTTINGS of a great many kinds of evergreens will root readily in winter when placed in cutting boxes which have previously been filled with sand or what is commonly called sandy soil, if the boxes are placed where a little heat will reach them from underneath. The temperature otherwise will suit them when as cool as it in all likelihood can be had. The cuttings may also be put in the propagating bench in the same manner as rose cuttings.

THERE is an increased demand for trained fruit trees for planting outdoors for the twofold purpose of pleasure and profit. Perhaps the frequent visits of Americans to European countries have more than a little to do with this inclination to derive some profit from trees without in the least detracting from the appearance of the surroundings. Garden walls, fences and trellises can with advantage be utilized for the support of various fruit bearing trees, such as peaches, pears or plums. When properly attended to, fruit of larger size and of better quality can be produced from trees planted in such a way than from trees grown in the ordinary way.

Chionanthus Virginica.

THE demand for trees is growing rapidly, but he who benefits by it must not only know how to grow them but he must also know how to dispose of them.

THE tulip tree, or Liriodendron tulipifera, is one of the most elegant trees that thrive satisfactorily in many parts of this country. The foliage is glossy and of peculiar form, and the appearance of the tree, when growing under favorable conditions, is such that in grand effect it is not surpassed by any other deciduous tree. This tree is especially well suited for avenues and for planting with the ultimate object of having isolated specimens in parks and in close proximity to imposing buildings. The tulip tree, after it has attained considerable size, is rather hard to transplant successfully. It is well, therefore, to plant them when young and in permanent positions.

MOVING EVERGREENS.

This is the best time of the year to handle large evergreen stock from the open ground in California. This includes everything in the line of palms and other stock that is not considered easy to handle under any circumstances after it has been standing several years in the open ground. A great many gardeners have an idea that early in the spring is the proper time to shift evergreen stock that is too large to grow in pots and with which there is always considerable risk in handling.

Acacias, peppers, grevilleas, eucalyptus, cedars and dozens of other varieties that I might mention, which are usually looked on as being delicate propositions under all conditions, can be moved with impunity provided good balls of earth are taken and there is no severe check in the proceedings.

To insure success, the stock must still be in a growing condition, and there must be no dry, frosty weather until they get a new start in the ground. Neither of these conditions is usually found here in the early spring or late winter months. The trees are usually as dormant as it is possible for them to be, and, in addition, the dry, frosty weather is likely to take all the moisture from the leaves and branches before the roots have had an opportunity to take hold of their new situation and have commenced to send sap upward to replace the evaporation from the foliage.

This explains entirely why there is so much difficulty in handling large evergreens early in the spring months, but of course refers only to such kinds as are handled with more or less difficulty at any season.

Take such a tree as the Grevillea robusta. It is, unless conditions are just right, one of the most difficult trees to handle from the open ground, but at this time of the year there is absolutely no trouble, even when they have been standing for years in the same situation.

A good ball of earth is always essential, and also a good watering or two after they are transplanted, unless the ground happens to be sufficiently moist from the natural conditions. G.

CHIONANTHUS VIRGINICA.

The well known white fringe, Chionanthus Virginica, is one of the most striking lawn trees of moderate dimensions in cultivation. When in flower a well-grown specimen on a lawn cannot fail to rivet the attention. The dark-green leaves and the wealth of gracefully drooping white panicles which are produced from the middle to the end of June produce a floral picture which is hard to rival.

While looked upon as somewhat tender in the northern states, I have seen no injury come to plants from recent severe winters when temperatures of 20 degrees to 30 degrees below zero were recorded. The plants seem to do best in a deep and rather moist soil, where they can be fully exposed to the sun. Propagation from seeds sown in cold-frames is usually resorted to, but plants may also be raised from layers and grafting. In Europe it is quite commonly grafted on the common ash.

W. N. C.

CROWN GALL.

The pathologists in the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and in some of the experiment stations, have for a number of years had under investigation a disease of fruits commonly known as crown gall. Heretofore no organism has been definitely proved to be the cause of this disease. The results of the department's work the last season indicate that there are two types of the malady. One form, which occurs in apples, producing hard galls, appears to be non-contagious, while the other, the soft gall, which occurs occasionally on apples and is the common form on stone fruits, especially the peach and plum, is very contagious. Two pathologists working on a similar disease in another plant have isolated an organism which produces galls practically identical with the soft crown gall on the peach, plum, hop and numerous other plants. This is an exceedingly important line of investigation, and doubtless will pave the way for securing information which will be worth a great deal to the fruit interests of the country.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

Trade is fair, but the market lacks that snappy feeling it ought to enjoy at this season of the year. Thanksgiving business was not up to last year. Buyers hesitated in putting in good supplies and prices would not hold firm. Carnations which were quoted at 4 cents to 6 cents found buyers taking them slowly and the supply was greater than the demand. Roses sold fairly, but plenty of white stock was left over. Violets, stevia, valley and Paper Whites were plentiful. The season on mums fell below the average of former years. Medium grades sold well, but it was difficult to get the price on the large fancies.

Bouquet green is coming in plentifully now. Pickers were holding it much too high and jobbers were overbidding each other to get it. The result was that prices kept soaring and pickers were busy getting in all they could, until now supply exceeds demand. The first holly has arrived and the quality is good.

C. S. P.

MEMPHIS, TENN.

Olaf Johnson says he will sell out to a hustler, but it is not the fellow who has a flourishing business who wants to let go. The sick man of the east is not in it, and should a possible purchaser turn up I question if Mr. Johnson would give up, as his property is steadily increasing in value and he does a big business. He realizes there is a fine field for a wholesale growing establishment, both in plants and cut flowers, and predicts the time will come when such a place will exist.

The Memphis Floral Co. does a large shipping retail business, in addition to the floral department. J. Haisch has charge of this end, while W. Hume does the buying and sees to the drummers, of whom there were three at the time of my visit. As he says, they are the life of the business.

Pearson & McCarty handle a good cemetery business and report an increasing demand for funeral pieces of less extravagant design than formerly. W.

FOSTORIA, O.—Next spring the Fostoria Floral Co. will add about 20,000 feet of glass to its already large plant and will considerably increase the output of cut flowers and bedding plants.

New Carnation — Brilliant Scarlet

DEFIANCE

There are Seven Reasons Why You Should Grow Defiance, and They Are:

1st. It is by far the best color seen in a scarlet carnation; it is the true velvety scarlet and not red; it will average three inches in diameter throughout the season.

2d. It is unexcelled for productiveness by any carnation in commerce today.

3d. It is a clean and upright grower, producing an abundance of high grade flowers without any special treatment.

4th. It is in perfect health and not subject to rust or any other disease which is very prevalent amongst other carnations today.

5th. It is of perfect form. Blooms are very symmetrical; center nicely built up and very full, but not so as to appear crowded; stems are very stiff and wiry, holding the flowers perfectly erect.

6th. It is a scarlet for the entire season, and can be had in crop in October, continuing through the entire season. It does not lose its color in bright sunlight—in fact it improves under a bright sun when other reds fade.

7th. It is the only scarlet today, and by growing DEFIANCE you will be satisfied it has no faults; it is full of vigor and will do the work when other scarlets fail.

Strong, well-rooted cuttings, every one guaranteed, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Usual discount on large orders. January delivery as yet.

LLOYD

No Gold Brick

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Unrooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. 10 per cent discount for cash with order.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

At this time of the year in New Orleans, when the trade in plants is reduced to the selling of a few palms and ferns for inside decorations, business is bound to be dull with most of the florists. Balls and weddings give paying work to a few, but many others are doing the best they can with a small trade. Preparations for an early opening in the spring are made all around, and from the appearance of things stock will be plentiful. The weather has been quite mild so far.

Various Notes.

George Thomas is quite successful with annuals. The season opens early down here and the first annuals on the market are the ones of real value, bringing good resturns. To have them in this condition requires skilful attention, which they receive in full from Mr. Thomas. He furnishes also part of the trade with early sweet peas. They stand our winters outside in the open ground.

Peter Kaul has been a direct importer of such plants as laurus, araucarias, rhododendrons and other stock coming from Belgium. With the idea of building another greenhouse, he has a large general assortment getting ready for the market in two months from now.

The contract of keeping Canal avenue has been given by the year to John Doberto.

Richard Chevalier, one of our chrysanthemum growers, intends opening a general florists' establishment, on Caroleton avenue, near Maple. M. M. L.

JOHNSTOWN, PA.—Abraham Hostetler has completed a greenhouse 31x103 for growing vegetables.

AS a matter of business policy it pays to satisfy a customer. This I am aiming to do, in order to have your good will as well as your trade. Rest assured that I will do all in my power to satisfy you, for I am well equipped (better than ever) to supply you with

WASHINGTON.

Current Comment.

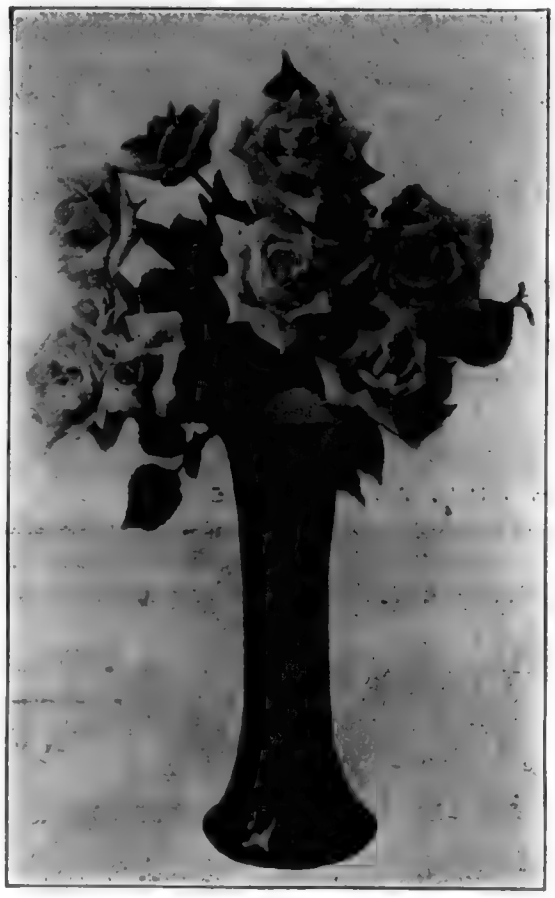
The week opened with a cold snap and the first real snow storm of the season. The stores report business about the same as last week. Debutante bunches had the call and everyone got his share. Several good decorations are booked for debuts the coming week. Some good funeral orders were booked by the Gude firm and telegraphed to Chicago for the funeral of Gen. Palmer, former public printer.

Learning of the sad death of Secretary Phil Hauswirth, a special meeting of the directors of the Florists' Club was called and a suitable floral offering was ordered, which was heartily approved by the club at the meeting held December 6. Wm. F. Gude, James Carbery and J. J. Harty were appointed as a committee to draft suitable resolutions to convey our sympathy to the bereaved family.

The coming carnation convention was discussed at the last club meeting and several prizes donated by the local members. Mrs. Florence Hading sent a vote of thanks to the club for the show flowers sent to the hospitals.

Peter Bisset has gone to Porto Rico, where he will spend a few weeks for his health.

F. H. Kramer has secured the stand formerly occupied by the American Rose Co., in Center market. They have given up their business in the market. Mr. Kramer was all smiles as the boys dropped in to congratulate him on winning the first prize, silver medal and club certificate at the Baltimore show with his Queen Beatrice rose.



A trip to Geo. Field's found everything in ship shape, but a month behind, as Mr. Field puts it. He cannot account for it. Cypripediums should be plentiful now and there are plenty of buds, but they do not open. Cattleyas are late. He reports a much larger demand than usual for dendrobiums.

Carl Kausch, formerly with the Schultz Co., of Louisville, Ky., has taken a position with the Washington Florists Co.

F street will have a new Greek flower dealer if he can secure a location.

E. J. Fancourt, of the Pennock-Meehan Co., was a visitor. O. O.

AUBURN, N. Y.—A. Patrick has opened a store at 80 Genesee street, for the disposal of a part of the output of his greenhouses.

THE NEW ROSE

Wm. R. Smith

An exceedingly strong growing variety of the type of Kaiserin. The easiest to grow and most vigorous of any rose we have ever grown. Good for forcing from April to December and an ideal bedder. Very heavy, healthy foliage; long, heavy stems; long, extra-full buds, light shell-pink.

SPRINGFIELD, OHIO.

Club Meeting.

In spite of a stormy evening, the meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club, held December 9, was well attended. A communication from W. H. Stackhouse, president of the Commercial Club of Springfield, was read, in which an invitation was extended to the florists to attend a meeting on the evening of December 19, at which a speaker of national reputation will address the two clubs and other citizens on the subject of the extension of our park system, to be followed by an informal buffet lunch and smoker. This invitation was unanimously accepted and the florists will attend in a body.

The committee on civic improvement reported progress and the program committee announced that the January meeting will be in charge of the local retail florists, with such topic as they may choose to present.

A communication from a florist-nurseryman desirous of locating in or near Springfield was discussed and referred to the president and secretary for further correspondence. This project would require from twenty-five to fifty acres of suitable land and would add volume and variety to the industry.

It was the sense of the meeting that the local press had not given due publicity to the offer made by P. M. Cartmell in his address at the banquet held in November. In the way of encouragement to the civic improvement idea, Mr. Cartmell makes a standing offer of $100 to any block 400 or more feet square, now fenced about in an established part of the city, which will entirely remove fences from its front lawns.

After the transaction of routine business, the club adjourned to the dining-room, where a substantial Dutch lunch was served by Edward Kriegbaum and Opha Jackson, of the entertainment committee, followed by the reading of mock "indictments" against various members who were called upon to respond, and in a majority of cases pleaded guilty to the charges, greatly to the amusement of their fellow members. Prepare For . . . CHRISTMAS

An immense stock of CHOICE CHRISTMAS PLANTS are now ready for immediate shipment.

Our prosperous greenhouses are now turned into big slaughtering houses. Can't be helped, down goes the ax and cuts prices in half. Why? We want the room after Christmas to grow our immense Easter stock. "Have you ever heard of Godfrey Aschmann?" "How do you spell it?" "G-o-d-f-r-e-y A-s-c-h-m-a-n-n." "O! Yes, the man who lives in Philadelphia, 1012 Ontario St., the great importer of and dealer in Araucarias. Every child, woman and man in the florist trade all over the country has heard of him." That is the man who can give you bargains. Just what you are looking for, bargains in times like this of business depression. Is it possible to sell an Araucaria Robusta Compacta or Excelsa Glauca, the lion of the araucaria family, as big as a Christmas tree, worth $10 00 for only $2.50? Yes, Aschmann does it. How to trim: Tie a bow of pink, red or lavender ribbon about half way up on the tree, and you will have a light in your store window that will never be forgotten by passers-by.

Have Araucarias to Beat the Band

At only half of their normal price. How is it that Aschmann can sell so cheap? It is strange. Answer: Because we have made a specialty of importing and growing araucarias for the past 15 years. Have them grown for us by an araucaria specialist of Ghent, Belgium, under contract; about 10,000 every year of Robusta Compacta, Glauca and Excelsa in all sizes; these are shipped to us in the spring of every year.

Just Look What Bargains I Can Give You for the Holidays

Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, perfect jewels in shape and color, as wide as high. These varieties are the best varieties of araucarias. Have a house full. Specimen plants, 6 to 7-in. pots, 6-year-old, 4, 5, 6 tiers, 28 to 40 inches high, usual price, $10.00 to $12 00, cut down to $3.00; 6 to 7-in. pots, 6-year-old, 4, 5, 6 tiers, about 25 to 28 inches high, usual price, $5.00, cut down to $2 50; 6-in. pots, 5-year-old, 3 to 4 tiers, 18 to 20 inches high, very bushy, usual price, $3.50, cut down to $1.50 and $1.75; 6-in. pots, 3 to 4 tiers, Glauca only, $1.25.

Araucaria Excelsa, specimen plants, 6-year-old, 6 to 7-in. pots, 5 to 6 tiers, 25 to 30 inches high, usual price, $3.00, cut down to $1 25 and $1 50; 6-in. pots, 5-year-old, 5 tiers, 22 to 25 inches high, usual price, $2.00, cut down to $1.00; 6 in. pots, 4 to 5-year-old, 4 to 5 tiers, 20 to 22 inches high, usual price, $1.50, cut down to 75c; 5½-in. pots, 4-year-old, 3 to 4 tiers, 12 to 16 inches high, 50c to 60c; 5¼-in. pots, 2-year-old, 2 to 3 tiers, stocky little plants, 40c. 60-cent size are scarce; we substitute 75-cent, in case we are out of 60-cent size; have plenty 40-cent size.

Three Houses Full of Choice Nephrolepis

Have a middle bench full of Whitmani in splendid shape, 7-in. pots, larger than the 8-in., made up in July, 3 plants in a pot, now as big as a bushel basket, worth $3.00, cut down to $1.25 and $1.50 per pot; 6 in pots, very handsome, 50c, 75c for middle size, $1.00 each for very heavy Boston ferns. Have about 2500 in all sizes in good condition; 8-in. pots, made up, very bushy, as big as a washtub, worth $3.00, cut down to $1 25 and $1.50 per pot; 7-in. pots, as big as a bushel basket, worth $2.00 each, cut down to 75c and $1 00; 6-in. pots, very large, worth $1 00, only 50c; 5 to 5½-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 40c. Scottii ferns, 7-in. pots, very large, worth $2.00, cut down to $1.00 each; 7-in., specimens, worth $2.50, cut down to $1.25; 6-in. pots, very large, worth $1.00, cut down to 50c, 60c and 75c; 5 to 5½-in. pots, 25c, 35c, 40c. Piersoni fern, 4-in., 25c; 5 to 5½ in., 30c, 40c; 6-in., 50c. Amerpohlii, small, 4-in. pots, 50c.

Pteris Wilsoni, very handsome, 5¼-in. pots, 20 cents.

MR. GODFREY ASCHMANN:

MY DEAR SIR—The shipment of plants recently ordered from you came to hand in good condition. Kindly accept our thanks for your prompt attention.

Yours very truly,
A. T. ERVIN, Associate Professor.

The good old year is dying, the dark days come,
No florist should be sighing o'er work undone;
Springlike with blossoms gleaming, fragrant and gay,
Should be both store and greenhouse, for Xmas day.
To Aschmann you should travel fast, and buy the best,
Or mail your orders, while they last, he'll do the rest.
Then when you balance up your books, you all will say
You never on more dollars looked than Xmas day.

Please mention if in or out of pots. All goods must travel at purchaser's risk. Cash with order, please.

NEWPORT, R. I.

Current Comment.

The prospects for Christmas are getting brighter as the time approaches.

Zeigler has secured a lease of the store adjoining his old stand on Broadway. This store he is now utilizing for a display of Christmas bells and the manufacture of wreaths, etc. Mr. Zeigler is so far satisfied with his season's experience on Bellevue avenue that he has renewed the lease of that store for another year. A placard in one of the windows announces that it will be reopened two weeks before Easter.

Gibson Bros. are making a combination display in their windows, of roses and fine Whitmani ferns.

Oscar Schultz has an unusually large assortment of decorative foliage plants to offer for the holiday trade.

There are few lilies in an advanced condition here. All that will be called for will be procured elsewhere.

John Marshall, who has been in charge of the Perry Belmont "By the Sea Greenhouses" for some years, has taken a year's lease of the establishment. Hereafter Mr. Belmont will have no connection with the business except as landlord of the property.

J. K. Sullivan has at last secured the contract for the improvements in contemplation on the Pembroke Jones estate on Bellevue avenue.

David McIntosh has accepted an invitation from the New Bedford Horticultural Society to read a paper on "Plants for Christmas Decorations" on the evening of December 9.

Tuesday evening, December 10, the annual meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society took place.

Richard Gardner, whose appointment on the park commission was recently announced, seems to put new life into that body. R. R.

I am sold out of gladiolus bulbs. The little advertisement in the Review was a good investment.—Frank Klotz, Bowling Green, Ohio.

Livingston, Mont.—E. F. Kirkland thinks the outlook for the future is bright and he urges others in the trade to keep on improving and producing. "People have to live and look well," he says, "so grow your flowers and vegetables and be happy, for I think you will get rid of them all. This financial uneasiness, which is caused by Wall street schemes, will soon be ended."

Greenhouse Heating.

PIPING IN ARKANSAS.

Are twelve 1¼-inch lines of hot water pipe sufficient to heat a house 22x80 feet, with the sides five feet high? The roof is not of the best to keep out cold. The outside temperature here sometimes drops to near zero. M. G.

To pipe a house 22x80 feet so as to maintain 60 degrees during severe weather will require twenty lines of 1¼-inch pipe. A good way to provide radiation in this house would be to install seventeen 1¼-inch returns, arranged in three manifolds, each fed by a 2-inch flow. This would give a little more radiation than is provided in the twenty 1¼-inch pipes and give a better distribution.

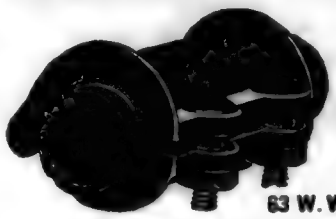
L. C. C.

EXPANSION TANK OVERFLOWS.

What is the cause of the water running out over the top of my expansion tank?

I could not get my heater down where it belongs, but it worked well last spring and the circulation is fine now. If the fire becomes quite hot, however, out goes a barrel or more of water over the top of the expansion tank. The heating pipe goes from the top of the heater upward four inches, with an elbow on top and a pet cock. This is the highest part. Then the pipe goes eighteen inches from the elbow and connects with four 2-inch pipes that go around the house under the benches, with a true grade down until they get back near the heater, where they connect again with a single pipe, which drops down eighteen inches and enters the heater. The expansion tank is about seven feet above the heater, and is connected by a ¾-inch pipe with the return pipe where it enters the heater.

The greenhouse is 20x45 and that system of piping keeps it warm enough, but I do not understand why the water should run over so. W. E. H.



In regard to the behavior of your expansion tank, I suggest first that the tank is not high enough. It should be twelve to twenty feet above the boiler, if it is possible to so arrange it. Second, the expansion tank may be too small or you may keep too much water in it. The expansion tank should have merely a trace of water in it when the system is warm and should be large enough to hold all the expansion of the system when heated to full capacity, so that when the plant cools off the pipes will all still be full of water.

Raise the tank if possible, and increase its capacity so it will hold the expansion of the system. See that the tank is practically empty when the system is cool; otherwise the expansion tank does not fulfill its mission, that of holding the water driven out of the system by expansion as the water in the pipes becomes hot. L. C. C.

FROM STEAM TO HOT WATER.

I wish to change my heating system from steam to hot water. My house is 23x75, five feet to the eaves and twelve feet five inches to the ridge. It has 1-inch board walls, covered with tar felt, and is protected on the north and west by high ground. There are two 2-inch flows, one along each purlin, and under each side bench the flow is reduced to a

.....DEMAND

This is one man's experience:—

W. D. Snell, Mohawk, N. Y., Jan. 21, 1907, says: "I have to report in regard to the No. 407 Standard Sectional Steam Boiler recently installed in my greenhouses, that it gives thorough satisfaction. About January 1, I had occasion to note an incident that I consider worth reporting. The boiler was attended to, fuel furnished, grate shaken down and everything arranged for the night at 12 o'clock midnight. At that time the boiler showed two lbs. steam. To test the boiler and see how long it would run without attention, I deferred giving it any further attention until 11 o'clock the following day. At that time the fuel needed replenishing, but steam had been maintained in the system practically all the time and at the time it was replenished the gauge stood at two lbs. pressure. The experiment showed that the boiler ran without any attention whatever for eleven hours, carrying 7000 sq. ft. glass to about 55 degrees. The weather outside was about zero."

1½-inch header. From these headers there are three 1½-inch returns, making two 2-inch flows and six 1½-inch returns in all. Please tell me how much more 1½-inch pipe will be necessary, in this Kansas climate. Should those headers be 2-inch or will 1½-inch headers be large enough?

My boiler is a Nichol & Shepard traction boiler. It is fourteen horse-power and has thirty-three 2-inch flues. Its capacity is three barrels and a half of water. B. P. M.

The house in question, in order to maintain a temperature of 60 to 65 degrees during severe weather, should be provided with twenty lines of 1½-inch pipe, twelve in addition to the present equipment. In order to install the additional radiation the present headers will require to be modified, and it will be well to install 2-inch fittings for all new pipes for hot water service.

HEATING IN TEXAS.

I wish to heat two connected houses, each 18x100 feet, running north and south. The side walls are five feet high, with twenty-four inches of glass on the west side; also glass in the south gable. The sashbars are eleven feet long. How many feet of 2-inch pipe will it take to keep a temperature of 60 degrees in zero weather? I have a No. 4 Kroeschell hot water boiler. F. T.

In your climate you should be able to maintain a 60-degree temperature in the houses in question by the use of ten runs of 2-inch pipe in each house. These pipes may be divided into two manifolds, each consisting of a flow and four returns. L. C. C.

HOT WATER PREFERABLE.

I wish to install a steam heating plant in my greenhouses. The houses are for growing lettuce. After the lettuce is taken off, about February 1 to 15, I put in tomato, cabbage, etc., for plants to sell in spring for the garden.

There are two houses, each 10x40, running north and south, with a valley between them, and my walks run up the center of each house. They are two feet to the eaves and have a rise of one-third pitch. I have walks dug out two feet deep, up each center, giving ample room. The houses are connected by the valley and are open clear through, giving me 20x40 feet of glass. I want to plant on solid ground. The houses are boarded with sheeting and then lap weather boarded on top and tightly fitted at all points. The south exposure is glass. The boarding only extends up two feet on the sides. On the north is the boiler-room. It is 10x14 and has two doors

THE SUPERIOR

Improved Internal-Fired Steel Boiler

Made in 10 sizes, to heat from 2000 to 6500 feet of 4-inch pipe. No brick-work necessary; shipped on skids, all ready to move into place and begin firing. Can be cleaned without letting the fire out. All hubs made so they can be used for either cast-iron or steam pipe. Tested at 25 lbs. pressure and warranted; can be used for low pressure steam by adding steam drum. Best material; best workmanship. Specially designed for greenhouse use; corrects the faults of other boilers. Lightest boiler on the market capable of performing equal work. We defy competition in prices on any boiler of equal capacity. Investigate. Send for new illustrated catalogue, just out.

leading from the boiler-room to the walks of the greenhouse, on a level with the walks. The boiler-room is two feet below the surface of the ground. I have a vertical boiler, capable of 100 pounds of pressure. It has two openings for 1½-inch pipe.

Please tell me how much pipe is needed for these houses, here in Ohio, and how to put it in for best results.

G. W.

My advice is to heat the plant in question with hot water instead of steam. It is too small to economically use steam, unless you have automatic diaphragms to regulate the drafts and dampers, which can of course be used on an upright tubular boiler, but which as a rule work best on a magazine or self-fed type of boiler. I will state the piping for both systems of heating and you may choose.

Steam: Carry a 2-inch riser under the ridge of each house from the boiler to the far end and return by eight 1-inch pipes, six on the outside wall and two on the middle partition of each house. Hot water: Use a 2-inch flow as above, and eight 1½-inch returns, distributed as above stated, six on the outside walls and two on the partition in each house, thus making sixteen lines of 1-inch steam pipe in addition to the flow pipes for the two houses; or sixteen 1½-inch pipes arranged in like manner for the hot water plant. For hot water an expansion tank should be carried twelve to fifteen feet above the highest point of the piping in the houses and connected to the main return close to where it enters the boiler. You cannot run the plant on a steam basis unless you sink the boiler so the returns in the house are at least two feet above the water line of the boiler, while the hot water will work without lowering the boiler.

DALLAS, TEX.

A jolly party of three, comprising Eugene Corley, the genial private secretary to Col. Green, Alex. Miller, superintendent of the Green Floral & Nursery Co., and the writer, took a spin out to inspect the comparatively new plant of this hustling firm. It was a grand afternoon and as we whizzed along, between gasps for breath and holding on to the side of our express, I had some chance of noting what great progress has taken place in this foremost Texas city during the last decade.

Soon the Green plant came into view and the first thing that I noted was the absence of the immense chimney stack that is usually seen. Smoke consumers are used. There are tanks for softening water, an ice machine and refrigerator vaults. There is a boarding house, with separate rooms for the help. There are 200,000 square feet of glass. The houses average 28x200 feet, with cement walls, tile drainage and solid beds. This is recognized as the only successful method of growing roses and carnations in this semi-tropical climate. To see the stock growing and the cut arranged both in the storage vaults and in the shipping rooms in town, one could hardly realize that he was in a comparatively new

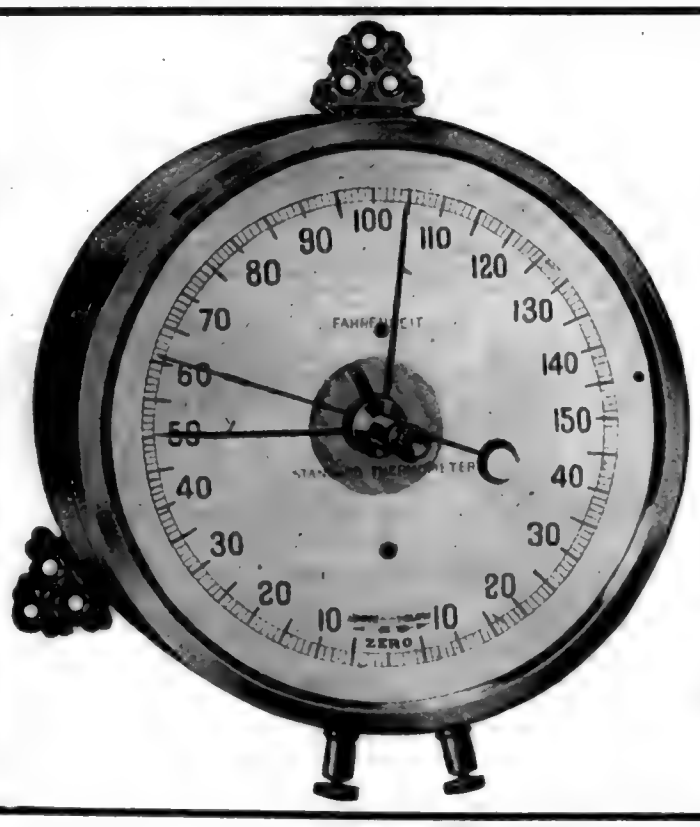
WAYSIDE NOTES.



Chas. W. Crouch, of Knoxville, Tenn., is making many improvements in his big plant and believes holiday business will be fully equal to that of former years.

Chas. L. Baum, of Knoxville, will have a fine batch of the Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemum for the holidays. This is one of the best late kinds. Carnations in solid beds are in heavy crop. Lawson, Enchantress and Boston Market are leaders. Rose-pink Enchantress is all that was claimed for it; blooms four inches across and stems thirty-six inches long are not unusual here. Additional houses will be built in the spring.

John Karsten, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is completing a handsome residence, which will be occupied by his family as soon as completed. The space occupied by the old homestead will be covered with a fine show house and office.

Mrs. J. W. Crouch, of Chattanooga, reports a busy season on the ridge, with several good orders ahead for the holidays.

Jos. Vestal & Son, of Little Rock, Ark., are mailing their new retail list to southern customers. They send out a catchy catalogue and can count patrons in every large town in the southwest. Stock is in first-class shape and a busy season is looked for.

GENISTAS.

Will you please inform me concerning the culture of Genista racemosa under glass? W. B.

Cuttings inserted in sand now in a house where the night temperature does not exceed 55 degrees will soon root, and if potted along as required, will make nice, bushy plants in 6-inch pots for another winter. Genistas need a lot of pinching or clipping to keep them shapely. They should never be subjected to anything like forcing or the flowers will have little substance and soon drop. They may be wintered in any light pit or house kept just clear of freezing and if allowed 45 degrees to 48 degrees at night will bloom in late winter or early spring, when most needed.

The plants do best outdoors during the summer, plunged in ashes or loam. They require syringing to keep red spider in check, as it speedily ruins them if allowed to secure any foothold. C. W.

LANSING, MICH.—The Michigan Agricultural College has completed a new greenhouse which is to be used by the department of entomology as an insectary. The structure is 20x50 feet and is divided into two apartments, one of which is the warm room, or growing room, in which the development of the insects will be watched during the summer conditions. The other apartment is a cold room, in which the insects will have an opportunity to hibernate. In order to carry out these experiments, it is necessary to grow the plants on which the insects thrive best.

FLORISTS' FERTILIZERS

From now to replanting time you will need some of these. Our prices can't be beat if you insist on having the pure article. (There are lots of "cheap" offers to be had—but an impure fertilizer is not only valueless, but harmful, as growers all know, and not to be used even if it costs nothing.) We guarantee the absolute purity of our fertilizers, as follows:

Pure Bone Meal 200 lbs., $3.50; 1000 lbs., $14.00; 2000 lbs., $27.50.

Nitrate of Soda 25 lbs., $1.25; 100 lbs., $4.25; 200 lbs., $8.25.

Blood and Bone 200 lbs., $4.00; 1000 lbs., $15.00; 2000 lbs., $28.50.

Horn Shavings 100 lbs., $3.50.

Pulverized Sheep Manure 100 lbs., $1.50; 500 lbs., $6.25; 1000 lbs., $10.00; 2000 lbs., $20.00. The above Fertilizers are so well known to all growers of flowers that further comment is unnecessary. Write for prices on larger quantities.

Shredded Cattle Manure 100 lbs., $1.25; 500 lbs., $5.00; 1000 lbs., $7.50; 2000 lbs., $14.00. Write for prices on car lots.

This we believe to be the coming fertilizer. Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale, Ill., after using two cars for trial ordered 300 tons, and say: "It is fully 3 to 4 times as strong as rough manure and, being put up in bags, not a pound is wasted, which makes it cheaper in our opinion than rough manure which we got for freight and cost of loading."

Not only should cut flower growers give this a trial, but florists who do bedding and other planting will find it a good seller to put on lawns. Clean. No odor. Order of D'Alcorn & Sons have been cutting Paper Whites outside now for four weeks. If the weather here were a trifle more reliable it would not be necessary to house these plants at all. They can be so grown no farther south than Raleigh, N. C. Another strange thing this year is the unusual number of buds. Twenty-five on a stalk is not unusual, although the bulbs were only the ordinary size. White Romans and Golden Spur are also in good shape.

The Jamestown exposition is closed and it is not thought a very regrettable fact locally. The sum of $400 was to be given in prizes for a flower carnival, but this was confined to mums, which were practically finished in the district. The exposition was not in good odor locally with florists, as requirements were all purchased away from Norfolk and Portsmouth. O. W. D.

HINTS ON POTTING.

Potting soils of all descriptions are much better in the open air until it becomes necessary to remove them indoors in order to dry them sufficiently to be fit for use.

It is not at all necessary to keep sod piled up for any great length of time before being used; in fact, it rather detracts from its value as potting material to keep it after the roots of the grasses are dead.

Plants should never be potted in wet soil, nor yet should soil that is dust-dry be used in potting. There is a certain, though indefinable, degree of moisture necessary for the attainment of the ideal in potting soil.

Under no consideration should soil be put through a sieve unless it be soil intended for use in potting up newly rooted cuttings. Soil passed through a sieve is liable under most prevalent conditions to get into an adhesive mass, totally unsuited to the demands of the roots of plants. B.

POTTING CAMELLIAS.

Camellias should be potted when they have completed their growth, and when that takes place depends, of course, on when the plants are started. If flowers are wanted in November it will be necessary to start them into growth early in the season, so that they will set their flower buds soon. It is easy to see when they are about to set their flower buds; the shoots cease to lengthen and they commence to thicken at the points; the terminal leaves attain their full size and get solidified. This is the time to shift the plants into larger pots; if potting is neglected until the buds are fully formed they will very likely drop off soon after the operation.

Camellias do not need repotting as often as most other hard-wooded plants do. The pots should be well drained, and in potting the soil should be made as firm by means of the potting stick as the ball of soil which the roots are already in; otherwise, when water is applied, it will pass through the new soil and leave the ball dry, in which condition it is impossible for the plants to remain healthy and vigorous. Merry Christmas and Happy New Year

WE WISH you all a successful holiday trade and hope that next year's business will far surpass that done this year. Your patronage has been much appreciated and we thank all of you for the many favors you have shown us this season. This has been the best year we have ever had in the forty years we have been in business, 1908 being our fortieth anniversary, but we are looking forward to the coming year as a larger and more successful one than this.

The talk of money being short and that hard times are coming is without good foundation and the wise florist is going right ahead the same as usual. "Be of good cheer" is the sentiment of the season and it just fits the situation this year — don't worry; we are going to have plenty of business and no shortness of money. People all over the country have been impressed by the great flower exhibits that have been made this year, and the general public are awakening to the fact that flowers are almost a necessity — the outlook, therefore, is better for next season than it has ever been before. There is only one thing for the business florist to do — be sure he can supply his trade. It is almost a settled fact that the demand will be large and the one who can furnish the goods will make the profits. Don't wait until summer, but let us talk it all over this winter while we have plenty of time. Build more, grow more, sell more and make more is the motto for 1908. Start now to get ready.

We wish you again a very Merry Christmas.

ABOUT SOME REPAIR HAPPENINGS

Last week we went through a large range of wooden houses in which about every sixth bar was repaired at the eave line; fully half the wooden plate had been replaced, and here and there, all along its length, pieces of iron had been screwed on to stiffen a weak point. This is the sort of thing this man has been doing every year for the last ten, and he doesn't know to this day that his repair bills long ago amounted to more than the difference in expense between the cost of those wooden houses and our Iron Frame. And see the shade-casting traps he has to meet in competition with growers having our light, enduring, up-to-date construction. ANYTHING NEW IN ROSES?

[A paper by E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., read before the Chicago Florists' Club December 12, 1907.]

"Anything new in roses?" is a question propounded much more frequently now than a few years ago, especially by the rose growers of our country, and the same question is asked with even more interest in Europe.

The rose growers charge the retail store men with being more largely responsible than themselves for the seeming indifference toward new varieties and in this there is undoubtedly a considerable degree of truth, but it must be confessed that a large number of florists, including the growers, have shared in this indifference. In the light shed on the matter of novelty by the milliner, the silk manufacturer, the dry goods man, and in fact by all the vendors of apparel, ornament and furniture, it is a wonder that we of the florists' profession should have been the reactionaries in the matter of novelty in roses, but we will have to admit that such has been our past record.

A Society Lady's Protest.

It was a leading society lady in an eastern city who gave utterance to the protest against being compelled to use Bride, Maid or Beauty for her frequent functions. Her criticism was only too well justified and she simply voiced the general complaint concerning the world's preëminent flower, the rose. But a change has recently taken place and new varieties are given a very different reception from that accorded a few years ago. It is well for the rose that such is the case, else the carnation would have continued its triumphant march to the point of disputing leadership with the rose.

Believing that a radical change has taken place and that novelty in roses is being sought, the question arises: Will we be able to meet reasonable expectations and can we provide new varieties so as to satisfy this greater interest? The answer is in the affirmative, and it is a pleasure to record that a considerable number of workers are endeavoring by hybridization and cross fertilization to give to the rose-loving public new forms and types.

So many qualities have to be present in a variety that lays claim to favor as a forcing variety that the progress made will seem slow, but nevertheless it is within the range of possibility to gain entirely new and unique colors and forms.

The Source of Future Varieties.

I believe, with Robert Simpson, the present president of the Rose Society, that the forcing roses of the future will come largely from an admixture of Rosa Indica with the present hybrid perpetuals. In fact, do not the hybrid teas bear witness to this prophecy? Still, the strong old Bourbon varieties, like Gloire des Rosomanes, should be made to furnish their rich scarlet tones to the newer sorts. Our task is to breed into the tea varieties the strength, vigor, length of stem and the finer dark shades found among the hybrid perpetuals, using the tea section in order to secure freedom in flowering. The varieties of the future will not be the result of a single cross between the two sections named, but will be the result of patient interbreeding, extending through a series of years. I would not say that here and there a desirable new variety may not make its appearance as a result of a haphazard cross, but to get at definite results we must make careful note of the qualities present in the progeny and then seek to breed those missing qualities into future seedlings.

Rose Wm. R. Smith.

We must not forget that Rosa Indica is the one class that is to furnish the foundation for all our forcing varieties, and this is on account of its continuity of bloom. No matter how fine a rose, or what the tint or length of petal, unless it has the inherent power to produce buds and flowers freely it will prove practically valueless. We have every reason to hope that we may yet possess the ideal from the careful crossing of the hybrid perpetuals and the teas. We have Richmond, Chatenay, Liberty, Killarney, all undoubtedly from this source; hence it is within reason to hope for others in this particular line.

The Treatment of New Varieties.

The new varieties appearing will perhaps require more careful treatment, or at least different cultural treatment from that given our present forcing varieties. The new varieties will require study; perhaps some will thrive best grafted on certain stocks, or will do best in certain soils. A case in point is the variety Killarney. It was Ben Dorrance who discovered the peculiarities of this variety and who brought it into its present prominence. It would be well, therefore, to give new varieties a careful trial before casting them aside. My conviction is that we have much to learn in regard to right cultural conditions. I am inclined to think that perhaps other valuable varieties have been lost sight of by their not having had proper cultural treatment. We know that to grow American Beauty successfully requires the application of good cultural skill, and very often this variety fails to give best results in the hands of the most skillful growers. Great progress has been made in methods of culture and you have some notable examples in this line in your own vicinity. I mention the cultural side of the question in order to show how important it is that new introductions shall not be condemned too hastily.

Some fairly successful rose men still inveigh against Killarney and Richmond because they cannot do them successfully, and it is only the fine showing made by a majority of our best growers that has given these roses the position they deserve. Each new rose must be studied and results carefully noted, before its cultural requirements can be known. It is infinitely easier to master the peculiarities of two or three sorts, drop down into a rut with them and run along comfortably, than to experiment, and fail, and try again. Experimental work is seldom comfortable work, but buyers demand novelty and variety, and there is nothing for it but for us to take off our coats and get down to hard work.

ROSE W. R. SMITH.

There are many instances where the true merit of a rose has failed of general recognition at the time of its first introduction to the trade. Killarney is an instance. Another is Cardinal, one of John Cook's seedlings, which has been considered of little value under glass, but with which the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, now is making a great success. Heller Bros., New Castle, Ind., point to William R. Smith as another rose which was not received as it should have been. This is a variety raised some years ago by John A. Shellem, of Philadelphia, of which little has been heard until the present season, when Heller Bros., of the South Park Floral Co., have taken it up and are growing it largely because of the excellent results they have achieved with it. The western trade first saw it growing four or five years ago at the establishment of the E. G. Hill Co., and Mr. Hill concluded at that time that it was not a forcing variety, but Heller Bros. find it excellent for growing under glass April to December, and that it is an ideal bedder. The growth is all that could be desired, with long, heavy stems and good foliage. The buds are large and well formed. The color shell-pink. It is as much the type of Kaiserin as any other. The Hellers say it has become with them the most vigorous of any rose they ever have grown and that it is easy to handle.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Propagating.

During the process of making the cuttings the foliage should be kept well moistened, so that there will be no danger of wilting. The cuttings should also be protected from drafts and from too dry an atmosphere, and should be put in the propagating bench with as little delay as possible.

From the time they are inserted in the sand until root formation is completed, they should never be allowed to approach dryness. They should also be protected from bright sunshine by a light shading, which can be easily removed when the sun ceases to shine on the bench. If this shading is not removed and the cuttings are allowed to form roots in a dark, shady position, they will become soft and delicate and will be longer in starting in the pots.

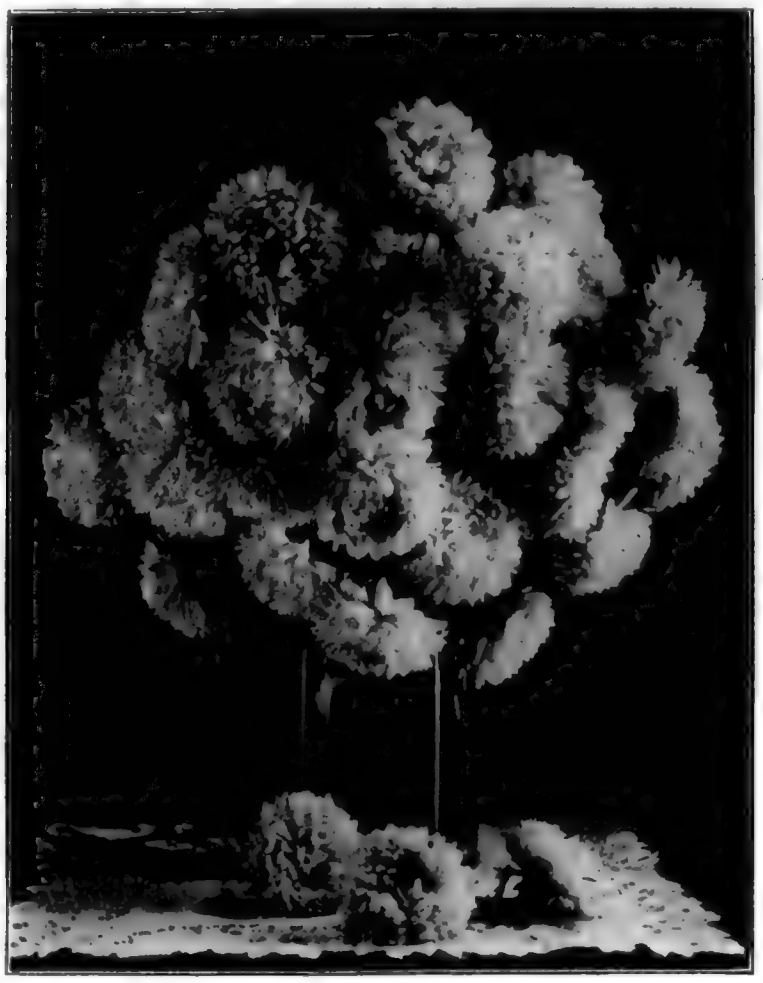
Ventilation and Temperature.

The importance of proper ventilation during the period of root formation cannot be overestimated, as on this depends not only a successful strike but also the after constitution of the plant, as many of the ills which affect the plant in after life are entirely due to neglect in this matter.

A temperature of 60 to 62 degrees in the sand and a house temperature 8 or 10 degrees lower, with a free circulation of air, should put the cuttings into a condition to be ready for potting in twenty-eight or thirty days.

Treatment for Beauty Cuttings.

Beauty cuttings, owing to their large and somewhat coarser texture of foliage, require more space in the bench and greater care in syringing, so that the leaves may be entirely free from moisture by sundown. In selecting the wood for propagating Beauties, it is also well to remember that in long canes the eyes do not possess the same condition of ripeness from base to tip, and if discrimination is not used having this in view, the cuttings cannot form roots in the same period of time. By using short wood, with close joints, the condition of ripeness can be more easily attained and also a nicer, stockier plant secured.



Ribes.

YELLOW FOLIAGE ON ROSES.

I should like to know what is the trouble with my roses. I grow them in a mixed house and had them very fine for three years. This year I put the cuttings in sand in March and benched them in June. They did well and looked promising up to the end of October. Since then the leaves have been dropping and the young growth comes of a light yellow color. I gave them the same treatment as in the other years. Have I been keeping them too wet, or have they been started too late, or is it a stopping of the root action that causes them to become light yellow? Enclosed you will find a sample of the leaves. H. F.

From the appearance of the leaves enclosed, the plants are evidently suffering from some root trouble, probably eel worms. There are many causes which could account for the condition of the leaves, but as these same conditions prevailed in the houses in former years, when you had good success, I am inclined to think that you have a bad case of eel worms on your hands. This can be easily determined by lifting some of the worst affected plants and washing the roots clear of soil. If eel worms are present the roots will show a quantity of tubercles from the size of a mustard seed to that of a barley seed. These tubercles are cysts containing from three to five worms resembling eels in form. They are very small and require microscopic inspection to make identification sure. For this trouble, and especially in an advanced stage, there is no known remedy.

Semple's Late Branching Aster Grown in Oregon.

PROPAGATING OUTDOORS.

Will you be so kind as to tell us the best method of propagating field grown roses in the south? We have not been successful in propagating teas and hybrid teas in sand from outdoor wood. Tea roses grow finely here outdoors, and without any protection. If we can only hit on a way of propagating them successfully, we could work up a good business in this line. How are they propagated in California? Our conditions are, to some extent, similar. S. & C.

Hybrid tea and tea roses can be propagated during the summer anywhere if conditions are made right, and probably the best way is that of preparing a bed outdoors by excavating to a depth of about eighteen inches, then filling in with stable manure up to the surrounding grade. After the manure has had a few days' rest, put about three inches of sandy soil on the top. Over this put an inch of clean sand. Then procure the wood for cuttings and cut it up into cuttings of one or more eyes and insert them in the sand in the same way cuttings are placed in the propagating bench in a greenhouse. But before that be sure to make the soil and sand firm and level and put a board frame over the bed. When the cuttings are in, give them a good watering and shade them and keep them fairly well shaded during the daytime for at least two weeks. Keep the foliage moist by frequent sprinkling. The whole intent of this method is to get a little bottom heat in order that the cuttings will root. A cover for the frame can be made of laths.

Another way of propagating these roses is that of taking cuttings of the dormant wood in fall and putting them in boxes, pots or propagating bench in a greenhouse to root, or plants may be lifted late in fall and potted, which after a short rest may be started into growth and, when the wood is in condition, be cut up into cuttings and these rooted in sand and potted up when rooted. M.

ASTERS IN OREGON.

Growers of asters in the east will be interested in the accompanying illustration of these flowers at the establishment of Carl F. Ruef, of Salem, Ore., which shows that the conditions there are certainly favorable to magnificent results. The variety is Semple's Late Branching, but he also had some of Henderson's Invincible which were equally good. Some of the plants had as high as twenty-five blooms and the size of the flower may be determined from the picture. Mr. Ruef has a good, rich soil and gives plenty of water during the growing season. This season he ran the water down canals between the rows of plants, but next season he intends to subirrigate the fields.

FORCING LILY OF THE VALLEY.

At a meeting of the Philadelphia Florists' Club, November 5, Walter P. Stokes delivered an interesting informal talk on forcing lily of the valley. Mr. Stokes' remarks were almost wholly extemporaneous, which will account for the shortcomings of the following notes, taken from memory:

"I have come here at the request of the essay committee, not so much to tell you what I know about forcing lily of the valley as to learn something that I do not know. I will tell you gladly all the little that I know without reserve, and I hope that you will straighten out some of the points that have troubled me and give me your experience. When I took up valley forcing about six years ago I did it with a definite aim, to produce a maximum amount of money from a minimum amount of glass. It seemed to me that I could do this better with valley than with anything else. When I started I knew nothing whatever about forcing the pips, and I had no man who knew anything, either. There was therefore only one thing to do; that was, to begin. What I know I have learned by experience. I think the first year's experience cost me $500 or $1,000; since then I have secured results.

"The selection of pips is the first and most important matter in valley forcing. I have found it impossible to secure good valley from cheap pips; so I buy only the best. I am told that other growers are able to secure good valley from cheap pips; I should like to be taught how to do this. I endeavor to secure only the best Berlin valley, selected stock, securing part from importers, but importing the greater part myself. The great difficulty in pips as they are bunched today is that the strong pips with heavy, vigorous roots are put on the outside row, while in the center of the bunch are pips of a lower grade, with poor roots. An honest valley grower should never allow his pips to be bunched in this way. Selected pips are of course scarcer than second or third grade stock, for on securing these pips depends the quality of the flowers.

"My aim has been to have valley the entire season through, and for this purpose I depend on cold storage stock for a great part of the year. When the pips arrive in November I make a point of having them taken out of the cases and repacked before they go into cold storage. We use for this purpose ten bales of sphagnum moss, dampened, and four cartloads of sand, in addition to the packing already in the cases. The object of this is that when the pips are taken out of the cold storage they will be crisp and fresh, whereas were they to dry out and shrivel the percentage of loss would be much larger.

"It has been claimed that valley imported in November can be forced successfully for Christmas, but this I find is too expensive, the percentage of loss being much greater than when these pips are carried over until January 15 or later. Care is required in calculating the time of forcing, especially when valley is required throughout the year; this time differs with the age of the pips. Pips taken out of cold storage in January require four weeks to force; in March and April this time is reduced to three weeks; in July it is decreased to sixteen or eighteen days, while in October two weeks is sufficient. When a case of pips is brought out of cold storage and allowed to thaw, we find they are soft; it is of great value to allow these pips to remain in the case in a warm temperature for twenty-four hours, in order to harden them before placing them in heat. This decreases the percentage of loss.

"I would estimate the cost of forcing valley as follows: Original cost of pips per thousand, say $12; average cost of cold storage, $1; average waste, say eight per cent, 95 cents; commission for selling, say fifteen per cent, $3.45; expressage, 50 cents; labor, fuel and bench room, say $2; total cost to produce, $19.90. With an average price of $3 per hundred for select stock and $2 for ordinary, it will be seen that there is a fair profit, provided this important item of waste is kept down.

"The forcing methods of valley are so well known that I will only say that we use sand, though sifted ashes or sphagnum moss will do just as well, changing it every four months to keep it sweet. The bottom temperature is kept at 75 or 80 degrees, the top cooler. A heavy green duck is used for covering the forcing pips during the first two weeks; after that a lath shade is excellent. Full light may be admitted during the hardening process, providing the sun be excluded. We place our rows of pips about four inches apart, packing as closely in the row as possible; 150 to a 5-foot bench is the average. Our aim is to be able to cut all the flowers at once from a given batch, as it does not pay to go over them several times.

"It is said that valley can be grown anywhere. While this is true, I think the quality of my valley has been improved by growing it in my new houses, built by the King Construction Co. They are light and airy, fully twelve feet to the ridge and twenty-eight feet wide, without a post throughout."

Mr. Stokes exhibited two bunches of valley, one bunch containing long, slender pips with heavy roots, denoting vigor; the other containing short pips with scrubby roots; the one select, the other ordinary. He also exhibited two bunches of his fine Floracroft valley, one bunch in Philadelphia style (each spike of bells with its foliage attached), the other in the New York style (with the spikes pulled loose and bunched above their foliage). In answer to a question, Mr. Stokes said that Hamburg valley could be secured for $2 per thousand less than Berlin pips; also that the Hamburg were grown in heavier soil, but he had no experience with them.

SHASTA DAISIES.

I would like to hear from some one who has had experience with Shasta daisies. I have about 300 plants in the field ready for next year's blooming outdoors. This year, the first year from seeds, they gave me some fine flowers, many measuring four and five inches. These were shipped with my other flowers and were given A grade, but some complaints came to me that sometimes they withered on their journey and could not be revived. They were usually cut in the morning, put in a cool cellar in water until evening before being shipped, reaching their destination early next morning. Now, is there any special treatment which could be given them which would prevent them from withering, or which would insure their shipping in better condition? Will Queen Alexandra winter outdoors, in New York, and will it give as fine flowers and as good returns as the Shasta daisy, marketed during the summer months? L. J. B.

Probably if your daisies were cut in the evening and kept in cold water twenty-four hours before shipping they would carry better. There is no good reason why these flowers, if fresh and allowed to remain in water that length of time, should not travel perfectly for any reasonable distance.

If you refer to Marguerite Queen Alexandra, the only daisy of that name of which I have knowledge, this is not a hardy plant and any flowers produced in summer are of inferior quality. Grown under glass it is one of the best marguerites and may be had in bloom in succession from Thanksgiving until Memorial day. The flowers are smaller than those of the Shasta daisy, but sell well in bunches in winter and early spring. Its principal value, however, is as a pot plant. C. W.

Carnations

BUD-ROT IN CARNATIONS.

In answer to the query of F. R. H., on page 7 of the Review of November 28, I wish to say that the so-called eggs found in rotting carnation buds are mites and they are associated with a fungus which is the direct cause of the rotting. The large, white, egg-like body is the abdomen of the female mite and is filled with eggs. The rest of the body, including the head and legs, is very minute. The only method of eradicating this mite and disease is by the picking and destruction of the infested buds. The mite itself, which is probably the means of transmitting the disease to other buds, spreads very slowly when in the greenhouse and, if the above method is employed, the premises should be made free from this pest within a month or so at the most. The mites are probably in the sod soil when brought into the houses, and from there they get upon the carnations.

I have already found this bud-rot in some Chicago greenhouses. I would like to hear from those who have found it in their carnations and especially from florists outside of Chicago, with regard to the amount of injury it is doing.

WATER FOR CARNATIONS.

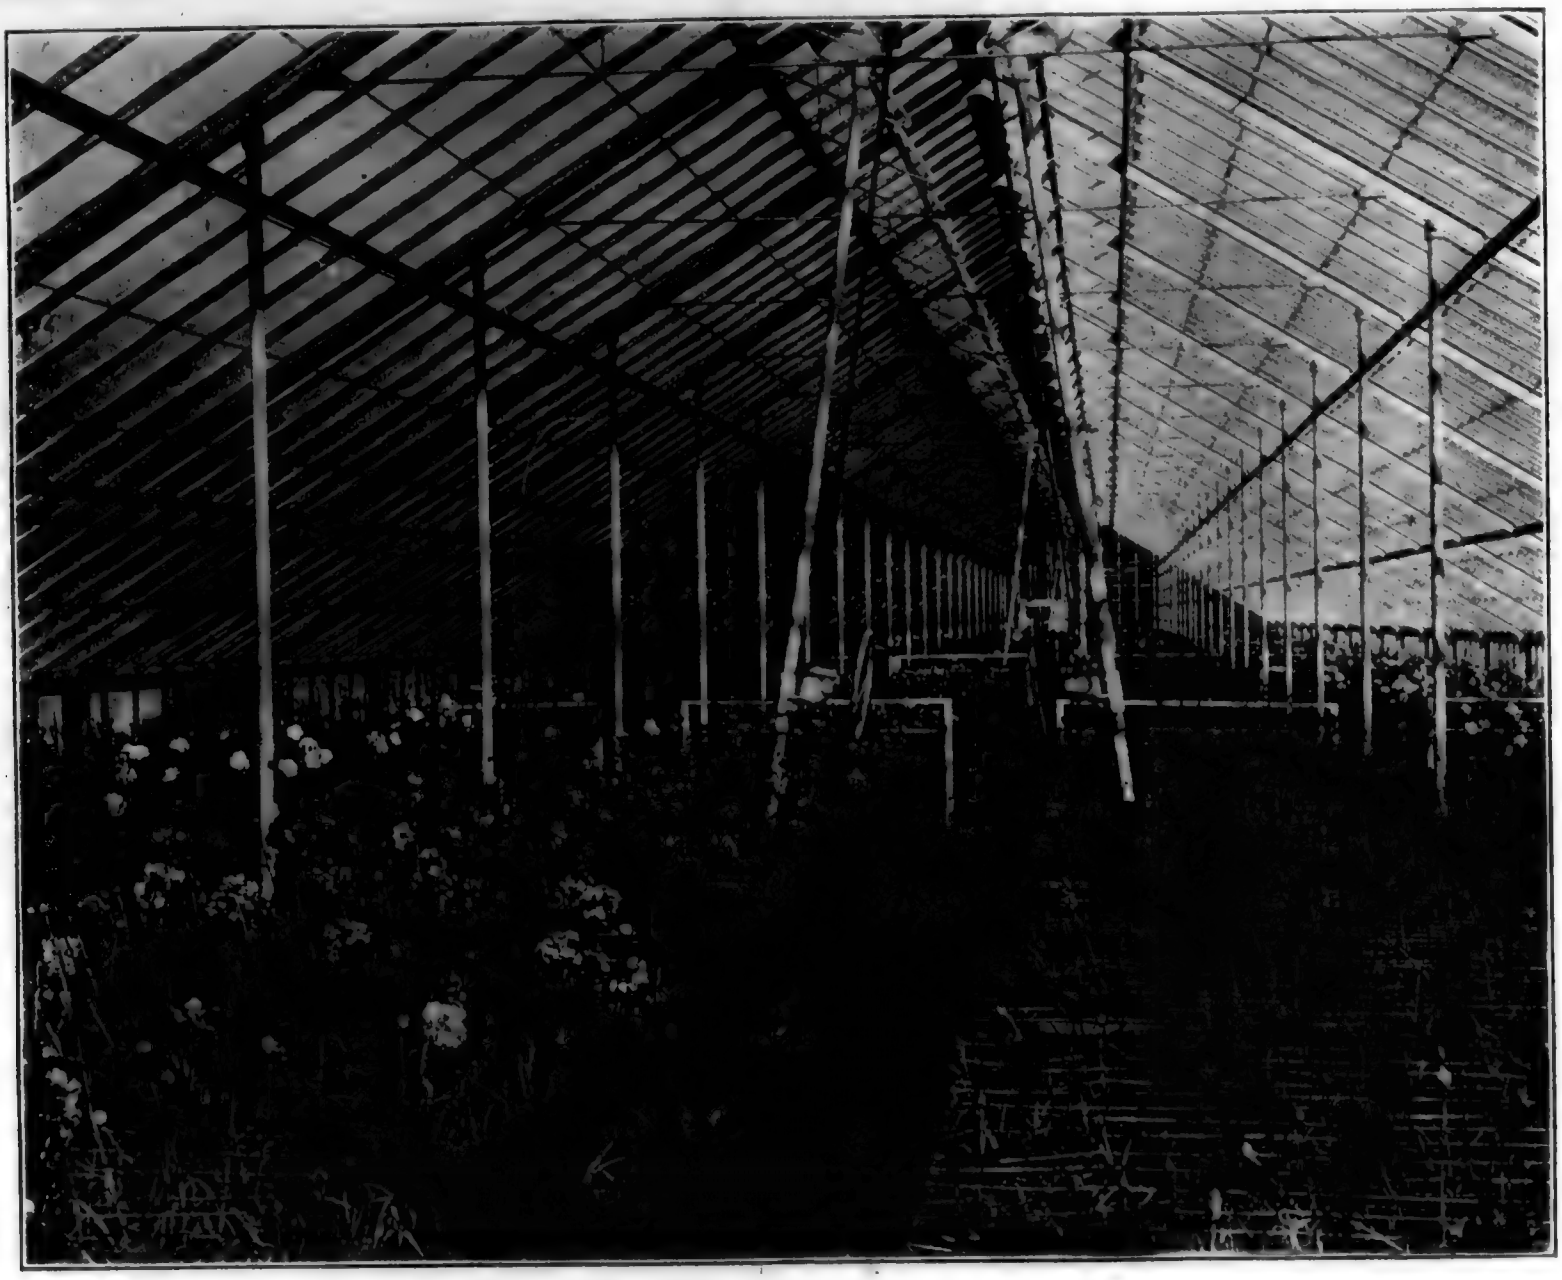
Is well water good to water carnations with, or should it be of the same temperature as the house? H. B.

Well water, which is free from alkali, such as we find all through this section of the country, is as good to water plants with as any you can get. As to the temperature, I will say that unless it is icy cold it will need no tempering. For syringing roses, however, most growers prefer it warmed to about 50 degrees, not because it would hurt the plants, but because at that temperature it will not lower the temperature in the house so much as it does when it is 40 degrees or colder. The sudden change is apt to bring on mildew, etc. Carnations being run cooler, the drop in temperature would not be so noticeable, and a cooler water can be used even for spraying. A. F. J. B.

CARNATIONS GO TO SLEEP.

I am perplexed at the way my carnations act this year. I gave them a liberal top dressing of wood ashes and they never before were so beautiful, large and brilliant, but they do not keep so long. In two days after picking, they go gently to sleep. Now, were they overstimulated or is this a general state this year? Will some of the experts come forward and give us their opinion? Was it the ashes, or, as a Christian Science lady told me, want of harmony? She says she practices that art and her plants do beautifully. Dr. Review, give us your version and thus oblige, perhaps, a good many of your readers, and most of all yours truly, J. W.

Your liberality with the wood ashes is, no doubt, the primary cause of your carnations being of poor texture, though the trouble might not have become so serious if it had been supplemented with proper treatment. Any feeding at this time of the year should be accompanied by a corresponding amount of ventilation to begin with. This will do more to counteract the bad effects of an overdose than anything, because it helps to build up the plant and promotes vigorous growth as much as the food does, only it works for sturdiness, while the food promotes size mainly. By this I do not mean a lowering of the temperature. In fact, a rise of 2 degrees would be preferable. But extra steam should be supplied to keep the temperature at the proper level, and it should be kept regular, even more so than is customary. Watering, also, should be done more carefully and the soil kept very uniform in moisture and not too wet. A plant which is growing at a moderate gait is able to stand more or less variation in these matters without serious harm, but a plant which is being pushed to the very limit is easily unbalanced and quickly ruined. Perhaps that is what your lady friend meant by harmony. It is the only kind of harmony I know of. Harmony with the laws of nature must be practiced in the cultivation of plants under glass as well as out of doors. A. F. J. Baur.



USE OF HORN DUST.

I should like to ask your opinion on using buffalo horn dust, and also deer horn dust, in top dressing for carnations. I can get a lot of it in my locality and should like to know whether it is good or not. H. B.

You will find horn dust a splendid material to use on your growing crops. The finer it is ground the better it is, because, like bone meal, it is slow in decomposition. Use it in quantity about as you would bone and you can use it very largely in place of the bone. I would suggest that you cut down the bone to one-half and use the horn dust in place of the other half. A. F. J. B.

ONE LINE OF VENTILATORS.

I have an even-span greenhouse, twenty feet wide. The walls are four feet and a half high, with two feet of glass. The house runs north and south, with one line of continuous ventilation on the east side, hinged at the ridge, eighteen inches deep. I have a compartment sixteen feet wide next the boiler-room in operation this winter, for a propagating room. The remainder of the house is not piped. On a sunny day, with the thermometer at 25 degrees above zero, I am unable to lower the inside temperature under 70 degrees when the water is shut off entirely from half the pipes and the others only slightly warm to the hand. Do you think I will be able to grow good carnations in the remainder of the house, with the same amount of ventilation? I was assured by a prominent greenhouse building firm that the single line would be sufficient, but I have some misgivings, and think it will be difficult to prevent the temperature from rising to 85 or 90 degrees in fair weather in the month of September. Will it be necessary to provide another line of ventilators on the other side? E. C. B.

If you have glass below the eave plates on each side of your house, you can make out very well with the one row of ventilators at the top. If there is eighteen inches of glass in the ventilators, the sash and all will likely measure about twenty-four inches. By taking out every third pane of glass in the sides when warm weather sets in and having them out until cooler weather sets in again in the fall, you will be able to provide enough ventilators for carnations. The most up-to-date houses are now built with ventilators on both sides of the ridge, using the same number of vents and placing them alternately. The advantages of this method are many. In the winter, when a cold wind is likely to be blowing, you can open the ventilators on the side opposite the wind and no cold draft will strike the plants. In the summer, under the old method, if a strong wind is blowing into the ventilators it will hold the heat in the house; whereas, if there are ventilators on the opposite side of the ridge the wind will go through and take the heat along out. The ventilation on the sides can also be used to good advantage on such houses.

VISIT TO FRAMINGHAM.

It was unfortunate that a severe snow storm, the heaviest of the season, should have started just as the heavily laden special car left Park square, Boston, for Framingham on the club field day, but the elements did not prevent a most enjoyable and profitable outing. Seventy-five journeyed on the special car, provided by Mr. Goddard, while other arrivals made a total attendance of 100. The first stop was at J. T. Butterworth's. Here orchids are a special feature. Of Cypripedium insigne, a superb lot were in flower. Many are huge specimens, but all were flowering freely, one plant carrying eighty-five flowers, others nearly as many. A fine lot of Cattleya Trianæ and C. Percivaliana were just coming in season, also Lælia anceps, including some fine white forms, and L. autumnalis. A large batch of C. intermedia and C. Harrisoniæ, recently imported, were noted.

A large house of carnations looked well. Callas filled one house and were blooming freely. Lily of the valley, Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites are grown in quantity. Some Trumpet major narcissi promised to be in flower for Christmas.

The next move was to S. J. Goddard's, where several large houses of carnations were the star attraction. In whites, White Perfection was extra fine and the best of its color. A small lot of Lady Bountiful looked well. White Enchantress is well thought of, and will be grown more heavily another season. A bench of The Queen was smothered with bloom. This sort still proves a bread and butter one.

Rose-pink Enchantress was a grand sight and is considered far the best of its color. Winsor was short-stemmed and is not thought necessary with such a carnation as Rose-pink Enchantress to fall back on. Helen Goddard looked remarkably well and is evidently right at home here. Ceres, a seedling just named and raised here, will be largely grown another year. It is of a Scott shade of pink. Enchantress itself is, of course, still a necessity. Priscilla is chiefly grown as a variegated. The crop of flowers and buds on this were immense, flowers three and one-half inches across and stems twenty-four to thirty inches long holding up the flower finely. Habit is good, every shoot running up to flower and no surplus grass. Form of flower is ideal, symmetrical and of the build of its pollen parent, Enchantress.

Mr. Goddard still considers Victory the best scarlet commercially, although Beacon is fine now and somewhat brighter in color. A small lot of Britannia carried some good flowers, but these were rather short-stemmed compared to American varieties. Octoroon is the best crimson, coming in earlier than Fenn, of a better color and with no split calyxes. Fair Maid will not be grown after the present season. A pure white sport looked well and should prove valuable to all who can grow Fair Maid profitably.

A nice lot of cyclamens, geraniums and azaleas were ready for Christmas retail trade, while good batches of marguerites, mignonette, single and double violets, French Trumpet major narcissi and other flowers for the same occasion were noted. The propagating house contained quantities of carnation cuttings. Everything on the place was the picture of neatness.

A short walk took the visitors to William Nicholson's, where carnations are also a prime attraction. Mr. Nicholson, Sr., has been compelled to refrain from active duties for a year, being run down by many years of hard work, but it is hoped will soon be himself again. His stalwart son, William R. Nicholson, now has charge of the place and its condition goes to show that the son is a true chip of the old block, for everything was in good shape. Carnations were fine, stems long and stiff and blooms large. A large house of Afterglow was keenly scrutinized. Many of the plants were cut down for stock, but sufficient were in evidence to prove the merits of this fine carnation. In stem, form and color it is ideal, and it is destined to become one of the most popular varieties another season. Heavy orders have already been placed for it. In light pinks, Enchantress was good. Some Fair Maid are still grown, but do not compare with Enchantress.

Rose-pink Enchantress was fine. Winsor, while it was blooming freely, was short-stemmed and had all the characteristics of Lawson. It will probably be fine later in the season. In scarlet, Beacon seemed to be the leader. Victory does not do so well. Red Chief, a new sort, is proving satisfactory. In crimsons, Harry Fenn is mostly depended upon. In whites, we were pleased to see Governor Wolcott still grown finely. White Perfection was splendid. Some Bountiful are still grown and Queen is looked upon as a money-making sort. Prosperity does probably as well here as anywhere in America and some fine flowers were open, and a good crop in sight for Christmas. A few Mrs. Patten are still grown. Quite a number of promising seedlings are on trial.

In addition to carnations a general assortment of other florists' stock is handled. White and yellow marguerites are a specialty and were already flowering nicely. Some magnificent mignonette attracted much notice. Cyclamens, geraniums, stevia and other seasonable plants were in good shape for Christmas. Many thousands of shamrocks were coming along for St. Patrick's day. Farquhar violets in pots were extra fine.

After an inspection of the greenhouses a generous collation was served, after which President Westwood, on behalf of the club, called for cheers for the entertainers, which were given with a will. Remarks were made by Messrs. F. E. Palmer, T. J. Grey, S. J. Goddard, W. A. Hastings, J. T. Butterworth, W. Nicholson and others, after which a short walk carried the visitors to their car, which arrived in Boston about 6:30. Snow still fell heavily at this time, and owing to train delays, consequent on snow blockades, it was morning before some of the members reached home, but all pronounced the outing most interesting and none complained of the little wetting they got. CURE FOR MILLEPEDS.

Kindly advise me as to a good remedy for the thousand-legged worm, which infests our soil to such an extent as to ruin our crop of sweet peas, eating the seeds and also damaging the roots of other plants, so they make only a stunted growth. A. A.

The thousand-legged pest referred to is very annoying and destructive, when it is present in such numbers as described. Sterilization of the compost on the benches or on the compost heap before housing makes sure work of this and all other pests. This remedy is out of the question on benches with growing plants, of course, and I would suggest the use of carbon bisulphide in your benches. Make holes eighteen inches apart each way with a pointed stick, and pour in a few drops of the carbon in each hole, covering it up immediately. Go over the whole of your benches in this way and, while it may consume some time and be a little tedious, it will undoubtedly kill the thousand-legs. It is better to have the soil quite moist when applying this remedy. Be careful not to use any matches or naked light while using this remedy, as it is explosive. It will not harm any of your plants in the least.

Tobacco dust dropped on the surface of the benches is occasionally used to good advantage, but I think you will find the carbon bisulphide remedy the most effective. Another season it will pay to sterilize your compost. C. W.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ARTISTIC ARRANGEMENTS.

Slipper and Hamper.

In each of the accompanying illustrations the slipper is filled with gardenias, and may be used as a favor at a cotillon, as a gift, or even as a dinner-table decoration. The hamper, filled with lilies of the valley, orchids and Farleyense, is arranged with the charming taste which always characterizes the work of Charles Henry Fox, at the Sign of the Rose, Philadelphia.

TEMPERATURE FOR ICE-BOX.

Please let me know the proper temperature for a refrigerator for keeping cut flowers. W. E. H.

Experience has shown that slightly different degrees of temperature and moisture are best adapted to keeping different varieties of cut flowers, but for a general purpose ice-box in the retail store, a box which runs 52 to 55 degrees will answer well. R. F. D.

PLANT NOMENCLATURE.

"We call the rose the queen of flowers, and the Chinese call the tree peony meu-tang, the king of flowers. In Greek it was the name of a god of mythology.

"Another mythical personage commemorated in a flower is Narcissus, the beautiful youth who fell in love with his own image. He pined away, and was metamorphosed into the flower. This, at any rate, was the view at the time of Ovid, though there is some reason to suppose that in earlier times narcissus was the word used for what was later called the hyacinth, and was probably our Martagon lily.

"The tobacco plant got its name through a curious mistake. The Spaniards adopted the word from the Indians of Cuba, but instead of taking the word 'cohiba,' which was the name of the plant, they took 'tobacco,' which was the name of the pipe in which it was smoked. The botanical name of the tobacco plant, nicotiana, is in honor of Jean Nicot, French ambassador to Portugal, who sent seeds of the plant to Queen Catherine de' Medici.

"The pansy is said to have received its name from its quaint shape. It is the French pensée, that is, thought, the 'There is pansies, that's for thoughts,' of Ophelia. It provokes thought or fancy. Botanically the pansy is a viola, derived by cultivation from Viola tricolor, and perhaps others. Florists, however, seek to restrict the word 'viola' to a strain of bedding pansies, thus ignoring the fact that all pansies are violas. A country gardener, a great prizetaker at the local shows, heard of the much advertised violas and determined to try some. 'They were nobbut pansies,' he remarked contemptuously after seeing them flower, 'and not very good 'ens at that!' So the florist who grows his prize ranunculus ignores the fact that the plebeian buttercup which disfigures his lawn is also a ranunculus. And in using the words 'hepatica' and 'auricula' we lose sight of the fact that the former is an anemone and the latter a primula.''

CRAMBE CORDIFOLIA.

I have some roots of Crambe cordifolia given to me to grow, which were sent here from England, and I do not know how to handle them. They are new to me. In giving me this information you will greatly oblige me. G. A.

Crambe cordifolia is a well known hardy herbaceous perennial in Europe; a member of the cruciferæ family and a native of the Caucasus. It carries large leaves and attains a height of six to seven feet. The crambes are but little grown in America, although they are quite hardy, even in our coldest states, and will succeed in any good garden soil. Propagation may be effected either by seed or division of the roots. Seedlings usually do not flower until the third year. Crambe maritima, the common sea kale, is a much esteemed vegetable and is better known in America probably than C. cordifolia.

W. N. Craig.

NARCISSI AND HYACINTHS.

Is it too late to plant narcissi and hyacinths for Easter? R. C. E.

It is getting a little late to plant hyacinths and narcissi to flower for Easter. It is true the latter floral carnival also comes late this year and if you can get some bulbs into the soil right away they will be in season all right. The quality of the flowers will not equal that of bulbs potted some weeks ago, as bulbs have by this time exhausted some of their strength by being so long out of the soil.

C. W.

TROUBLE WITH SWEET PEAS.

I have a solid bed of sweet peas. The bed is above the floor level. The peas were planted the last week of August. The vines look fine, but the buds are blighting. The bed has no drainage, but so far as I understand peas like plenty of water and on examining the soil it does not seem too wet. They have had a little ventilation every night but one or two; temperature from 45 to 55 degrees. What do you advise?

C. A. M.

Your sweet peas would have done much better on a raised bench in winter. It is true that these flowers love plenty of moisture, but even outdoors they must have good drainage. No doubt they would do well with you for late winter or early spring flowering, but few flowering plants succeed well in solid beds in winter. In benches the roots are warmer and take lots of water. In beds, little watering is possible, which is a disadvantage at this dark season.

I would advise a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night, with a rise of 5 to 10 degrees in the daytime. Keep the surface of the bed stirred and let it dry out pretty well before giving any more water. Do not give any liquid manure or chemical top-dressings. Ventilate as you have done and your plants will improve after the New Year. Another year use a raised bench for your winter crop and the solid beds for peas to flower after February. C. W.

GLADIOLI FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

When should gladioli be planted to have in bloom by Decoration day? How should they be cared for? Will have to grow them in a carnation house. Can they be planted where carnation plants have died out? R. C. E.

The small-bulbed gladioli, of the Colvillei and nanus types, if placed in flats now will bloom for Memorial day. They can be held in a frame or pit until March and then grown along in a cool house. The large-bulbed section would be quite suitable to grow where your carnations have died out, and if planted at the end of January will come in all right for Memorial day. A few suitable forcing varieties are May, Augusta and Shakespeare. Any of the Gandavensis section will come in if planted two weeks earlier than the sorts named. Separate shades of color would be preferable to mixtures. They cost a little more but sell much more readily. C. W.

LE CANDEUR AS A POT TULIP.

Culture under glass often redeems an otherwise commonplace variety, be it tulip or other flower, and it certainly has a marked effect upon the late double white tulip called Le Candeur, says the Gardener's Magazine. Outdoors this is often unsatisfactory, being greenish in color, and often of poor shape. Under glass it is almost, if not quite, the best double white tulip we have. I once did a turn in a nursery where 100,000 bulbs of this were grown annually. They were placed thickly together in boxes, which were piled one on another and covered with ashes outdoors. Before the foliage was too crowded, the bulbs were placed in 4½-inch pots, and had a ready sale at a good price. This is a rough-and-ready method of tulip growing, but it answered well, and should be worth adopting where labor is scarce and space at a premium.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Winter Protection.

Where the needful winter protection has not yet been given, it would be well to afford it as soon as possible. We may expect zero temperatures with some regularity, notwithstanding all predictions of weather sharps about a mild winter. Pansies winter very well outdoors in many places in the coldest eastern states if on well drained ground where no water will lie, and mulched lightly with leaves or straw kept in position by hemlock or pine boughs. A heavy covering is hurtful; so merely cover the plants. Similar protection should be given hollyhocks and any other biennials or perennials of doubtful hardiness.

Rhododendrons, more especially the Catawbiense hybrids, need protection for a few years after being planted in the colder states, and in very severe locations will require covering every winter. A heavy mulching of leaves, well packed in among the bushes, will keep the roots moist and prevent their becoming frozen. A framework covering of evergreen boughs above the tops of the rhododendrons makes an ideal protection. The great damage comes late in the winter, when we get severe frosts followed by warm, bright days. This is the time when the covering is of the greatest service. There are a number of so-called ironclad American hybrids, all Catawbiense hybrids raised in Europe, which, once well established and given some shade from the morning sun, will not need protection. Such sorts as Delicatissimum, Album elegans, Roseum elegans, Everestianum, Charles Dickens, C. S. Sargent, Kettledrum, Caractacus and some others are included in this list.

Preparing Christmas Plants.

All florists do a considerable pot plant trade at Christmas, if at all, especially if the weather is not too severe. All salable plants should be gotten into as presentable a shape as possible. Scrub pots clean; dirty pots are an abomination and anyone sending out such to customers deserves a severe calling down. Do any necessary staking and remove dead or dying foliage. Even a plant but moderately well grown looks presentable under these conditions. If you have a small division you can use in which to display your best pot plants, all the better. Even a bench with a nice assortment will be more apt to create buying than the same plants would be if scattered here and there over your establishment.

While flowering plants take precedence over foliage varieties at Christmas, there is usually some call for palms, Boston and other ferns, araucarias, ficus and other sorts. Ferns in shallow pans for tables are generally in demand, as are the same pans if filled with colored leaved plants in variety. These should have been filled some days ago. Light and graceful palms, such as Cocos Weddelliana, make suitable subjects for centerpieces. See that the leaves are clean on all foliaged plants.

Christmas weather is a variable quantity, some years below zero and probably a year later warm enough for frogs to peep and bluebirds to sing. In all likelihood, however, plants you sell will require wrapping up, and in sharp, frosty weather use plenty of paper and see that no plants are allowed to go out if insufficiently protected. Your customers have a right to expect to receive plants in as good shape as when they viewed them at the greenhouses or store. Unless you are something of a floral artist, do not essay to decorate with ribbons. We have always hitherto failed to see much beauty in this ornamentation, although sometimes the judicious use of a little ribbon will make a rather miserable looking plant present a better appearance, but well grown specimens need none of this decoration.

The Editor is pleased when a Reader presents his ideas on any subject treated in

The Weekly Florists' Review

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

WE SHALL BE GLAD TO HEAR FROM YOU.

Mignonette.

You should have some fine spikes of mignonette for the holidays if your plants are from seed sown early in August and have been grown cool. It is the height of folly to attempt any gentle forcing at any time, for mignonette simply will not endure it. A temperature of 45 degrees at night is ample. Attend to the necessary disbudding and supporting and, as the benches are now well filled with roots, a surfacing of well decayed cow manure broken up finely and spread evenly over the soil will be found beneficial. Use great care in fumigating. Mignonette is very susceptible to injury from tobacco smoke, and if the leaves are even slightly singed the flowers will be almost unsalable. If you chance to have an excellent strain of mignonette, it will pay to mark and select one or two of the best spikes for seed.

Gladioli.

If you have some unoccupied bench space and are uncertain what to do with it, make a planting of gladioli. The bulbs of the large flowered or Gandavensis type are now ready. Such varieties as May and Shakespeare force well. The separate shades of the Groff hybrids are very pretty and Childs' fine variety, America, the peer of this class, is down in price sufficiently to make it profitable to grow where you can secure a fair price for the flower stalks. Sometimes carnations die out with stem-rot and a catch crop is needed. Gladioli then fill the bill very nicely. Plant the bulbs three inches deep. Make the rows a foot apart, allowing the bulbs four inches of space in the rows.

Spiraea.

Though sometimes called astilbe, the old name of spiræa dies hard. In fact, we doubt if the old name does not survive the new one. The newly imported roots are at hand and, after being soaked, exposed to frost and potted up, may be stored in any place just clear of freezing. In securing stock for 1908, do not plant too much of the old S. Japonica. The improved sorts, such as Queen Alexandra, pink; astilboides, grandiflora, Gladstone and others, are superior either as pot plants or for cutting purposes. Better not try any forcing until after Christmas, after which date it will begin to start naturally.

Dielytra Spectabilis.

The well known bleeding heart, Dielytra or Dicentra spectabilis, with its deep rosy red flowers, makes a pretty pot plant for spring sales. While the spiræas will stand very hard forcing, the dicentras are impatient of such treatment and should be started in gentle heat, such as a carnation house would afford. Keep them well up to the light at all times.

Bouvardias.

If you have a few nicely flowered pots of scarlet bouvardias, they will probably sell at Christmas. Other colors will go more slowly. The time was when this flower was vastly more popular than it is today, but even now it fills an acceptable place in the market. Plants are much the best grown in benches in a night temperature of 55 to 60 degrees. The hose must be worked among them to keep mealy bug in check, as it seems to possess a peculiar liking for this plant. To increase your stock and secure strong plants for 1908, put in a batch of root cuttings in a propagating bed. Use the thickest portions of the roots, cut in pieces about half an inch long and lay them quite thickly on the sand, afterwards merely covering them and keeping them well supplied with water.

Callas.

The pots are now well filled with roots and the plants will be improved by occasional waterings of barnyard manure diluted. Callas like an abundance of water; in fact, they can hardly be oversupplied if drainage is good. Ply the hose among them every bright day; mealy bug will soon establish itself on the foliage otherwise.

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE.

Its History.

Among the many species of winter flowering plants in cultivation at the present time, we can find none more beautiful or more useful than this charming begonia. For winter use, for the florist and private gardener alike, it could hardly be dispensed with.

Introduced in 1892 by Lemoine, of Paris, it is the result of a cross between Begonia Dregei and B. Socotrana, and is in itself a lasting memorial to the enterprise and horticultural skill of this noted firm. When first introduced it at once caught the public fancy, and each succeeding year has seen its popularity going up by leaps and bounds, until at the present day it is grown in enormous quantities in almost every country in the world. In London, Paris, Berlin or St. Petersburg, let us go where we will, it is regarded by all as indispensable.

Its Usefulness.

In America it finds a ready sale, and I am sure there are few private gardeners who do not know its worth for house and table decoration. Invariably in the early months of the year, plants of any decorative value are exceedingly scarce, and it is here that Lorraines prove their value. They possess all the points of a good house plant, good color and graceful habit, last well, and, most important of all, are a prime favorite with the ladies.

Its Culture.

These plants are of comparatively easy culture. They succeed best when grown in frames during the summer months, and with a little ordinary care and attention will give good returns from December until well on in February. We usually start to put in cuttings about the second week in January. To some people this may appear a trifle early to start propagating. I find, however, that if good, large specimens are required for early winter work, it is best to get a batch of cuttings in as early as possible, and this date is none too early. Successive batches may be rooted until well on in the summer. By rooting cuttings at frequent intervals, we are enabled to have plants by Christmas, in sizes ranging from an 8-inch pot down to small stuff in threes. I have always found small plants exceedingly useful for decorative work, such as table decoration, the edges of groups, etc. They may be handled with impunity.

Striking the Cuttings.

To strike the cuttings successfully requires a good bottom heat. A propagating case with hot water or steam pipes running underneath suits them admirably, and if the cuttings are inserted in nice, clean sand, and kept moderately moist, every one should root well. When the cuttings are well rooted, pot them off into twos, and place them close to the glass in a house where the temperature runs from 60 to 65 degrees, taking care that they are always kept well shaded. Syringing may be done on all favorable occasions.

The Final Potting.

During the first week in June the main batch of plants should be in a condition to receive their final potting. For this shift a good mixture to use is a soil composed of two parts loam, one part good, flaky leaf soil, a small quantity of old mushroom manure, and plenty of good, coarse sand. When potting, on no account use a rammer, or the result will be disastrous. Light potting is one of the secrets of the successful begonia grower. Another great point to remember is to avoid crowding. Give your plants plenty of room at all times to develop, and keep in mind the old saying that "one plant grown well is equal to half a dozen inferior specimens."

Judicious Feeding.

About August Lorraines begin to make very rapid growth, and it is best about this time to assist them as much as possible, by a little judicious feeding. I find weak soot water a very good stimulant; also a little Clay's fertilizer, dissolved in the water, occasionally is very beneficial. The best plan I know of for preventing leaf disease is to scatter dry soot between the pots. It not only prevents disease, but also has a stimulating effect on the foliage.

When staking your plants, it pays to use small, green-painted stakes, and to make the ties with green raffia. It is wonderful how a little extra care in this respect will add to the value of each plant.

Housing the Plants.

I should like, before closing, to write a few words about housing begonias. I may say that there is no way in which the deadening formalism of plant houses may be more effectually removed than by a little care and taste in the arrangement of our plants. With florists and private gardeners alike it will give the most pleasing results, and will impress upon others the beauty and value for decorative purposes of each particular class of plants. What do we see as a general rule? Perhaps a good batch of Lorraines, which, if carefully staked and artistically arranged, would look attractive and be a credit to the grower, but on the other hand are spoiled for want of a few extra stakes and a little taste in their arrangement.

A Model Begonia House.

The accompanying illustration is a splendid example of what may be accomplished in this respect. No words of mine could give the reader an adequate idea of the glorious brilliance of this magnificent range of begonias. The general brilliance of effect was truly bewildering. While there was here a fixed idea prevailing in the grouping and arrangement, we entirely escaped anything which might be called monotony in detail or outline.

The large plants in this establishment were flowered in 8-inch pots, and averaged three feet in height and about the same through. The main batch, however, were in 6-inch pots and pans, this being the most serviceable size for general use. For the edge of the benches plants in 4-inch pots were used; these were allowed to grow naturally, without any staking whatever.

Beautifying the Roof.

A very attractive feature of this range was the method of taking away the bareness of the roof. For this purpose hundreds of small cork baskets were used, and the effect when in flower was most satisfactory.

At the present time we have but two distinct colors in this class of begonias. Looking into the future, however, I can see a day coming when yellow and scarlet will be included in the number. When that time comes, then indeed begonias will be booming, and the critics who tell us that Lorraines are much too common will take a back seat.

Wm. McM. Brown.

REVIEW OF THE SEASON.

Profit or Loss.

The season is practically over and we can now look back over it and draw a few lessons. For many growers the season has been a disastrous one and, while the financial trouble did not affect all parts of the country so much as it did my section (New York), still its effects are everywhere felt to a greater or less extent. The market started out bravely and the early kinds were bringing good money. Monrovia, Mrs. A. T. Miller, Polly Rose, Pacific, Mrs. Coombes, White Coombes and Beatrice May paid handsomely—and then the panic struck us and it has been a case ever since of taking what one could get. Stock that other years could be easily disposed of at $5 and $6 a dozen could not be moved for half that, and to many of us the midseason kinds show nothing but a balance on the wrong side of the ledger.

All signs fail in a dry time and also in times of financial trouble, and to give a selection of varieties that sold the best when nothing at all sold would be sheer absurdity. I believe that if the market had continued as it began we would have had the best year, or at least one of the best years, for a long while, so that supply and demand did not figure this year. It was really the outside influence that affected the market, a condition, perhaps, that may never occur again. The quantity of stock in sight was not in excess of former years and the market in a normal condition would have absorbed it all right, but this year it was not a case of moving stock quickly by lowering the price. There was no market and stock simply did not sell at all.

There is considerable stock in the market at the present time (December 14), but the price it is selling at is not very alluring. While late varieties may pay well in some sections, there is but little call with us after Thanksgiving. The season is over and people turn once more to the roses and carnations.

The kinds most in evidence just now are Nagoya, Helen Frick, Maud Dean, Nonin and Mrs. R. MacArthur.

The Single Varieties.

I was pleased to see the notes on the single varieties in the Review December 12. They are the one bright spot in the market this year. Grown as pot plants, they sold well and brought good money. Being more or less of a novelty, of course, had some bearing on this, but their light, graceful beauty has made them welcome. Among the best people their merits are recognized and the coming year will see them grown by the thousand to supply the demand.

There is one objection to the single varieties as cut flowers. They do not ship very well, owing to their flowers getting jammed, but as pot plants or for growing for a home trade, few plants will turn in the profit that the single varieties will when properly handled. Charles H. Totty.

MUMS FOR EXHIBITION.

We have just had a successful chrysanthemum show in northwestern Texas and I want some advice as to varieties to grow for next year's exhibition. Please give the names of the best exhibition chrysanthemums, including each of the colors, and please designate those which are medium early and which sorts are very late. I like the incurved varieties best, but what I want is the largest, best formed and brightest colors I can get. R. S.

If R. S. will turn back to the Review of December 5, page 8, he will see a list of forty varieties that I consider the best kinds in cultivation today. They are for exhibitions ranging from October 25 to November 16, which is when the most of the shows are held.

An earlier selection would include Mary Godfrey, Mrs. A. T. Miller and L. H. Cochet, while late varieties that are good are M. J. Rosette, Kathleen Stoop, Mrs. Geo. Beech and Mrs. Swinburne. These are all of the incurving style and are useful for late flowers, but the very largest and most satisfactory varieties for exhibition are the forty varieties mentioned above. In most cases the Japanese types give larger flowers than the incurved.

Charles H. Totty.

MUMS FOR POT CULTURE.

Please give a list of the best varieties, early, mid-season and late, in three or four of the best colors, to grow in pots.

G. L. E.

A good selection for pot work would include the following varieties:

White—Polly Rose, Beatrice May, Moneymaker, Mrs. Clay Frick, Mrs. R. Beckett, Mrs. J. Tranter and Merza.

Yellow—Cheltoni, Mary Godfrey, Souvenir Scalarandis, A. T. Stevens and Oak Gold.

Pink—Pacific, L. H. Cochet, William

Establishment of Henry J. Puvogel, St. Paul, Minn.

Duckham, Miriam Hankey and Winter Cheer.

Red—Mrs. H. Partridge.

These are all splendid growers and can be relied on, and would give a good selection covering practically the entire season. Polly Rose, or, as it is known in some sections, Estelle, is grown more than any other one variety, but one would do well to remember that in most seasons anything a little different from what the other fellow has will bring in more money. C. H. T.

REFLEXED CHADWICK.

This year I have been growing both W. H. Chadwick and Golden Chadwick; in fact, I grew both last year. In the Golden Chadwick, my flowers were very nice and incurved, while in the pink or white Chadwick the petals were reflexed and drooping and not incurved like Golden Chadwick. The flowers were fine, but I was disappointed. I went to the parties from whom I got the plants and theirs were all incurved. They could not give me any explanation whatever. I took the second crown bud after September 1. Should I have taken the first crown? I consider it a fine variety to grow. I have written to several growers about it, but they could not give me any reason at all. The cuttings were made in April. M. H. B.

I am unable to say why the Chadwicks were reflexed and drooping, since they came of incurved stock; they certainly should have kept true. A local condition of soil or location should not make any difference, since the Golden Chadwick retained the incurved habit. I pass up the question myself. One thing is sure; it was not the bud selection, because any bud after September 1 will come true and right and a bud taken in August would not come at all, or at least that is my experience with Chadwick.

It is by no means unusual for individual flowers to deviate from the type, but it is another story when all the flowers are affected in a similar manner. C. H. TOTTY.

AMERICAN MUMS IN ENGLAND.

Now that there appears to be a renewal of interest in the chrysanthemum on the other side of the Atlantic, says C. Harmon Payne in the Gardeners' Magazine, it will be interesting to know whether there is any probability of an influx of novelties from that quarter, as there was twenty years ago. Most American growers appear to be of the opinion that Australian varieties are far more adapted for the American climate than European ones, and several critical articles by specialists have already appeared in the American gardening press on the subject.

It is curious that in spite of the severe competition both from France and the antipodes, to say nothing of the efforts of home raisers, there still remain with us a few of the American seedlings that once figured on our show-boards, and also some of those introduced from Japan via the States. They are preserved chiefly by growers whose requirements are largely decorative, and during some visits recently I have noted a few of these old-time Americans with no little interest.

In the hairy section Louis Boehmer and Hairy Wonder are probably the only two. There are several anemones, of which Mrs. Judge Benedict and Delaware appear to be the principal survivors. Of incurves, always a limited class from any source other than English, I have not met with a single instance of American origin.

Among the Japanese, William Tricker, a bright pink, seems to be much appreciated for decorative groups. Colonel W. B. Smith is also occasionally seen. Good Gracious, still one of the most distinct Japanese in cultivation, with its curious whorl of florets, is well worthy of being retained. Only once have I met with the deep crimson G. W. Childs, but Simplicity and Mutual Friend, both large whites, are much more common. Modesto, a rich deep golden-yellow, is another survivor. Very valuable on account of its earliness is Mrs. E. G. Hill, a tall-growing pink, of great size. Of the many others grown in the heyday of their popularity not a trace has been seen.

A JOKE ON VANDERBILT.

"An amusing but nasty trick was played in the early autumn at George W. Vanderbilt's Biltmore estate near Asheville," said a Pittsburg florist. "A friend of mine, one of the Biltmore gardeners, wrote and told me about it the other day.

"It seems that, at the entrance to Biltmore, there was a sign that read, 'Please do not pluck the flowers without leave.'

"Well, one visitors' day, some joker added an 's' to the sign's last word. As a result, every visitor left Biltmore that day with a delightful smile and an enormous bouquet."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

IN THE RESIDENCE DISTRICT.

For twenty years Henry J. Puvogel has been in the business at St. Paul. Originally he was located at Summit avenue, where he did a wholesale trade. Six years ago the present place was built, at Grand avenue and Chatsworth street, as shown in the accompanying illustration. This is in one of the best resident districts of St. Paul, one of the good business locations every city offers, where expenses are not so great as in the leading retail district downtown, but where greater facilities can be maintained. Mr. Puvogel has 12,000 feet of glass, which he devotes to carnations, violets, chrysanthemums and a general stock of pot plants. He does a large retail trade and wholesales any part of the stock not required at home, relying on other growers for roses.

The outside florist has a great advantage over the strictly retail store man, not only in handling the big holiday rushes, but when it comes to the spring and autumn planting seasons. Mr. Puvogel does an exceedingly large business in bedding plants, etc., and maintains his own place in such attractive shape that it is a standing advertisement to all who pass within sight.

WAUKESHA, WIS.—Schneck & Bliese say that the new house, 42x152, which they built last summer, is bringing good returns. They are much pleased with the results of fumigating with hydrocyanic acid gas. This remedy, they say, is sure, quick and cheap.

DAYTON, O.—A great many resignations have taken effect recently at the Cash Register Works and among others that of John E. Freudenberger, head of the horticultural department. It will be remembered that Mr. Freudenberger was given the thanks of the S. A. F. for his work in the outside exhibition for the Dayton convention. The Dayton people think the N. C. R. is retrenching.

SPECIAL NOTICE

Christmas and New Year's

Because Christmas and New Year's fall on Wednesday, the day the Review is printed, the issues for the next two weeks will go to press one day earlier than usual,

Tuesday, Dec. 24 and 31

Advertisers and correspondents will please see that their matter reaches us not later than Tuesday morning, and earlier will be better.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

INCORPORATED BY ACT OF CONGRESS MARCH 4, '01

Officers for 1907: President, William J. Stewart, Boston; vice-president, John Westcott, Philadelphia; secretary, P. J. Hauswirth, 232 Michigan avenue, Chicago; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Officers for 1908: President, F. H. Traendly, New York; vice-president, George W. McClure, Buffalo; secretary pro tem., Willis N. Rudd, Morgan Park, Ill.; treasurer, H. B. Beatty, Pittsburg.
Annual convention, Niagara Falls, August 18 to 21, 1908.
First National Flower Show, Chicago, November, 1908; W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, chairman.

SATURDAY of this week will be the shortest day of the year, but to the average florist the next three days will seem still shorter, because of the large amount of business to be crowded into them.

NAME OF PLANT.

Please tell me the name of the inclosed specimen. J. J. O.

The leaves are those of an acacia, either A. armata or one with very similar foliage. C. W.

A QUESTION ON GLAZING.

Do you know whether glass not bedded, but with the putty run on top, has proved satisfactory? E. C. B.

We putty all our houses in this way, and six years of trial have given us good satisfaction. If the glass does not fit too tightly, so that a portion of the putty can get between the glass and the bar, it will, of course, stick on better. This is well worth considering. We use Twemlow's putty in preference to any others we have tried. A. F. J. BAUR.

INSECTS ON FUCHSIAS.

I am much troubled with a white mite, exactly like the black mite. I have found it on fuchsias several times. I would like to know of some way of getting them off, other than by hand-picking. A. E. P.

I am not acquainted with any white mite on fuchsias, but possibly the white fly is the pest referred to. Syringing freely with soap and water will keep it in check, but the only way to exterminate it is to fumigate with hydrocyanic acid gas, directions for the use of which have frequently been given in the columns of the REVIEW. The white fly is partial to fuchsias, pelargoniums of the show type, marguerites, calceolarias and some other greenhouse plants. Fumigation with gas can be done with perfect safety, especially during cool weather, if directions frequently given in the REVIEW are followed. C. W.

INSECTS ON EUONYMUS.

Please tell the remedy for the insect found on the enclosed leaves of Euonymus Japonica. The bushes are covered with them. W. J. H.

The leaves enclosed were covered with San Jose scale. This pest is a difficult one to combat, but can be overcome if fought persistently. There are several remedies recommended for this scale. The lime and sulphur wash would make your plants, which are evergreens, very unsightly. Try spraying with Scalecide, sold by many seedsmen and manufactured by the Pratt Mfg. Co., New York. I have found this remedy effective and can confidently recommend its use. Full directions on all cans. An article on San Jose scale appeared in a recent number of the REVIEW, which may contain some points of interest. C. W.

THE READERS' CORNER.

A File of the Review.

Here is one way of keeping the REVIEW for reference. Cut two covers of heavy pasteboard. Take all the issues for the month, place them between the covers, punch three holes through them all and tie loosely with cord. Cut out the table of contents from each enclosed copy and paste them in order on the cover.

There is so much useful information in the REVIEW that no florist can afford to lose even one copy.

F. D. HARTSHORN.

One Possible Improvement.

I am extending my subscription to the REVIEW for two years, hoping to add that many to my present seventy-two years and enjoy your excellent periodical as in the past. I can see only one way by which the paper could be improved, and that would be by more persons asking questions. F. P. AVERY.

THE DEATH ROLL.

James Dell.

James Dell, whose death occurred this week, came to Pittsburg about twenty years ago as a cut flower artist for John R. & S. Murdoch, and worked for them until that firm quit business, when he took their store, but things not going right he closed out the business and has since been employed by the various florists of that city. He has had the management of H. L. Blind & Bros.' south side store and had not been away more than a week when his death occurred.

Mr. Dell was of a kind and genial disposition and was well liked by every one who knew him. He leaves one son. The remains will be taken to New York and laid in the family lot in that city.

E. A. Lacy.

E. A. Lacy, of Rochester, N. Y., died December 3, after a brief illness with typhoid fever. He was 30 years of age and the only support of his mother and sister.

American Beauties

We have a good supply of American Beauties, extra fine stock, all lengths of stems but especially strong on long.

CARNATIONS

If there is any item we are stronger on than on other stock, it is on Carnations. We will be in full crop and the best stock we ever shipped; our Enchantress have been the finest in town all fall, and we shall have them still better for Christmas. Also large lots of fine white and pink.

VIOLETS

We handle the cream of the Hudson River doubles and fancy home-grown singles. We shall have a larger supply than at any previous Christmas.

Also large supplies of Poinsettias, Valley, Sweet Peas, Bouvardia, Harrisii, Callas, Paper Whites, Romans, Stevias, etc. Plenty Green Goods, as always. An extra fine crop of Smilax now ready.

Give us your Christmas order and when you find yourself running short write or wire additional orders; if seasonable flowers are to be had in Chicago, they are to be had at Amling's.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The wholesalers in the great central market already are beginning to get nervous. We have had a week of exceedingly bad weather and it has had the usual effect of cutting down supplies. At the same time, the growers are holding back more or less and the result has been a decided shortening of receipts. As a consequence, the market feels more or less doubt as to the extent of the holiday supplies. Where a week ago it was considered that supplies in nearly all lines would be adequate for the Christmas demand, it now is seriously questioned if there will not be a shortage in most lines. The result has been that the wholesalers, while anxious to book orders, are not willing to do so at anything but top figures, and in many cases they are booking them, where the customer will stand for it, on the basis of, "If we have the stock, you get it, and at the market price."

As a natural result of the shortening in supplies, prices have advanced all along the line. Beauties and other roses are up. The quality is fine, but the receipts have been reduced in the same proportion that the price has advanced. Carnations, too, are under the requirements of the market, and prices close to Christmas quotations were asked by Tuesday of this week. On other items, there is not much change. Violets, while not in such large supply as last week, still are abundant and not materially advanced in price. The market is full of Paper Whites and longiflorum lilies have become abundant. Stevia and mignonette are seen everywhere and are slow sale. The business done in green goods leaves nothing to be desired.

While a large number of Christmas orders now are on file, still many good buyers have not been heard from. It appears they are waiting, undecided as to how much stock they will need. The indications are that at the last minute there will be a rush which will beat anything ever seen in this market. With existing weather conditions, supplies will be reduced throughout the Mississippi valley, and Chicago will bear the brunt of the demand. Four or five days of bright, mild weather would be worth thousands of dollars to the trade.

Last week's market was lackadaisical. The word is a favorite with W. E. Lynch, of Hunt's, and reference to the dictionary shows that it is particularly applicable to the condition last week. Century says it means "sentimentally woebegone, languid, or listless."

Lest They Forget.

Borrowing a phrase from Kipling, "Lest they forget, we say it yet," don't overload this market December 24.

Practically every wholesaler agrees that the holding back, which is inevitable, will produce a stronger market December 20 and 21 than we shall have December 24, after the shipping is over.

Quite a number of shipments will go out December 22, which is Sunday, but the bulk of the shipping will be December 23. Let everything come in by December 23 and let the wholesaler carry it over, if in his judgment it seems wise.

Club Meeting.

There was an exceptionally good attendance at the club meeting December 12, but one of the best liked and familiar faces was missed, and immediately after reading the minutes, President Bruns asked W. N. Rudd to put in words the sorrow which everyone felt at the death of P. J. Hauswirth. A committee, consisting of J. C. Vaughan, W. N. Rudd, and F. F. Benthey, was appointed to draft resolutions.

The March meeting of the Rose Society was discussed, E. G. Hill, of Richmond, who was present, outlining the history and aims of the organization.

On motion of George Asmus, a committee of seven was authorized to raise a guarantee fund, which the club headed with $100, to engage a hall and to go ahead with the promotion of the show, the solicitation of exhibits and memberships. The president named August Poehlmann, Leonard Kill, Philip Schupp, George Asmus, F. F. Benthey, E. C. Amling and J. C. Vaughan.

The club voted to offer a suitable trophy in the premium list for the national flower show, November, 1908.

Applications for memberships were received from Thomas McAllister, Oak Park; A. F. Longren, Des Plaines; E. Bolinger, Lake Forest; William Keimel, Morton Grove. Resignations were accepted, with regret, from P. N. Halbrook, formerly of Mount Greenwood, who is now located at Columbus, O., and from H. Hasselbring, formerly of the University of Chicago, who is now located in Cuba.

F. F. Benthey, for the nominating committee, presented a report which paid compliment to the efficiency of the corps of officers who served the club this year. H. N. Bruns was named for re-election as president but withdrew and nominated Leonard Kill in his stead. The other nominees are: Vice-president, George Asmus; treasurer, E. F. Winterson; recording secretary, Tim Waters; financial secretary, J. E. Jensen; trustees, F. F. Benthey, J. F. Klimmer, August Poehlmann, C. H. Fisk, H. N. Bruns.

E. G. Hill read a paper on roses, which appears elsewhere in this issue, and followed it with a brief discussion of what he believes to be the theory through the application of which we shall derive our best new roses of the future. Paul M. Palez, of Little Rock, Ark., spoke of the Little Rock flower show this fall, and asked for Chicago support in 1908. A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, Conn., was present during the early part of the evening, but had escaped before the talking commenced.

The exhibits were numerous. Carnation Defiance, the scarlet now being disseminated by Jensen & Dekema and W. N. Rudd, was in fine form. It has improved greatly since the November flower show. Afterglow, grown by the E. G. Hill Co., also was better than when seen here in November. The E. G. Hill Co. staged a splendid vase of Princess rose and another of Rhea Reid, the flowers in each case being somewhat the worse for wear. Mr. Hill said orders for over 50,000 Rhea Reid have been booked. Peter Reinberg showed Mrs. Marshall Field, Sunrise and Uncle John, and Poehlmann Bros. Co. brought Cardinal and Mrs. Potter Palmer, the former being specially good, the stems nearly four feet long. The judges awarded certificates on the following scores: Cardinal, 87; Princess, 89; Rhea Reid, 88; Afterglow, 87. Defiance had been previously certificated by the club. Mrs. Palmer scored 83. Mrs. Field, Uncle John and Sunrise were not scored, as they previously had been exhibited before the club. The prizes offered by the E. F. Winterson Co., to those who were actual growers of the flowers exhibited, were awarded as follows: First, to Joe Hill, for Princess; second, to Fred Lemon, for Rhea Reid; third, to W. Keimel, for Cardinal. The judges were W. N. Rudd, Frank Benthey and J. P. Risch.

Various Notes.

W. L. Palinsky has been suffering for a week with neuralgia in his face.

Friday the thirteenth proved a lucky day for W. S. Scofield, on North State street, for on that day he won, at a church raffle, a muff and stole, valued at $200.

In the midst of Saturday's blizzard, Bassett & Washburn recived a telegram from O. P. Bassett, announcing his safe arrival at Pasadena and adding "Glorious summer weather!"

The first Proserpine tulips seen in the market this season were received by E. H. Hunt December 16. They hardly could be called cut tulips, for the grower had shipped them bulbs and all.

Vaughan & Sperry report that, after hesitating about it for a fortnight, the leading retailers have concluded that lycopodium vine, a new article this season, is a good thing and that the best stores are buying it in good quantity.

Bassett & Washburn have a large crop of giganteum lilies, which are not selling any too fast just now.

Stollery Bros. report they placed their first pans of tulips on sale December 15, and that they sold quickly. They say business, while quiet, is fully up to last year at this season.

For a fortnight it has been noted that Max Ringier's smile has been even broader than usual. When he could no longer keep it to himself he announced the arrival of the first son.

Kennicott Bros. Co. says the business in green goods this season beats all records with them. The double store over their place being vacant, they put in a car of wild smilax, another of holly

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The general condition of business last week has shown some improvement, but not all that is desired. In going the rounds one finds the trade in a speculative mood regarding the holidays. They should be placing orders for flowers, but are holding off, in doubt as to how much they should order. The experience of some old-timers has been that during other periods of business depression the cut flower trade seemed to be benefited at the expense of the jewelry and other lines, as many seemed to consider that they could send a box of flowers to a person to whom they could send nothing else unless of much greater value, so that flowers were an economical investment. The problem is, "Will this be true this year?"

Various Notes.

All the shops are looking very much like Christmas. Mrs. E. A. Williams has a grand collection of specimen plants artistically arranged, and in her window, not too conspicuous, a large wreath of artificial poinsettias, which, with the other decorations, is an attraction which holds crowds all day—even the last few miserable days.

Randolph & McClements are taking advantage of their great show windows, all arranged with handsome vases and beautiful plants.

A. W. Smith has his big store filled with everything that belongs to Christmas and expects to make this the banner holiday season of his long business career. (With that spirit you sell goods.)

H. L. Blind & Bros. have a beautiful show of poinsettias in pans, azaleas, begonias and other fine plants that would be hard to equal, much less surpass.

Breitenstein & Flemm, who always have unique things, this year have among their decorations May lanterns, the same as watchmen of old carried. These are tied with red ribbon and evergreen and attract a great deal of attention and appeal most to readers of old German Christmas lore.

The Zieger Co., not satisfied with a beautiful new shop, has done everything possible to improve it and make it more attractive with fine stock.

The fact of the matter is, never have the shops been made to look better than this season and one going around cannot conceive how people can look and not buy.

The decorative fever has spread to at least one wholesaler. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has decorated the big store with wild smilax and artificial poinsettias.

Billy Lowe, the green goods man, came to life and is stocked up as usual, the only shortage being holly, which has been scarce in this market up to the present.

Jos. Thomas, of Greensburg, has moved into a large new store, which he has made equal to the larger city stores.

Albert McCoyd has been confined to his home by an attack of grip, but expects to be out this week.

Among those indisposed at this writing are A. M. Murdoch and T. P. Langhans. Here's hoping they will all be able to hustle before the last of the week.

Hoo-Hoo.

COLUMBUS, OHIO.

State of Trade.

Trade has been brisk of late and stock about used up from day to day. Several funerals of prominent people last week used up loads of stock.

The outlook for Christmas supply is not encouraging, as carnations seem to be almost at a standstill. The cut is just about one-third what it should be. Roses will be in fair supply. There will be plenty of Paper Whites, Romans, sweet peas and valley, which will help out for cheaper stock. Smilax is fine and likely will be enough to go around. Plumosus is a scarce article in this market, as little is grown here.

All the florists are hoping for a big Christmas trade, but it looks as though the high prices will be a drawback.

Various Notes.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting Tuesday evening, December 10. A card game was on the program, but many members present were in favor of bowling, so after the meeting they retired to the alleys. The high scores were made by McKellar, Reichert, Beuhler, Currie and Blum. The high roll was 196, by McKellar.

The Munk Floral Co. reports carnations coming on slowly. This firm makes a specialty of lettuce and it is in fine condition.

Metzmaier reports business flourishing.

Club Meeting.

The Montreal Gardeners' & Florists' Club held its annual meeting Monday, December 2. The financial report of the recent chrysanthemum show proved much better than had been anticipated.

The officers elected for 1908 are: President, J. Pidduck; first vice-president, J. C. Eddy; second vice-president, J. Luck; secretary-treasurer, W. H. Horobin, 283 Marquette street; assistant secretary, H. J. Eddy. Committee: G. Trussell, Geo. A. Robinson, J. E. West, G. Vreugde, Alf. Pinoteau, Wm. C. Hall and ex-President A. H. Walker.

The club meetings in future will be held first and third Mondays at 8 p. m., in the new hall, 211 Sherbrooke street, West.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business was only fair last week. As the Christmas holidays are upon us, the outlook is for more steady demand if prices are not too high. Social work among the uptown florists has not been so brisk as usual at this time of the year. Funeral work was quite heavy last week and that helped out greatly, as the wholesalers say white flowers have been in good demand. There was a good call for blooming plants with the uptown florists. At the wholesale houses stock is plentiful in all grades except extra fancy. "How is stock going to be for Christmas?" is the question of the hour and the wholesalers have as yet fixed no definite prices, although they think there will be plenty of almost everything. They only hope that the growers will send their stock in right along and not resort to pickling and expect fancy prices.

Roses were not high last week. A scarcity was noticed in fancy Beauties only. Carnations were never of better quality, with top price at $5 per hundred for extra fancy. Romans, Paper Whites, lily of the valley and callas are plentiful and selling at usual prices, with demand fair.

Californian violets were down to 50 cents per hundred for the best. These should be in great demand next week. Some extra fine poinsettias were seen last week at $3 to $4 per dozen.

Smilax, galax, adiantum and asparagus are selling well, and there is plenty in the market.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular monthly meeting Thursday afternoon, December 12, and it was one of the largest of the year, there being nearly fifty present when President Young called to order. There was a large representation of students from the Missouri Botanical Garden, who took a great interest in the proceedings.

A. S. Halstead, of Belleville, and Charles Johann, of Collinsville, Ill., were elected to membership. Resolutions on the death of Philip J. Hauswirth, of Chicago, were adopted.

C. C. Sanders introduced S. L. Bray, who talked on starting a pottery, with the co-operation of the members of the club to form a stock company. On motion, President Young appointed a committee of five to take this matter up with Mr. Bray and report at the next meeting. The committee is as follows: C. C. Sanders, Emil Schray, J. F. Ammann, A. J. Bentzen and E. W. Guy.

The trustees were instructed to report at the next meeting regarding an entertainment to be given early in February. After this, George H. Pring, of the Missouri Botanical Garden, entertained the members with a stereopticon lecture on "The Royal Gardens of Kew." This young gentleman visited the gardens last summer and brought the slides back with him. His lecture was listened to with great interest and all were delighted with the pictures as shown on the canvas.

Various Notes.

Walter Mott, after an absence of several years, paid us a visit last week in the interest of Arthur T. Boddington, New York. Rodger Peterson, of Cincinnati, also called on the trade last week.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville; A. S. Halstead, E. W. Guy and Henry Emunds, of Belleville; Henry Johann, of Collinsville; William Winter, of Kirkwood, and John Connon, of Webster Groves, called on the trade last week Thursday, and attended the club meeting.

C. Young & Sons Co. is making a grand display of blooming plants at its store, 1406 Olive street. The firm ordered last week a carload of pots from the Keller Pottery Co., of Norristown, Pa.

George Waldbart was still showing a fine lot of cut chrysanthemums last week, in his attractive show windows. His Honaker says the Morehead trap is the best thing of its kind yet invented. By its use they were enabled to do away with the boiler-pit when building the fine new packing shed. I was shown here a sport from the Enchantress carnation which is identical with Schroeder's Rose-pink. Some houses here are made to grow three crops during the year. Beauty, Chatenay and Wellesley are largely grown. Out-of-town demand is steadily increasing, both for cut flowers and pot plants. A large shipping business is being built up, which taxes the present capacity to its limit. Violets are grown in quantity, chiefly Princess of Wales, which is preferred to Gov. Herrick, owing to the latter's lack of fragrance. The fine batch of poinsettias sold for the holidays proves this plant to be as popular here as ever. The store is an ornament to the town and is conceded to have done much toward educating the public to appreciate high class goods. The prices obtained would do credit to the biggest city.

Michler Bros. have had many inquiries regarding their begonia, which was illustrated and described in the REVIEW. It is a good thing, being very free in habit of growth and flower. The color of bloom is Enchantress pink. It is an acquisition in flowering begonias to the catalogue man looking for a sterling novelty.

J. A. Keller is rebuilding and adding quite a little. The financial flurry did not affect the craft to any extent and a good holiday business is looked for.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The business of last week in general was not as active as had been hoped. Prices are holding about the same, with prospects of an advance. There probably will be no marked change until a few days before Christmas. Beauties are good, and promise to be in fine shape for the holidays, but are not expected to bring quite as fancy prices as in former years. Some fine Richmond and Liberty roses are received daily and sell at fairly good prices. The demand for these in the next few days will be heavy, and it is supposed they will bring splendid prices. Killarney is in fine condition and sells well, prices being a trifle better. Some really fine ones bring exceptionally good figures. Brides and Maids were never better at this time of year. The better grades clean up nicely, while the shorts sell slowly.

Carnations have not come in heavily, but the supply has been erratic, some days heavy and others light, so that it has been hard to fill all orders. The growers say the plants are full of buds, and they anticipate a nice cut when they will be in demand, at the end of this week. Poinsettias will be in good demand and in fine shape. Some growers claim that those grown in pots are much harder and will not wilt as soon as those grown in benches or beds. Violets have been in fair demand and promise to be in fine shape. Gardenias are excellent and are selling well.

The Finest Place in America.

Florists all over the country will be interested in a visit paid this week to Riverton, N. J., where the establishment of Henry A. Dreer is situated. The greenhouses never looked better than on that afternoon, and a few notes gathered in the two and three-quarter hours' stroll through them may prove valuable. Only the most important features are here recorded. A house of specimen plants of Adiantum Farleyense was in beautiful condition, the 6-inch and 8-inch sizes being both well grown, showing cultural skill of no mean order. A whole range of a dozen benches was devoted to Cocos Weddelliana, a rare sight. The plants were in 2-inch, 3-inch, 5-inch and 6-inch pots, most of them singly, some made up. The larger sizes were superb, something seldom seen in this country, the plants being tall and graceful to a degree. Kentia Forsteriana, in the large, decorative sizes; filled many houses, the plants being uniformly of a rich, glossy green that bespoke perfect health. Phœnix Rœbelenii is making a strong bid for popularity, the medium sized plants being very pretty and yet combining strength with beauty.

The cold house is an interesting sight. Bay trees, tree-shaped or standard and pyramidal, presented an imposing appearance. There was boxwood, both standard and ball-shaped, and also small stock for window boxes. Aucuba Japonica, also Laurus cerasus, were there, too. A bench of Rex begonias, in great variety, is beautifully colored. Among the ferns for small ferneries Pteris Wilsoni stands out prominently. A block of Ficus elastica was well grown, of medium height and very attractive. Pandanus Veitchii was nicely colored. I could, as Mr. Bayersdorfer often says, "write a whole volume, would space permit," of this most interesting place, where things are done well and done in quantity.

Godfrey Aschmann's.

Godfrey Aschmann has established a lucrative business in pot plants through his thorough knowledge of the requirements of the buyer, through his ability to cater to those requirements, and through his fearless advertising. Mr. Aschmann believes that the medium sizes of plants are what the buyer requires, and what pay best, and he produces those medium sizes with the least possible expense consistent with satisfactory quality. His place today fully demonstrates these facts. His benches of araucarias, in three varieties, are in fine condition. His ferns show judgment in picking the winners. He has pinned his faith on Boston, Scottii and Whitmani ferns, and has all three in quantity in good, salable sizes. His Primula Sinensis are well grown, of a large flowering strain, while his Primula obconica make a pleasing effect in mass, the variety of colors contrasting prettily. The showiest bench on the place is filled with good sized plants of Gloire de Lorraine begonias, a sheet of pink. Mr. Aschmann has a fine lot of azaleas, a few being flowered for Christmas. The varieties are Apollo, scarlet; Deutsche Perle, white; Vervæneana, pink; Simon Mardner, pink, and Mme. Petrick, rose-pink. There were a nice lot of small ferns for ferneries and many other things of interest.

The Grab-Bag.

One of the most interesting features of our horticultural gatherings today, and a feature that is said to exist nowhere else than in Philadelphia, is what may be termed the grab-bag game, which is played at the close of each meeting of one of our local horticultural societies. The theory of the grab-bag game is that the society, having awarded money prizes for every exhibit staged, is entitled to that exhibit, provided it be cut flowers, and these flowers are then and there distributed among the fair sex who have stayed throughout the meeting. The practical side of the grab-bag game is startling. When the motion to adjourn has been carried several members of the executive committee are seen whispering with the exhibitors. This is merely a matter of form; they are saying, "You have won umpteen dollars; may we give your flowers to the ladies?" Of course, the exhibitor, whose wife's eye is probably upon him, says he will be charmed, and the committeemen then gather around the exhibition table. Here is where the fun begins. The ladies, who have been scattered about the hall talking to their escorts, suddenly lose that gentle expression; you hear the words, "I want that," spoken in low tones, but with great earnestness, and the speaker springs forward. Soon there is a crowd five or six deep around the committeemen, who are distributing the spoils with exemplary fairness. There was a regular attendant, in particular, who invariably came with an umbrella even on perfectly clear nights. This umbrella had its purpose, for in it corn, celery and even pumpkins, as well as chrysanthemums and carnations, disappeared, and she was not a member!

Various Notes.

The holly coming into the market is fine, but is reported scarce.

W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., was in town recently looking things over.

The first Baltimore german, which took place December 9, used up quite a nice lot of choice flowers.

Callas and Easter lilies are reported in fine condition for the holidays.

Philip Breitmeyer and son, of Detroit, were in Philadelphia recently. PHIL.

NEWPORT, R. I.

The annual meeting of the Newport Horticultural Society was held in Mercury hall December 10, with President Butterton in the chair. This meeting would have been largely attended, were it not that a fierce storm of wind and rain raged all the afternoon and early evening. However, there was a fair attendance.

At this meeting there was a large and varied exhibit of carnations from H. A. Jahn, New Bedford. The president appointed John T. Allan, Andrew S. Meikle and James J. Sullivan as a committee to look the exhibit over. From this committee, later in the evening, came the report that it recommended that the society's silver medal be awarded to Mr. Jahn for his seedling white carnation, Lloyd. This recommendation was adopted. The same grower was also awarded a certificate of merit for another white seedling carnation.

The secretaries and the treasurer submitted their yearly reports. Those of the financial secretary and treasurer showed that the receipts during the year were about $2,200, with expenditures almost the same amount. Two large shows had been given, which, along with various other large items of expenditure in connection with these shows, made the cash balance on hand at the end of the year smaller than usual. There is a substantial balance in the building fund and dues unpaid to the amount of $600.

The election of officers resulted as follows: President, John T. Allan; first vice-president, Samuel Speers; second vice-president, James Robertson; recording secretary, David McIntosh; financial secretary, Daniel J. Coughlin; treasurer, A. K. McMahon; sergeant-at-arms, W. F. Smith; auditors, W. S. Sisson, Bruce Butterton and B. M. Anthony; executive committee, Andrew S. Meikle, James J. Sullivan, Bruce Butterton, Alex Fraser, Wm. G. Matson, R. Patterson, C. Oscar Schultz, B. M. Anthony and W. F. Smith, along with the officers as members ex-officio.

It was voted to give a ball sometime early in January.

The society is at present in good condition. The past year was one of the best in its history. The attendance at the exhibitions showed a marked increase over that of the previous year, while the interest of the public showed a decided awakening to a realization of what the society is accomplishing. The officers of the society for the past year were given a hearty vote of thanks for their efficiency in the discharge of their duties.

BOSTON.

The Market.

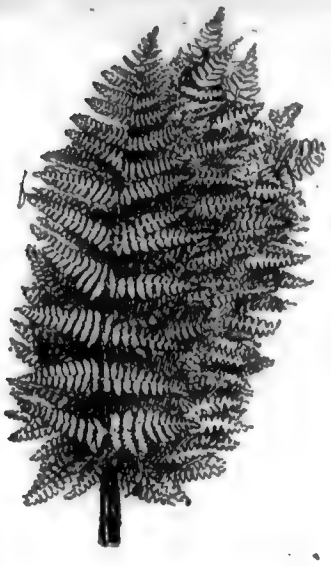
While business was not specially brisk last week, the usual shortening up of supplies, prior to Christmas, is now in evidence and prices are, if anything, a little higher. The optimistic feeling, which was lacking a month ago, is now much more general and it looks as though the business for the coming holidays would be fully equal to last year's. Plant trade, which has been cutting more and more of a figure each year, at the expense of cut flowers, again promises to be heavy, there being a good demand already for Lorraine begonias, solanums, ardisias, cyclamens, ericas, poinsettias, azaleas and other seasonable plants.

Chrysanthemums still arrive in small lots and will do so until after Christmas. These realize fair prices. Growers who have early and late sorts will do much better than those who have grown midseason varieties. Roses are of fine quality. Beauty, Killarney, Chatenay and Wellesley, of exceptional excellence, are seen. Carnations vary from $2 to $5 per hundred; whites sell the slowest and only the fancies reach the higher figure. Violets are selling fairly well. The arrivals are fewer, as a heavy picking is being held back. Only a few Lilium Harrisii are coming in; some speciosums are also seen. Callas are not abundant.

Bulbous stock is plentiful, as is stevia. Quite a little bouvardia is coming in, also marguerites, mignonette and a few poinsettias. The last named are not usually sold much until Christmas week. There is a better call for adiantum and asparagus, while the dealers in Christmas greenery are exceptionally busy.

Horticultural Society.

An invitation has been extended to the Music Hall and Park Street flower markets to hold their winter exhibition in Horticultural hall. As artificial light is necessary in both markets, a neutral site, with such facilities and light as Horticultural hall affords, will be a decided advantage.



Awards made by the garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society include first prize of $160 in the Hunnewell triennial class to the Plant estate, T. W. Head, gardener; a silver medal to James Garthley, gardener to H. H. Rogers, for skillful cultivation of chrysanthemums, and first prize for best peony garden to Dr. C. S. Minot.

A school garden conference was held at Horticultural hall December 15. In spite of the heavy snow storm there was a good attendance. E. V. Hallock, of Queens, N. Y., was one of those who made addresses.

The annual series of lectures and discussions are in the printers' hands and will be ready in a few days, as will the schedule of prizes for 1908.

Club Meeting.

The closing meeting of the year attracted a large number of members to Horticultural hall December 17, over 150 being present. Some time was occupied in the discussion of an amendment to the by-laws regarding the election of officers. The plan has been to select a nominating committee to bring in a list to be voted upon. An amendment offered by William Downs sought to change this by having nominations from the floor in November, election in December and installation in January. After a number of members had expressed themselves the amendment was put and declared carried. W. J. Stewart read a paper entitled "The Innocents Abroad," which proved extremely interesting.

There were some seasonable exhibits on the tables as usual. Several new members were elected. Announcements of the successful launching of the landscape classes was made. A sympathetic letter was voted sent to W. W. Edgar, who was seriously ill. It was stated that installation night, January 21, will be made the occasion of interesting addresses. Refreshments were served, as usual, and the last meeting of 1907 closed, every one feeling that 1908 would be the best year in the club's history.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Saturday of last week developed the worst storm of the year. Much damage was done. Commencing with a Canadian snow storm, it rapidly developed into sleet and later on a constant downpour of rain that made the streets impassable, gave the retail flower business too great a burden to carry and added to the half million who are already suffering from the prevailing epidemic. About fifty per cent of the florists, as usual, cannot make the grip behave. So far there have been no fatalities. The disease is of a mild form and none have been on the shelf over a week.

The new week opens clear and cooler, with a fair outlook for seasonable weather. In the meantime the plantsmen are shipping their stock day and night to out-of-town customers and the New York retailers already are making their stores ready for Christmas. Everything indicates a more cheerful expectation for the holidays, and while the ordering of large and expensive plants is much curtailed, the volume of business, especially in the small and medium-sized plants, will be greater than ever before. Some of the growers say they are already sold out. The new plant market on Twenty-seventh street has naturally given an impetus to this department.

The prophecy of last week, as to probable Christmas prices, seems to meet with general endorsement. Beauties may do a little better than 50 cents; some say 75 cents. At present 30 cents is top and there are plenty of them. There will be a gradual increase from now until the holidays, especially if the weather grows colder and the confidence of business men increases. Bride and Maid are selling from 2 cents to 10 cents and carnations 2 cents to 5 cents.

The stock of chrysanthemums lessens daily. There are a few arriving this week and the remnants that hold over for Christmas will meet with a ready sale.

Violets hold at the quoted prices. Seldom do they touch 75 cents and 50 cents has been the almost universal figure. One of the experts predicts $1 for the holidays. Orchids and lilies are scarce and advancing.

The call for holly, wild smilax and wreathing is abnormally insistent. Great forces of extra help continue the manufacture of roping night and day. The green goods men have made their store fronts attractive. Christmas trees are here by the million. John Weir, in Brooklyn, handles over 1,000 trees yearly, and every Brooklyn florist does his share.

Various Notes.

The new officers of the New York Florists' Club give general satisfaction. They are all practical men, high in the esteem of the members and competent to lead the club to still greater achievements. With a membership of 250, it is the general desire to have an annual dinner that will gather the majority of this host in a harmonious reunion that will materialize a better attendance than has been the average for many years. This can easily be accomplished by popular prices and a judicious selection of a banquet hall.

The Greek American Retail Florists' Association will have its first annual ball January 31, 1908, at the Palm Garden on Fifty-eighth street, the proceeds to be devoted to the establishment of a Greek school in New York.

The Horticultural Society of New York held its regular monthly meeting December 11 at the American Institute rooms on West Forty-fourth street. The lecture by Miss Ella Shinn Carter, of Philadelphia, on a "Summer School Garden," was very interesting and was illustrated by handsome stereopticon views, but the audience may be considered a fair demonstration of New York's interest in horticultural development, there being thirteen in attendance. It is to be hoped the number may not seriously antagonize the superstitious. I noted F. R. Pierson and Patrick O'Mara among those present, so after all the little lady is to be congratulated. I think the New York Florists' Club would give her a larger reception.

The usual Christmas turkey raffle under the management of Thos. Jackson will occur in the rooms of the Cut Flower Exchange, in the Coogan building, December 24.

W. E. Marshall & Co., at 146 West Twenty-third street, report a splendid year. A. Watkins, for some years with Wm. Elliott & Sons and W. W. Rawson & Co., is now associated with this house.

Jeff. Doremus, of Madison, was in the city December 16. He is shipping some fine Beauties to A. J. Guttman, whose name was omitted from the list of trustees elected by the New York Florists' Club in our last issue.

John A. Payne, of Jersey City, has had a busy year and reports the outlook for 1908 optimistic.

Igoe Bros., manufacturers of the extension carnation support, report an exceptional year, their large new factory now meeting every requirement.

Andrew Wilson, of Madison, was in the city December 14. The seedsmen are all cataloguing his plant oil and the florists' supply houses are also dispensing it.

Frank L. Moore, of Chatham, reports that a great many are trying his Sunnywoods hose.

The Julius Roehrs Co. was never better prepared for Christmas. The majority of its customers prefer the visit to the great plant of 100 greenhouses to the selection from samples at the plant market, and the days have been busy ones for a month past, until already the majority of the blooming plants are spoken for.

Anton Schultheis, of College Point, has some especially handsome ericas, poinsettias, ardisias, oranges, cyclamens and azaleas this Christmas.

Schloss Bros. say business is too good. Day and night work is too strenuous.

Wertheimer Bros. report a year far in advance of any in their career.

B. Rosens, at 48 West Twenty-ninth street, is having a wonderful Christmas trade in all supply lines, especially Christmas bells.

The Kervan Co. is handling great quantities of wild smilax, holly and other southern evergreens.

H. Kenney's facilities, in Brooklyn, for the storage of moss of every kind speak well for an immense shipping trade.

boken, N. J., shows a most satisfactory increase for the year.

Ambidextrous alliteration characterizes the printed matter of Arthur T. Boddington. For instance, "Selected seeds, successfully sown, secure sure, safe and serviceable satisfaction." The best of it is, the increase in Mr. Boddington's business in 1907 demonstrates it decisively, dextrously and delightfully.

Jas. McManus says there will be a good supply of orchids for Christmas, but that the call has now become so great that many more could be used. He has orders for shipment to many distant cities.

Arthur Cowee, the gladiolus specialist, dropped in off his Meadowvale farm last week, and disported on the great white way.

The personal property of Anthony J. Fellouris will be sold at auction December 27 at 71 Broadway, under the direction of W. C. Links, trustee for the referee in bankruptcy.

The New York Cut Flower Co. has taken a judgment for $1,185 against C. R. Scallen.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres. George S. Green, Chicago; First Vice-pres., M. H. Duryea, New York; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland.

PUSH the catalogue or you will be behind the procession.

A LARGE proportion of the seed stores are just now devoting their attention to Christmas greens.

BEAN prices of last year will be all right for this year's retail lists, according to some of the catalogue men.

VISITED CHICAGO: W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, Mich.; Wm. Kueker, of the Farmers' Seed Co., Faribault, Minn.

W. W. BARNARD Co., Chicago, reports a greater rush for Christmas greens now on than at any time in their many years of experience with this trade.

A. WATKINS, for two years with Wm. Elliott & Sons and for one year with W. W. Rawson & Co., Boston, is now associated with W. E. Marshall & Co., New York.

H. G. HASTING & Co., with headquarters at Interlachen, Fla., have branches at Atlanta, Ga., and San Antonio, Tex. They expect their seed sales for 1908 will approximate $250,000.

EVERGREEN sweet corn is not likely to go into the retail seed catalogues at more than $1.75 per peck and $7 per bushel, while the wholesalers will hardly be in shape to put it at less in the trade lists.

IN the case of the protest of the Wallerstein Produce Co., Richmond, Va., the U. S. Board of General Appraisers has reaffirmed its recent decision as to the duty on cowpeas and sustained the importer's contention.

A FEW cars of onion sets have been shipped out of Chicago this week, and the chance thereby given to overhaul the piles of trays shows that the sets are going to shrink heavily before the bulk of the shipments are due to go out.

IT is argued by some of the posted dealers that the high prices placed upon onion seed last fall by the California growers gave other sections a chance to break in and that California will feel the effects of it for some time to come.

IT is predicted by some of the parties interested in the onion set business that the acreage for 1908 will be cut down greatly on account of the shortage of onion seed. These predictions, however, do not usually amount to much, as the price asked for seed will eventually be paid, each grower trusting that the other fellow will be the one to cut his acreage.

THE wholesale seedsmen report conditions in first-class shape. The outlook for spring trade is good, judging from the inquiry for prices. Fall shipments on the contract basis have been sent out and the stocks shipped have given excellent satisfaction. There is not much complaint on the percentage of cut on the scarce items, the only criticism worth mentioning on this point being on the fearful cuts on the white varieties of American grown onion seed. This criticism can hardly be called legitimate, however, as hints of conditions were given out quite early in the season.

THE seed warehouse of the Joseph A. Schindler Co., New Orleans, was destroyed by fire on the night of December 14. The loss is estimated at $2,000, covered by insurance.

THE newly seeded area of winter wheat is estimated by the U. S. Department of Agriculture as being 1.9 per cent less than the area sown in the fall of 1906, equivalent to a decrease of 596,000 acres and a total acreage of 31,069,000. The condition of winter

In the same period the imports of bulbs, trees and plants were valued at $41,309.

DUTY ON BROCCOLI SEED.

Broccoli seed is not duty free. The Portland Seed Co. protested against the assessment of duty by the collector of customs at the port of Portland, Ore., objecting to the classification of broccoli seed under paragraph 254, tariff act of 1897, as seeds not specially provided for, contending that it was free of duty under paragraph 656, as cauliflower seed. Under date of December 3 General Appraiser Waite ruled as follows:

New Close-Clinging Hardy Climber
AMPELOPSIS LOWII

This beautiful novelty was obtained from seed raised from Ampelopsis Veitchii.

The older leaves in summer are of a dark metallic green, brightening to a fresh apple green toward the extremities, and changing with the season to a warm tint in autumn.

In size the leaves are small, beautifully dentate, and the edges, being prettily crimped, give a very pleasing effect to the eye, when the plant is growing on a wall or rambling over a pillar, column or an old tree stump.

This charming novelty clings closely and, growing as it does, rapidly, speedily covers although the individual growths are so "lacey" in appearance.

of the seed inclosed in a small illustrated envelope similar to the usual package in which garden seed are commonly sent out by dealers. The following printed description appears on the back of the envelope:

Broccoli.—* * * Taller and more hardy than cauliflower, but otherwise very similar to that delicious vegetable. Culture and use are identical with that of cauliflower.

"It is very evident from the above description that these are not cauliflower seed. As broccoli seed are not specially provided for in the tariff act, we hold the collector's assessment to be correct and overrule the protest."

SEED SAMPLES.

At the request of the Secretary of Agriculture the Treasury has directed that until July 1, 1908, two-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover and forage plant seeds be prepared at the earliest practicable date after entry and forwarded to the Seed Laboratory, Department of Agriculture, labeled with names and addresses of consignors and consignees, name of seed and quantity of the consignment. This is the same order that has been issued annually for several years.

RESULTS OF SELECTION.

Notable Examples.

The result of selection is a most interesting subject, of course observed and studied most intensely in the human family, really more in every family of the entire animal kingdom than in the vegetable kingdom, but even in the case of table vegetables there is ample opportunity for most interesting observations.

For a lifetime a grower of esculent vegetables for their seed, the writer has taken great pleasure in studying the history of evolution of present-day table vegetables from their supposed original or primitive condition, and their later intermediate stages up to their present degree of development. Take, for instance, so common and homely a thing as the cabbage. Consider how it has been improved over its salt-water parent, as the writer has observed it, still found growing, but slowly disappearing, on the rocks of the seashore from Norway south to Spain and around the Spanish coast to the Mediterranean side, a plant when wild somewhat resembling a broad-leaved seaweed. It has taken 2,000 years, however, to bring it up to its present conditions and to change it to the many distinct forms of varying merit which it presents, from the cow cabbage of France, sometimes growing ten feet high with stalks six inches in thickness, so woody as to be utilized as fence material and the making of cow pens, to the marrow-like savoy and toothsome cauliflower of the present day, for all come from one source. And why in the next few hundred years should not the improvement be indefinitely extended? Then what will be the outcome?

Corn.

Take the subject of maize, or corn, as reported upon by the early settlers in America as a grain then in everyday cultivation; seeming to be of a fair degree of development and fixity of character. But how it has improved since those early days, and with what surprising variations as to its productiveness!

Though we have no record whatever of what was its productiveness 300 years ago, there has been a constant progression, for in the last 200 years there is recorded a continuous increase in its productiveness. In this short period in the lifetime of the world the yield has been increased 100 per cent, and in nine cases in ten because of natural variations which have been seized upon by observant men. Take, for example, an ear of corn selected from a field where as much as 130 or 140 bushels of shelled grain have been produced to the acre, and put this alongside an ear of pod corn, sometimes termed primitive corn. This pod corn is supposed to be the original form from which all others have been derived, all the result of selection, covering perhaps 2,000 years; and as it takes an observant man, whether civilized or a savage, to pick out and develop good variations, it is evident that the earliest as well as later aborigines were observers of nature to a practical degree.

This primitive pod corn produces a small ear, with grains around the cob in even and uneven rows as in any other corn, but each separate grain enclosed in a small husk similar to a grain of rice. Variations in the earliest pod corn and subsequent variations for the better in the selection of those variations through the centuries, eliminating entirely the husk around each grain, brought the pod corn to be fixed or nearly fixed before America was settled, as the early settlers in this country were very enthusiastic over the maize in the possession of and cultivated by the Indians.

The aborigines cultivated it on a large scale. For example, the brother of Columbus, on a voyage of discovery in 1496, reported in his journal that when ashore he had traveled through eighteen miles of corn on the Isthmus of Panama.

Yet, with all this progress in early times, still greater variations have been made in the later days, particularly in the last fifty or sixty years; for instance, there was the introduction of sugar corn, a form which was not publicly known before 1840. And what a great variety there is in quality of both field and sweet corn, from the gigantic grain of the Chilian corn, with stalks twelve feet high, to the small-grained shoepeg corn or small pop corn! Or what a difference there is between the many sorts of sugar corn, in degrees of size, maturity, rooting habits and contents of saccharine!

Melons.

What a source of regret that the thousands of sports or variations in all families of plants have not been seized upon and perpetuated, as it cannot be doubted that better things have been lost than have ever been captured, lost because overlooked by unobservant eyes!

Take the melons, either water or cantaloupe; what variations they offer, and will ever continue to offer! Livingstone, the African explorer, reported having seen whole districts, miles in extent, literally covered with wild watermelons. The practice of the natives, in the ripening season, was to break the melons with clubs to discover those fruits which were sweet. But the melon is not alone of African origin, as it is on record as an edible fruit from early days in many parts of Asia. But neither Asiatics nor Africans are to be given much credit for its early improvement, they having left that to the more intelligent peoples along the shores of the Mediterranean sea. And what an almost endless variety of melons now exists! There are variations in every form and quality, some from cross-breeding, but in ninety cases in a hundred the result of natural variation. And these same reflections can be made as to the whole list of garden vegetables, all of which have been derived from wild, uninviting forms, so far remote from the present development as to be almost beyond belief as to derivation.

The Tomato.

A still more recent and recognized evolution or improvement in form appears in the tomato. Seed merchants catalogued up to 1840 only half a dozen varieties of what at this present day would be looked upon as almost worthless forms. This evolution of the tomato is the one subject which people of nearly all ages can recall as occurring to some degree during their own experiences. On the other hand, it is estimated that the evolution from original to present development of the sweet potato, maize, or tobacco, took quite 2,000 years.

Of course, to induce either savage or civilized man to improve a plant, there must be shown to him in the plant some valuable qualities, even in its wild state, and successive generations of men must continue to improve successive generations of plants.

But while continuous selection and breeding of these and many other plants have taken possibly 1,000 years, there are other well known vegetables besides the tomato which in less than 200 years, and sometimes only 100 years, have been developed from obscurity to positions of greatest importance. Among these a notable example is that of the beet root, which back as far as a little over 200 years ago was a crude and almost valueless plant, possessing only two and a half per cent of sugar. But now, by process of selection and high breeding, the proportion of sugar has been raised to twenty per cent, and frequently far more, so that the extraction of the sugar from it is the greatest agricultural and milling occupation in France and Germany, an operation furnishing two-thirds of the output of the world's annual production.

The Sweet Potato.

Now, why cannot a similar improvement by selection bring the sweet potato and yam to the front as a sugar producer, in sections of the country where the climatic conditions are not favorable to the development of sugar in the beet? And that implies the entire cotton belt and much of the corn belt.

At present there are two deterrent factors: First, a slight difference in the nature of the component parts of the juice of the sweet potato compared with the juice of the beet root; second, an inherent disposition toward an early decay of the tubers. But as it took 200 years to discover the best agricultural and chemical processes connected with the culture of the beet root and the treatment of the beet juice, it would seem that if the subject of sweet potato selection was pursued for a tenth of the number of years given to the beet, at least as much could be accomplished in the field in changing the physical character of the tuber so as to make it rich in sugar and of a long-keeping habit, and in the factory in the mechanical and chemical treatment of the juice, as has been accomplished in the improvement of the beet root and the treatment of its juice. CALLA, OHIO.

C. R. Bissell, of Cleveland, attorney for the receiver of the Templin Co., says that authority has been given the receiver to continue the business during the coming busy season and until such time as it shall seem to the court to be for the best interests of the creditors to close down the business and sell out the assets. The receiver has been further authorized to publish the usual catalogue for the spring trade and borrow the necessary money or incur indebtedness to the amount of $5,000 for that purpose. The receiver will, therefore, continue the business without any of the difficulties which have heretofore been experienced. As an example of the good work being done by the receiver, he has found that the Youngstown storeroom was not all needed for the purposes of the company, and has accordingly sub-leased a small portion of the space for more than enough to pay the entire rental. This arrangement will probably make this lease worth $3,000 or $4,000 to the creditors, when it becomes advisable to sell it, as it has two years yet to run. In other ways he has cut down expenses, and the business should certainly show a nice profit in the next few months.

VIRGINIA TRUCK GROWERS.

Their New Experiment Station.

Readers of the REVIEW will undoubtedly be interested in the fact that, through the combined efforts of the truck growers in the vicinity of Norfolk, Va., and the State Board of Agriculture, there has been established, just outside of the city of Norfolk, in Princess Anne county, an experiment station devoted exclusively to the interests of truck growing. This station has been placed under the immediate charge of Prof. T. C. Johnson, formerly of Cornell and of the West Virginia University. The station is located upon characteristic trucking soil of the region and embraces some fifty-eight acres, which will be improved and devoted to the cultivation of various truck crops, and the solution of the many problems involved in the fertilization, harvesting, marketing and improvement of such crops. The Southern Produce Co. has set aside $7,500 for the purpose of equipping the tract with suitable buildings for conducting the work. The State Board of Agriculture devotes $5,000 of its funds to the maintenance of the work, and the Department of Agriculture at Washington, and the State Experiment Station at Blacksburg, Va., both coöperate with the above named organizations in carrying on the work.

While no experimental work has yet been inaugurated, the ground is being improved and prepared for the work of actual experimentation. It is hoped that, as the spring opens, areas will be available for extensive fertilizer and variety tests, as well as the beginning of some systematic breeding work with standard vegetables.

This is a notable undertaking in this respect, that it is the first experiment station to be organized in the United States exclusively devoted to the interests of truck growing of any locality.

The organization is to be congratulated in having secured the services of a careful, conservative and well trained man in the person of Professor Johnson, and all possible success is hoped for the undertaking. It is a new field of work and will of course present innumerable problems, a few only of which can be taken up and solved at once. It will be necessary to devote years of careful study and research to this industry, which has sprung up and grown to such gigantic proportions in comparatively few years, for it involves many problems peculiar to itself, which have never been touched upon by the regular experiment station workers of the country. It is fortunate, therefore, that this station has been established in a region so preeminently devoted to trucking as is the territory in the neighborhood of Norfolk and Portsmouth, Va. L. C. Corbett.

ELECTRICITY IN GREENHOUSES.

Have any readers had any experience in the growing of mushrooms by electricity? If so, will they kindly give their experience? L. F. M.

Lettuce, radishes and some other vegetable crops have been forwarded to some extent by the use of electric light and some of the large market growers, such as W. W. Rawson, of Arlington, Mass., have experimented a good deal along these lines. A good many experiments have also been made at Cornell and other agricultural colleges. I am unaware if mushrooms have been included in the investigations. Any advantage to them must come from applying an electric current to the soil, as mushrooms are of a whiter color when grown in the dark. Mr. Rawson has found that some vegetables come to maturity earlier where electricity has been applied to the soil and there would seem to be no good reason why a gentle, steady current in mushroom beds would not bring the crop along earlier.

It is possible experiments may have been made along these lines and I trust any other readers who may have knowledge of such will send a few lines to the Review on the subject. C.

Holly! Holly!

We have personally selected a magnificent lot of well berried holly that is equal, if not superior, to anything ever seen in the Philadelphia market. Price, $4.00 per case; specially selected cases, $5.00 each.

HOLLY WREATHS, very fine, $12.50 per 100; extra heavy and well berried, $15.00 per 100.

WASHINGTON.

Wind, rain and slush have helped to give some of the storemen the blues. We are having the usual lull before the rush. The stores are beginning to put on their holiday attire and the market has already done so. Stock is both good and plentiful. Mums still hold on. Some good Jones and Nonin are to be seen in the windows. Some of the debutante decorations cleaned up a good deal of the surplus stock last week.

American Rose Co. for nearly twenty years, has opened a stand for himself formerly occupied by F. H. Kramer in the Center market.

Alex Garden has added two more stalls to his business.

Wm. F. Gude and George Cook have been to Philadelphia looking after Christmas plants.

J. J. Harty & Co., the new wholesale florists, are offering some fine cut poinsettia. They received a fine lot of holly by boat December 14. As indicating the two facts that there is a need for a wholesale house in Washington and that many in the trade in this vicinity read the REVIEW, and the REVIEW only, Mr. Harty reports that the few lines in this column announcing his start in business brought several mail orders. O. O.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The terrific snow storm which prevailed all over the east, played havoc with things in Buffalo. It arrived in Buffalo the same day as the Christmas number of the REVIEW, Saturday, December 14. The car system was very poor and business was brought to a standstill.

Cut flowers are very scarce, with only a slight demand. Plants are more in demand and will be until after Christmas. Chrysanthemums are still in the market, but very scarce.

Various Notes.

W. A. Adams, our able supervisor, is arousing President Neubeck to call a meeting of the club directly after the holidays for the purpose of taking up the donation question. This will be a good move and, if the affair pans out all right, those who are benefited will see that Mr. Adams succeeds Governor Hughes, should he be nominated for treasurer.

D. Newlands & Co. lost their able foreman last week. He has been very successful at this place and has given up his position with the company to take the Tonawanda greenhouses of Mr. Pult.

Jacob Bailey, lately with the Wm. F. Kasting Co., has ventured into the wholesale business in the old stand of the Kasting business. Mr. Bailey has worked in the business for a number of years, both in the retail and wholesale department. This store will be the third wholesale establishment in Buffalo, although Mr. Netch runs a retail store in connection with his other business.

We failed to report an accident which occurred a week or two ago to one of Mr. Christensen's men while driving to the commission house. The man has a drive of about five miles and, while on his way in, a car struck the wagon and the driver was thrown heavily to the ground. The accident occurred quite early, and it was some time before aid reached him. Word was sent to Kasting's, and it happened that Mr. Schoenhut was at the store with his Mercedes car and they soon found Mr. Weigle, the driver, and rushed him to the doctor's. It was found that his injuries were only slight.

Carson Bros., of Paterson, N. J., have opened a retail flower store on Connecticut street. The location is very good, with plenty of business in other lines, and so the men have a new locality to work in.

Wm. Harrison, an old-time florist and nurseryman, dropped dead last week. He was managing a floral counter in the arcade at the time of his death. The cause of his death is unknown.

Wm. B. Scott has again demonstrated his ability as a fancy pigeon raiser by taking two first prizes at the poultry show held last week. R. A. S.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Current Comment.

Trade remains about the same as usual. There is a good supply of flowers. Prices remain the same: carnations 50 and 60 cents per dozen retail, roses $1.50 per dozen. Violets do not seem to sell readily as yet; $1 to $1.50 per hundred is the general retail price. Some nice Paper White narcissi are coming in. They sell at 50 cents per dozen.

R. H. Woodhouse says he will have some nice tulips for Christmas, also azaleas and primroses.

H. V. Sowle and Wm. Livesey are putting batches of cuttings in the sand. Mr. Sowle will root a large block of White Lawson, this being a great favorite with him.

Mums are about over for this season. Both E. Y. Pierce and R. H. Woodhouse had some grand blooms this year.

E. H. Chamberlain is receiving some nice Winsor carnations.

Some of the department stores are decorating on a large scale, using large quantities of festooning. This does not benefit the florists in a general way, most of the greens being bought from the farmers.

December 14 we had a big snow storm. This will stop the gathering of bouquet green in the woods for a while.

One of our florists is still advertising carnations at 25 cents per dozen, violets 75 cents per hundred, callas $1.50 per dozen, and this a week before Christmas.

H. A. Jahn has been awarded a silver medal by the Newport Horticultural Society for his new white carnation, Lloyd. Mr. Jahn received also a certificate of merit for a white seedling, No. 2, and a pink seedling was much admired and the request made that the latter be exhibited again. W. L.

DAYTON, O.—At the last meeting of the Florists' Club, resolutions were adopted with reference to the death of William Kiefaber, Sr. The resolutions highly commended Mr. Kiefaber's character and expressed deep sympathy with his wife and family in their bereavement.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Ia.; Vice-pres., C. M. Hobbs, Bridgeport, Ind.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 33d annual convention will be held at Milwaukee, June, 1908.

THE Phœnix Nursery Co., Bloomington, Ill., has increased its capital from $200,000 to $300,000.

THE Scotch broom thrives fairly well on Cape Cod, although occasionally in severe winters it gets a set-back.

MOST of the work of the U. S. Department of Agriculture of direct value to nurserymen has been that done on behalf of the fruit growers.

IN spite of the millions of peach pits now planted each year, many nurserymen predict that buyers will find good stock hard to locate next spring.

C. BETSCHER, Canal Dover, O., says the 1907 peony season was the best yet and he says that where hundreds now are sold thousands will be planted a few years hence.

PRIVET is greatly benefited by a coat of manure placed over the roots. This may not only be left there all winter, but the greater portion of what remains in spring may, with benefit to the plants, be left undisturbed.

THE man who has an acre or even less planted in roses in rows not much more than two feet apart, and who puts into practice the advice that it is better to pull soil up to the plants for winter protection than to strew manure or leaves in among them, will, before he is far ahead with the job, realize the puzzling nature of the undertaking.

NORWAY spruce makes a good hedge for all-the-year-round protection of stock in nurseries from high winds. When Norway spruce is used for such a purpose it should not be pruned or headed back until the trees have at least attained the desired height, or they will never attain it, but the trees will live and thrive for an indefinite period in hedge form and after the tops are removed.

WILLOWS are easily grown and of much use, but it is well to plant them but sparingly in any location where trees of finer appearance and of more lasting usefulness will thrive. For planting along the banks of streams, ponds or lakes, willows are peculiarly well adapted. They are also suitable for planting to form screens for the purpose of hiding objectionable features, such as low, squatty buildings or fences.

PROPAGATING PRIVET.

Will you kindly tell us how to set about propagating California privet in the south? S. B. S.

There are two methods practiced in propagating California privet, either of which I should think would work satisfactorily in the south, as well as elsewhere.

When the wood of the season just past has become ripe, it should be cut and then tied up in bundles of 100 or more, first making the cuttings the same length, say from six to eight inches. After that is done and the required number procured, place them in some cool place indoors and cover them with soil or sand, or bury them outdoors in soil. Leave them until about the beginning of March. Then prepare a piece of ground for the reception of the cuttings. After this has been done, stretch a line where the first row is intended to be and with a spade make a trench from three and one-half to four and one-half inches deep, along the line. In the trench thus made place the cuttings, resting them hard against the side, three or four inches apart, or if they are intended to be transplanted in the fall or spring following they will do still closer in the row. Fill in the soil and firm it as the work of putting in the cuttings proceeds. If the soil is loose, the cuttings may be put in by simply sticking them in the soil along the line, but a trench is preferable. The distance between the rows should depend on how the soil is to be cultivated. If by hand and hoe, fourteen inches will be enough; if otherwise, allow space accordingly.

The other method of propagating privet is that of taking the half ripened wood of the same year's growth about the middle of July and, after it has been cut clean by a shears or knife and the extreme tips cut off, insert them in any kind of soil (that which contains a large proportion of leaf-mold preferably) in a somewhat shady place outdoors. Water thoroughly as each batch is put in and keep the leaves moistened frequently and the soil moist until they have made roots. For green wood cuttings shade is essential until the cuttings have calloused. Early in September the newly rooted plants should be transplanted into nursery rows, about five inches apart and fifteen or eighteen inches between the rows. The year following these plants will make fine growth and be marketable by fall. M.

WHITE PINE FROM SEED.

Will you please tell us how to start white pine, as I wish to grow a large number in Rhode Island? W. H.

White pine may be started from seeds sown in a well prepared bed outdoors in spring. The seed should be sown thinly over the even surface of the bed and covered, to a depth not exceeding a quarter of an inch, with leaf-mold and sand. It sometimes happens that the seed of this pine refuses to germinate for nearly a year after sowing, but a remedy for that may be had in taking the precaution of immersing the seed in warm water for nearly a day before sowing. If the seed is sown in a frame outdoors in the early fall whenever it comes out of the cone, immersion in hot water will not be necessary.

Sowing in a frame is advised only because a proper condition of the soil as regards moisture can be best maintained. Neither the seed before germination, nor the young seedlings, should be allowed to become dry in the soil. Neither should the bed they are in be allowed to become soaked with water. This is especially applicable to the seedlings at their earliest stage of growth. The frame should not be covered with glass sashes. A covering made of laths should be used instead. M.

BERBERIS WILSONAE.

Berberis Wilsonæ is a new species from China. It is an elegant low-growing shrub two to four feet high, with slender branches clothed with small leaves disposed in clusters at regular intervals along the growths. The upper surface of the leaf is bright green; the under side white. Subtending each cluster of leaves is a spreading three-forked spine, bright red in color when young. The numerous berries which follow the small yellow flowers are produced on short stalks in clusters of from four to six; they are bright, coral-red where exposed to the light, yellowish on the opposite side, semi-translucent, surmounted by the remains of the stigma, which appears as a slightly raised point. So far as at present observed, says the Gardeners' Chronicle, the fruit is immune from the attacks of birds, and, in consequence, promises to remain on the plant for some time after attaining ripeness and color. In its native country the foliage is said to assume brilliant autumn tints. From its small size, spreading habit, and neat appearance Berberis Wilsonæ is a suitable subject for clothing banks or margins of shrubberies, or, planted in the rock garden, its bright red berries would form a welcome color in the autumn months.

PEAR AND APPLE DISEASES.

"It was pointed out in my last report," says James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture, "how important work had been inaugurated on the Pacific coast with a view to preventing the destruction of the extensive pear orchards, valued at many millions of dollars. Pear blight has been and is devastating these orchards, and the Department, in cooperation with state authorities, has been working to check it. The systematic work undertaken in the matter of eradicating blight from the orchards through winter pruning has led to beneficial results. The progressive orchardists who have carried on the work thoroughly have succeeded in holding the disease in check and in securing a profitable crop of fruit from the treated orchards. In other cases, however, principally as the result of careless treatment or no treatment at all, many orchards have been destroyed. The work will be continued this coming season and every assistance possible given to those orchardists desirous of fighting the disease. As already indicated, the Department has had the hearty coöperation of the state experiment stations and other state authorities, who are fully alive to the importance and necessity of doing all within their power to aid the fruit growers of the respective states in which they are located.

"Another line of work which has been carried on successfully during the last year has had for its object the control of apple diseases in the Ozark Mountain region. This section of the country is developing into a fine fruit region, and the value of the orchards is increasing yearly. Since the orchards have come into bearing, however, various serious diseases have appeared, and the vital question of how best to control these diseases has arisen. Some of the work started last year in Nebraska and localities in Missouri had to be discontinued on account of the destruction of the fruit by cold. In a considerable portion of the Ozark region, however, there was a good crop of fruit not injured by cold, and in these orchards the control of bitter rot, black rot, and the fruit blotch was again practically complete where the methods recommended by the Department were carried out, from ninety-five to ninety-eight per cent being saved in the sprayed orchards. In all this work combination treatments have been made in order to prevent both diseases caused by fungi and injuries produced by insects. In this work the Bureau of Plant Industry is coöperating with the Bureau of Entomology."

ST. PAUL.

The Twin City Florists' and Gardeners' Club was organized in Minneapolis, at the city park greenhouses, Thursday night, December 13. A constitution and by-laws were adopted and the following officers elected: President, Theo. Wirth, Minneapolis; vice-president, O. J. Olson, St. Paul; secretary, S. D. Dysinger, St. Paul; treasurer, R. A. Latham, Minneapolis. Executive committee: E. Nagel and T. Hall, of Minneapolis; E. P. Holm and A. S. Swanson, of St. Paul.

There were thirty-four present, who signed the charter roll, while a number were unavoidably absent. The club will meet monthly, alternately at Holm & Olson's store, St. Paul, and the city greenhouses, Minneapolis. All intending charter members should send in their names at once to the secretary.

Expressions of sympathy are heard on every hand over the untimely death of P. J. Hauswirth. The Twin City florists sent an elegant wreath of orchids, lilies and roses to the funeral.

Trade is good and promises to be a hummer for Christmas. X. Y. Z.

PORTLAND, ORE.

Business Good.

A slight falling off in trade is perceptible, which we hope is only the calm preceding the storm, for we are looking forward to the usual Christmas rush. Surely the florists of this locality cannot complain about the volume of business done so far this season. Prices have held up well, the sale of the large chrysanthemums only showing a reduction in value.

Various Notes.

Some remarkable blooms of Eaton, Appleton, Chadwick and Jeanne Nonin are seen at the store of Clarke Bros., and the craft unanimously admit that this firm is entitled to first honors in these. A bench of the late varieties will be in prime condition for the holidays.

A few hours off duty one afternoon gave us an opportunity to visit some of the greenhouses and it proved a delightful diversion. At the Sibson establishment we found the rose houses producing a new crop for the holidays, and with more sunshine we shall expect to see some grand stock cut here in the next few weeks. One house of sweet peas just coming into bloom will materially help to swell the midwinter receipts.

Calling next on the Tonseth Co., we were joined by Frank Rennison, of the Portland Seed Co.; Albert Pierce, of the Clarke Bros. force, and James Wait, of Walla Walla, Wash. The last named gentleman has successfully conducted a business in Walla Walla for seven years and this is his first visit to Portland. After giving the necessary password we were given the freedom of the place and centered our attention on a fine batch of cyclamens, which will have reached perfection when wanted. A bench of poinsettias and azaleas were also looking promising. The roses are a little off crop, but as large and fine a house of carnations as we ever saw will offset that.

We next made a raid on Rahn & Herbert and there, too, received a most cordial welcome. Miscellaneous stock is grown for the wholesale trade and they report a splendid sale for everything. Several importations have just arrived and every preparation is being made to cater to the wants of the retailer.

Going over to Wm. Martin's place, we held up the foreman, George Spencer, and requested him to show us around this fine establishment. The usual line of potted plants for the holiday trade is much in evidence here and when displayed before the public should sell like hot cakes. And we hope they will.

Mr. Martin's near neighbor, F. A. Van Kirk, owns two good sized houses, one planted with lettuce and the other with Enchantress carnations. The lettuce tasted all right, but the house of carnations is a wonder and cannot be beat.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues beautiful. There is plenty of rain interspersed with warm sunshine, and no frost so far. Stock of all kinds is plentiful and the demand is apparently rather light. Roses and carnations, especially the latter, are being brought into town in large quantities and they are not being used up as well as the retailers could wish. The prices are, on the whole, a shade less than was received for the same quality of stock one year ago.

From what I am able to hear, there will, in all probability, be any quantity of flowers for Christmas and New Year's, unless we have a decided change in the weather or unless there develops an extraordinary demand for stock.

Outside mums are holding on remarkably well, and plenty of good late white and yellow are seen in the windows. Other kinds of outside stock are well out of season, with the exception of violets and narcissi. Of the latter, the Paper White varieties are just commencing to get into form.

Smilax is, for the first time this season, a drug, and all kinds of green stuff move slowly. Red berries take up quite a portion of the trade with all the retailers at this time, and the sale for them is larger than ever this year.

Princess violets have not yet advanced in price, and it is doubtful if they will do so if the weather continues as favorable as it has been for the last few weeks.

The retailers are buying heavily of Christmas goods, and if plenty of business comes our way it will find everyone ready to receive it.

Various Notes.

Domoto Bros. have several houses entirely devoted to the growing of poinsettias this season, and their stock looks remarkably healthy.

James Skinner, of Portland, Ore., has just received four carloads of Christmas trees from Oregon. Mr. Skinner makes a specialty of these trees and handles more of them than any one else on the coast.

C. C. Morse & Co. are receiving large consignments of stock from Europe at present. It consists principally of hardy conifers and young deciduous stock.

Many sidewalk florists have made their appearance in town with the return of the holidays. They handle only the cheapest classes of stock, but they assist materially in keeping a lot of poor goods moving.

Wm. J. Aiken has returned from a two weeks' visit to Los Angeles and San Diego. G.

BEST SELLERS ON THE COAST.

There is but little flowering stock to be seen either among the growers or in the stores for Christmas this year, with the possible exception of poinsettias. There was a time, a few years ago, when there was a good demand for Chinese primulas, Roman hyacinths and cinerarias. This has, to a great extent, changed, so that the principal demand is for something large and extra showy. The poinsettia easily fills the bill and it is being used almost exclusively when it is permissible.

There has been some demand for azaleas in bloom, but there are but few of them to be found and these are apparently very backward this season.

WINONA

The True Pink Carnation for 1908.

A color that attracts attention.
Once seen, always wanted.

Comes nearest to Fiancee, but is a different type flower. Never Bursts—Every Calyx Perfect. Good, shapely, active growth. Blooms early and in quantity. A grand commercial variety. Give it a trial and compare the returns. We have a large stock, clean and healthy. Will guarantee every cutting to be first-class. Order now for early delivery. Price, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000. Larger lots, prices on application. With our additional glass we have more than doubled our stock of Carnation plants, and can fill orders for rooted cuttings to even better satisfaction than in past years.

Pans of primulas, ferns and creeping vines are very pretty and usually sold very well formerly, but this season shows but a few of them in evidence. This is true of all varieties of fern baskets and dishes; the public seems to have tired of them.

About the only bulbous stock shown is cyclamen and valley in pans and pots. The former is always a good seller, provided the specimens are good, and the latter is apparently the only small flowered plant that is popular.

With ferns, the newer varieties of nephrolepis in various sizes are the best sellers. The older kinds are sold to a certain extent, but not in the quantities seen in former years.

In palms, although there is always some inquiry noticed for something different from the ever-present kentia, there is apparently nothing that can take its place for a showy, hardy, cheap ornament, and the sales, although possibly not as heavy as those of last year, are still lively.

A few well grown plants of erica in half a dozen varieties have attracted some attention and have been well bought up. They are rather a new thing for the general public.

Several growers have produced very small sized poinsettias in 4-inch and 5-inch pots, which are very suitable for pans or dishes, and they have become very popular with flower buyers.

Well grown plants of Adiantum gracillimum and A. cuneatum sold well this season. They are old standbys, but always in good demand at Christmas.

Ficus and aspidistras seem also to have been relegated to the background by prospective purchasers, and at the same time there has been a very poor showing of the former this season. Apparently the growers are better satisfied to put in their time along different lines.

ROANOKE, VA.—The greenhouses of E. A. McGehee caught fire recently from a heating pipe, but the fire department responded promptly to the alarm and the flames were extinguished before much damage had been done.

LLOYD

No Gold Brick

but a good, honest, free and ever-blooming clear white carnation. Very easily rooted, very fragrant, excellent keeper and shipper. Size and stem of Enchantress, with the freedom of bloom of McGowen; no cropper—always in bloom. Come and see it and give it a trial. Once grown, you will not grow any other.

Rooted Cuttings, $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Unrooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. 10 per cent discount for cash with order.

The garden committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society recently visited the greenhouses of H. A. Jahn, of New Bedford, to see his carnations. A white seedling which is largely planted and which has been shown at Boston and other shows, was looking fine. It is the most wonderfully prolific white the committee had seen. The flower is large, full and the stem ideal.—Boston News-letter in Nov. 28, 1907, issue of THE FLORISTS' REVIEW.

The seedling referred to by the committee is LLOYD, the most prolific white grown....

CARNATION SARAH HILL, ACTUAL SIZE.

SARAH HILL

The largest free-flowering white carnation ever produced; the form is beautiful and displays the size to the very best advantage; color very pure; texture excellent; stem extra long at all times of the year; a startling novelty, producing flowers with great freedom. Grandest novelty for 1908.

LAWSON-ENCHANTRESS

At last we can give you Enchantress with Lawson color. This is not a sport from Enchantress, but a seedling, but it resembles Enchantress in every respect. Guaranteed to be as we represent it. Everyone who grows Lawson or Enchantress will want to grow this variety. Early delivery as yet.

DENVER.

The Market.

Trade has been fairly good, taken as a whole, and compares favorably with last year. The present week is likely to be a little quiet, as is generally the case just before Christmas, but it promises a good trade for the holidays and may break the record.

There have been no particularly large supplies of stock, but a sufficient cut of almost all kinds. Prices have been steady.

Long Beauties are coming in a little more plentifully and promise to be in fine shape for Christmas. While other roses at the present time are not in the heaviest crop, the quality is fine and there is every reason to think there will be a good supply of splendid stock for the holidays. Red will be scarce, although one or two growers appear to have good crops of Richmond and Liberty. Killarney also looks good and will be a favorite.

Carnations have not been so abundant, but enough to supply all demands, with prices firm, and some retailers have already sent out their Christmas price-lists at $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Chrysanthemums are now down and out, with the exception of a few late ones straggling in. Violets are likely to be in good demand, with no exceptionally heavy receipts, while the prices will be the same as last year, and quality good.

Paper Whites and Romans will be on deck again and up to standard. Good holly is to be had and apparently most of it is well supplied with berries. The rest of the green goods seem as plentiful as in former seasons.

Plants were never better and there will undoubtedly be a good demand at reasonable prices. Poinsettias look fine, especially in pots, while Begonia Gloire de Lorraine are good, but mostly in 5-inch and 6-inch pots. Cyclamen are extra fine; never before have they looked so well and some specimens in 7-inch pots are most excellent.

Some of the large stores are showing these as well as primulas, celestial peppers, Otaheite oranges in fruit, and ardisias. The azaleas also are of fine quality; in fact, the whole plant stock is perhaps better than for some years.

It is putting it mildly to say the Review is the most helpful and most instructive paper I have ever read. When one copy is read I can hardly wait for another.—John Spencer, Decatur, Tex.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans

There is nothing that sells better during the entire winter than small ferns for fern pans. We have a splendid stock of extra strong plants in 2¼-in. pots, in the hardiest and most useful varieties for this purpose. Our stock will be found very strong and very nice. $4.00 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Surplus Bulb Stock

We offer what remaining bulbs we have at bargain prices. The only cheap thing about them is the price. The bulbs are of first-class quality and in perfect condition. Bulbs planted in December, and even as late as January, can be had in fine shape for Easter; and as Easter is late this spring (April 19), they can be planted later than usual. If you have not all the bulbs you want, this is the last opportunity to get them. We offer an exceptionally fine lot of Hyacinths, Tulips, and the choice varieties of Narcissi, at bargain prices. Send for our surplus list.

Winsor Carnations

We have a splendid stock of strong rooted cuttings ready for immediate delivery. In order to get the best results from Winsor, it should be planted early. Now is the time to get gilt-edged stock. We have a splendid lot of cuttings ready for immediate delivery, and can also furnish strong established plants from 2¼-in. pots, fall propagations. Strong rooted cuttings, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000.

WAYSIDE NOTES.

Jacob Schulz, of Louisville, Ky., is busy making cuttings of his White Enchantress, which he claims is the real thing. His stock is looking grand and will produce plenty of cuttings. He has some big orders booked and can handle more.

William Walker, of Louisville, has remodeled and added to his plant.

John G. Bettman & Son, New Albany, Ind., are substituting cement benches for wood. The posts are 4x4, set on stone. They figure that they will be repaired quickly. This makes a neat and lasting job, with no chance for vermin to locate, and is away ahead of old lumber. Messrs. Bettman are doing the work themselves and will add more glass the coming spring.

Anders Rasmussen, of New Albany, says his new rose house gives entire satisfaction. It is 50x250, twenty-two feet to the ridge, and fitted with his patent balance ventilator. This ventilator has been exhibited and received favorably.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co., of Evansville, Ind., was busy with funeral work at the time of my visit. A casket pall of white roses and violets was very effective. The construction was very simple. There was a background of green cheesecloth, on which the smilax and flowers were pinned. It was one of the easiest and quickest pieces I ever saw made. Mr. Blackman, Sr., is quite infirm, but retains a lively interest in the business.

Miss Nellie Goodge, the owner of the Oakhill Greenhouses in Evansville, reports a good plant business at the cemetery. She does much decorating in town.

Julius Niednagel, of Evansville, is ably assisted in the business by his two sons. While he has no store, he disposes of all the stock raised right at the houses.

Geo. Waldbart, of St. Louis, Mo., reports a good sale for the berry globes sent out by Mark Aitken, Springfield, Mass. They are a new thing in this locality.

A. E. Kunderd, of Kendallville, Ind., is a specialist in gladioli. The Indianapolis News of December 14 devoted considerable space to a description of his work and showed a large picture of a seedling grown by him. W.

The trade could not do without it.—F. W. Murdock, Gardner, Mass.

Ballston, Va.—G. E. Anderson has rented the greenhouses formerly owned by Mr. Hess, and is now busy putting in a new boiler, heating plant and water tank. He will plant the houses with a full assortment of spring and bedding plants.

GERANIUMS

NEW VARIETIES.—In New Varieties we make a special offer of one plant each of one hundred varieties, 1905 and 1906 introductions, for $10.00. This is acknowledged to be the finest collection of New Varieties ever offered in this country. Coming as they do from such noted introducers as Bruant, Lemoine, Rozain-Bouchlat and Cannell is indorsement enough that among them will be found represented the highest development of Geraniums at the present time, some of wondrous beauty in solid colors, others of the most exquisite combination of colors that defies successful description, and would make grand acquisitions to any collection, and possess special merit of such sterling qualities that we are satisfied they are destined to become the standards in their several different classes.

STANDARD VARIETIES.—In Standard Varieties we offer an immense stock in prime condition for immediate shipment, in the very best sorts, at from $2.00 to $4.00 per 100. We will send one thousand, fifty each of twenty varieties, our selection, single and double, for $18.50; five hundred for $9.25.

PELARGONIUMS.—In a good assortment, including such sorts as Galatea, Countess of Crew, Purity, Countess of Warwick, Gloriosa, Tommy Dodd, etc. $1.50 per dozen, $6.00 per 100.

DAHLIA ROOTS

We are booking orders for Spring or immediate delivery, whole field clumps at prices ranging from $1.00 per dozen, $5.00 per 100 up. Can still offer over 100 varieties; send for list. We have a few thousand of mixed all colors and classes at $35.00 per 1000.

Lantanas, in 10 good varieties ..... $2.00 per 100
Hardy English Ivy ..... 2.00 per 100
Fuchsias, Black Prince ..... 2.00 per 100
Heliotropes, good assortment ..... 2.00 per 100

Carnations. White Enchantress, Helen Gould, Winsor, and Aristocrat are the acknowledged "profit makers." The supply of rooted cuttings will not equal the demand, so place your orders now for January and later delivery. On all orders placed before Jan. 1, 1908, a discount of 10% will be allowed. Well rooted, strong, healthy cuttings, guaranteed, $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000. Fill your houses with these varieties and "cut dollars." No order too large, nor none too small.
Geo. F. Ekas, Station E, Baltimore, Md.
